Court bars Canadian fishermen from U.S. waters

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States District Court Judge has issued a temporary injunction that forbids Canadian boats from fishing within coastal waters off the Western U.S., and Canada might be forced to take reciprocal action, a Canadian fisheries official said Friday.

U.S. fisheries authorities argued that the order would strain relations between the two countries, which have been operating under an interim agreement while negotiating the terms of a more permanent treaty since the establishment of the 200-mile limit last year.

In Vancouver, Rod Hourston, director of governmental affairs for the federal fisheries ministry confirmed those fears Friday night. Canada could be forced to ban U.S. boats from Canadian waters if "we are turfed off their side," he said.

The ruling will affect Canadian trollers who have been fishing for chinook in U.S. waters since the season opened on May 1, Hourston said. Canadian halibut fishermen off the coast of Alaska, and fisheries on the East coast may also be affected, Hourston said.

U.S. Judge Donald Voorhees issued the temporary injunction Friday, ordering the federal government to stop Canadian vessels from fishing off the West Coast.

Voorhees stayed his order for seven days to allow time for an appeal.

Canadian fishing boats have been allowed to fish within U.S. waters since the early 1970s by reciprocal agreement between the executive branches of both governments, Edward Evans, northwest regional counsel for the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, argued.

An agreement has been drafted between the two governments, Evans said, but has not yet been ratified by Congress.

The suit was brought against the state commerce department and the U.S. state department by the Washington Trollers Association and the Quileute Indian Tribe.

The groups argued that Canadians were violating U.S. statutes by fishing within the 200-mile limit. The statutes could only be overturned, the plaintiffs argued, by congressional action.

The federal government argued that although congressional approval of the treaty was required, the government retained its right to use discretion in enforcing the law, Evans said.

"It ill-behooves the federal government to come in here and enforce treaties, which it has done, and not enforce

S. Africa troops still in Angola, envoy tells UN

Colonist wire services

PRETORIA — South Africa defended Friday its one-day helicopter raid deep into Angola, saying the town it attacked was a headquarters for guerrilla forces harrassing Namibia. Officials here denied Angolan assertions that civilians were killed in the assault.

Angola denounced the raid — said to be the largest into its territory since 1975 — as "racist South African aggression."

At the United Nations Friday, Angola charged in the Security Council that South African troops are still in Angola and are being reinforced.

Angolan ambassador Elisio De Figueiredo told the council, called into session to consider charges by his government of South African aggression, that the claim the troops were withdrawn after a limited action is a myth.

"Reinforcements are still being brought in, even now, and the troops show no sign of withdrawing," Figueireido said. "The bombardment has been extended."

A draft resolution proposing that the council strongly condemn "this latest armed invasion perpetrated by the South African racist regime" was circulated as the council met. The draft, prepared by non-aligned states, also would warn South Africa that the council would have to consider applying sanctions in case of a repetition of the attack on Angola.

South Africa's military high command confirmed that South African troops, flown by helicopters, penetrated 160 miles into Angola to attack the mining town of Cassinga. Lt.-Gen. Jack Dutton, the army's operations chief, said the town was completely occupied by the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) as the headquarters for terrorist operations against Namibia, which is administered by South Africa.

Six South African troops were killed in the attack on Cassinga and in simultaneous raids on other SWAPO camps close to the Angola-Namibia border, the army said. It did not disclose losses inflicted on the guerrillas by the ground attack and bombing raids. The object of the operation, a military communique said, was to discourage further SWAPO operations against Namibia, not to kill people.

The raids achieved surprise, particularly against the SWAPO headquarters personnel at Cassinga, sources said. The attacks began early Thursday morning and most of the troops were back behind the Namibia fortified border 12 hours later. Remaining invaders returned early Friday morning.

Large quantities of SWAPO weapons and ammunition were seized or destroyed. In Cassinga, South African army medics treated women and children in a hospital, apparently family members of SWAPO, the communique said.

Although there have been occasional "hot pursuit" operations by South African troops across the border into Angola during the past year, this was the first deep penetration since

Jaguars pounce on rebels

PARIS (Reuter) — Mauritanian troops pursued Polisario guerrilla survivors Friday after French Jaguar strike planes killed dozens of the guerrillas in a low-level attack with cannon and rockets deep in Mauritania, officials said here.

The guerrillas, in a column of 50 vehicles, were heading across the Sahara Desert for the world's largest open iron ore mining centre at Zouerate, where the workers include over 200 Frenchmen. Mauritania is a former French colony.

French officials said there was only one-sortie by the Jaguars, that no French planes were hit and that Mauritanian ground forces were pursuing the fleeing guerrillas.

At least seven Polisario vehicles were destroyed in the air strike, French officials said.

Between six and 10 Jaguars were sent to the Chad capital of N'Djamena last week. Returning visitors said the fleet was already making a show of strength over the north but had not yet gone into action.

MOMENT THAT REALLY COUNTS

That titan of trivia, Bruce Lowther has struck again.

The genial manager of augmented channel services for Cable 10 observes that today a rare time-date sequence occurs. The numerical order for a minute today is 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8 or 12:34 on May 6, 1978 (12:34, 5-6-78).

The next moment of digital history will occur at 23:45 June 7, 1989.

And if you want to break it down into seconds, mark 12:34:56 July 8, 1990, on your calendar.

15,000 jobless pay for servant's flub

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will ask about 15,000 individuals to pay back nearly $4.3 million in unemployment insurance benefits mistakenly paid to claimants in B.C., Quebec and Nova Scotia, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Friday.

Cullen told John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) in the Commons the overpayment "was not the result of cheating or ripping off."

"It was a mistake, a human error made by an official in my department," he said. The money would be recovered with as little hardship as possible to individuals who were overpaid.

Larry St.-Laurent, head of unemployment insurance operations, said the overpayments totalled about $1.6 million to nearly 6,000 claimants in the Montreal area in December and January; about $1.5 million to about 5,000 claimants in Nova Scotia last April, May, June and September; and about $1.1 million to nearly 4,400 claimants in the Vancouver region last April and May.

St.-Laurent said where individuals showed financial hardship making repayment impossible the government would "write the overpayment off completely."

The error was made by a public servant who granted six extra weeks of benefits to the 15,000 claimants because the regional unemployment rate in their areas was one per cent higher than the national unemployment rate.

Unemployment insurance regulations stipulate that six weeks of extended benefits are not supposed to be granted unless the regional unemployment rate is 1.1 per cent higher than the national rate.

By June 1 all individuals who were overpaid should have received a letter from the government saying so. They will be asked to speak with district unemployment insurance officials who can reduce the repayment if the person had accumulated enough insured earnings before the six-week period to have made them eligible for re-establishing a claim.

St.-Laurent said it would likely be mid-July before all individuals affected made contact with officials and several more weeks before each individual was told exactly how much, if any, was owed back.

Each claimant then has 30

Hydro peace over hurdle with bus pact

The second of three hurdles has been cleared en route to B.C. Hydro industrial peace —but not by much.

"It wasn't really overwhelming," Amalgamated Transit Union spokesman Preston Storey said Friday night after transit bus drivers, mechanics and tradesmen had voted 68 per cent in favor of accepting a new collective agreement with Hydro.

Earlier in the week, gas workers covered by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, accepted a similar agreement by an 88 per cent margin. The third union, the Office and Technical Employees Union, is conducting a ratification vote. Sources say they expect the package will be readily accepted.

The difference in the transit workers' vote and that registered by the gas workers is being attributed to the touchy spareboard issue which affected only the bus drivers.

"I think it would have been higher except for the spareboard thing," said Storey, recording secretary of the ATU's Victoria local.

A portion of the union's members felt it was wrong to give up full control of the spareboard, a system involving the assigning of drivers during peak periods. But ATU officials said it was not a case of turning control over to Hydro. The union, they said, had relinquished only exclusive control and would still have control of policing and other aspects of the system.

The spareboard issue was the springboard to a one-week Hydro strike late in March. The strike came at the height of protracted disputes with the three unions.

The wage settlement for the transit workers involves a 6.18 per cent increase in the first year and four per cent in the final eight months.

The contract is retroactive to last July 30.

Perrault sees fall election

Senator Ray Perrault steered clear of election forecasting Friday but hinted, with a smile, that federal polling day could come in the fall.

Perrault, government leader in the Senate who was in Victoria for discussions with Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf regarding Victoria's Inner Harbor, said the federal government's first duty to Canada was to try to "turn the economy around."

He said "believe it or not, that is the main preoccupation of Ottawa. And there are indications that improvement is taking place and that things will be fairly good in the fall. If coincidentally an election was called at that time, well . . . the spring of '79 would be pretty good, too."

Bawlf said his discussions with Perrault involved the juggling of federal funds and a clearer defining of priorities. "They didn't involve any big changes," Bawlf said. "It was just one of those meetings where we decide what will come next and when the funds can be released."

Bikes hit, man dies

Gerald Arthur Bezanson, 25, of Port Alberni was killed Friday afternoon on Highway 19 when his motorcycle struck an accompanying motorcycle, throwing him into the path of a car about 12 kilometres north of Qualicum Beach.

Bezanson was taken to Nanaimo Regional General Hospital where he died shortly after arrival. His female passenger, Carey Sorenson, 27, of Port Alberni was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital. There were no other injuries.

LONDON FULL UP

LONDON (AP) — London's hotels are full up and the tourist board has appealed to tourists not to travel to the British capital. A board official said Friday the unusual situation has been caused by a business conference, forthcoming sports events and the Ascension Day holiday in Europe. The board said visitors should try to find hotel rooms on the south coast.

Carter steering clear of Quebec

SPOKANE, Wash. (Reuter) — President Carter refused on Friday to become involved in the controversy over the secessionist movement in Quebec.

Carter maintained his neutrality when asked by a Spokane citizen at a town meeting if the U.S. would consider granting statehood to other Canadian provinces if Quebec broke away.

Amidst laughter and applause, he said he always made it a practice to avoid answering at least one question—and that was the question Friday.

"I'll let the Canadian people decide about the future of their great country," he said.

"When they make a decision, I'll abide by it."

Coup threat triggers power play

VICTORIA, Seychelles (Reuter) — The Seychelles government assumed emergency powers Friday, saying 21 persons suspected of involvement in a plot to seize power were being held under the new laws.

The laws give the president of the Indian Ocean republic the power to detain without trial anyone he considered behaving in a manner "prejudicial to public safety".

They also also give him the right to impose censorship on the media.

Police announced Tuesday the arrest of 21 persons, including several women, who they said planned to launch a coup against the left-wing government of President Albert Rene during his current visit to China and North Korea.

Breakfast from Tiffany's—for $125

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tired of the same old snap, crackle and pop at breakfast?

Now there's "Breakfast from Tiffany's," the breakfast delivery service that will bring everything from Dom Perignon and caviar, to beer and fresh bagels to your bedside.

For a mere $125, you can sip either Tattinger Blanc de Blanc or Dom Perignon and nibble on Beluga caviar, toasted bits of French bread, strawberries Parisienne or Black Forest cake.

Wish you were on the Champs Elysee? Voila! Breakfast from Tiffany's delivers a fifth of French champagne, red salmon caviar or Canadian Nova Scotia salmon, toasted bits of French bread and fresh bagels and cream cheese — all for $50.

If you travel by the American Plan, you can substitute American champagne and skip the French bread for a $26 breakfast of Canadian Nova Scotia salmon and fresh bagels.

New Yorker Bonnie Schachter said she was inspired to found Breakfast from Tiffany's by the movie — not the jewelry store so she says there'll be no 14-carat diamonds delivered.

"We're out to prove romance is alive and flourishing," she said. All orders are accompanied by fresh-cut roses, served on French lace.

Then there's the the $21 "Bunker Plan."

It comes with a six-pack of beer, belly lox, fresh bagels and cream cheese.

Vorster lauds army

South African troops supported one of the factions in Angola's civil war in 1975.

That Thursday's co-ordinated strike was an escalation of the current South African troop operations against SWAPO was indicated by the fact that the raid was announced by the minister of defence, Pieter Botha, late Thursday night.

South African Prime Minister John Vorster added his stamp of approval by sending "thanks and appreciation" to the troops who took part. In addition to South African regulars, the raiders included black troop units from Namibia, the communique said.

The timing of the deep raid was admittedly sensitive, the army statement said, since it came when the UN Security Council is involved in trying to achieve independence for Namibia, which has been under a League of nations trusteeship administered by South Africa since 1920.

South Africa has agreed to a proposal by five Western members of the Security Council for free elections to determine the future government of Namibia. SWAPO has not.

The raids were carried out, South African officials said, to discourage increasing SWAPO terrorism in Namibia.

Newsmen were shown a few of the documents reported captured in the raid on Cassinga. Typewritten in English, they contained the SWAPO letterhead and were signed by SWAPO commanders.

One dealt with truck repairs and refueling stops on the way to the Angola-Namibia border. Another indicated that SWAPO is being assisted by the ruling party in Angola, which still has a lingering civil war on its hands against the UNITA (Union for the Total Independence of Angola) faction. UNITA still controls some of the southern Angola area adjacent to the Namibian border.

statutes," Voorhees said in his decision Friday.

Hourston said that the countries have in the past permitted each other's boats to fish three miles inside the old 12-mile limit in the past, but with the coming of the 200-mile limit last year the countries had to work a new agreement. The best they could do was an interim agreement to cover 1977, and when negotiations failed to produce something more permanent when that agreement expired December 31, fisheries officials agreed to continue the terms of the interim agreement, with a few changes, including one which gave Canadian fisherman more fishing area on the American side, for a bit longer.

The problem is that this extension of the interim agreement the 200-mile limit has not been approved by Congress, Hourston said. Canada has more flexibility, since such agreements can be initialed by a minister without requiring parliamentary approval.

Canadian officials have been aware of the court case, and have been waiting for the decision, Hourston said. The issue of international boundaries involves more than just fisheries, he noted—offshore mineral and oil reserves are also part of the formula.

If ratified, the Canadians could fish the Washington coast down to Copalis Beach—about 100 kilometres north of the Oregon border—if the Canadian government cordoned off an area south of Vancouver Island and did not fish it.

Farmer freed after 12 hours

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — An apple farmer held hostage at his home for 12 hours Friday was released unharmed by his four captors just before sundown, said authorities.

Chelan County sheriff's deputies said no shots were fired and the four surrendered.

Two dozen armed officers had surrounded the two-story home.

Authorities said three of the four had burst into the home of Rod Keller, and took Keller, 32, and his 31-year-old wife, Shirley, hostage at their home about 145 kilometres east of Seattle.

Deputies said the three were armed with a rifle and two pistols. Mrs. Keller was released to deliver a message demanding that Bonnie Spaulding, 22, of Fresno, Calif., be released from jail.

Spaulding was taken to the house by police. It was not known under what authority the woman was removed from jail, or how she was allowed to enter the house.

Police said Spaulding was arrested Thursday night by officers after a stolen van was recovered. Spaulding was jailed on charges of possessing stolen property, a concealed weapon and marijuana.

Dan Vargus, 22, owner of the van, told police that he was in a Seattle tavern Thursday when he was called to meet a woman who said she had dented his van in the parking lot. Vargus said he accompanied the woman to the lot where he was confronted with three more people —two men and a woman—who were armed.

He said they told him to hand over the keys to the van. He complied, he said, and then was forced inside.

Vargus said he escaped when the two women and one of the men got out of the van at a Seattle motel. He said he diverted the attention of the other man and ran.

days to appeal the decision and if no appeal or payment is forthcoming, the government will contact them again to get the money or make an arrangement for long-term repayment.

The repayments will range from as little as a few dollars up to $750 and arrangments as low as $5-a-week for repayment are available to hard-pressed individuals. An example of a case where the government will write off the overpayment is a person living on an old age pension who has already shown financial hardship through a government means test.

Cullen said the public servant who made the mistake would not be penalized or disciplined because it was a human error.

St.-Laurent said an internal audit system in place should prevent repitition of the error. And a check through records dating back to 1972, when the extended benefit system began, shows such an error was not made previously.

Headline: 'We are carrying out the sentence against Moro.' —AP

Latest notes on Moro vague, Italians wonder: Is he alive?

ROME (AP) — Four identical messages claiming to come from the Red Brigades said Friday the terrorists were "carrying out" the death sentence against kidnapped former premier Aldo Moro because the government has refused to bargain with them for his life.

But the latest message was vague on whether the 61-year-old Moro had been killed.

Italian Justice Minister Paolo Bonifacio said he regarded the statement as authentic but speculated it might only be a ploy by the terrorists to heighten tension in the country. "However, everything is possible," he added.

The method of simultaneous release in four cities and the kind of typewriter used were the same as for previous Red Brigade messages judged genuine.

"We conclude the battle which began March 16 by carrying out the verdict to which Aldo Moro has been sentenced," the statement said.

Moro, president of Italy's ruling Christian Democrat party, was kidnapped March 16 by a dozen terrorists who killed his five bodyguards, and the terrorists later said a "people's trial" had sentenced him to death.

The latest statement, carrying Friday's date, did not use the past tense—to say Moro had been already been killed. It was in the present tense, opening the way to different interpretations.

A purported terrorist announcement April 18 of Moro's "execution" later was disowned by the Red Brigades, who then made public a photograph showing him alive. That message said the body had been dumped in a mountain lake, but a massive search of the area by authorities proved fruitless.

The latest message, bearing the Red Brigades' circled, five-pointed star emblem, said the Marxist revolutionary guerrillas had given the ruling Christian Democrat party "a possibility, the only one practicable . . . for the freeing of Aldo Moro"—to release 13 jailed terrorists.

"In these 51 days the reply of the Christian Democrats, and its government, and the accomplices which support it has arrived in all clarity," the message said. It said the government's refusal to negotiate made it necessary to carry out the "sentence".

The death message came only a few hours after a National Security Council meeting in which the Christian Democrat government rejected a Socialist proposal to free some minor, non-terrorist criminals from Italian jails to induce his captors to release Moro.

Friday's terrorist message denounced the Socialist proposal as a "smokescreen . . . because they exclude the freedom of our 13 imprisoned comrades."

The Christian Democrats said earlier this week they would consider "generosity and clemency" for some non-terrorist prisoners, but only if Moro were released and urban terrorism subsided.

If authentic, the latest statement broke a 12-day silence from the kidnappers. The message hit an anxious Italy like a bombshell.

Premier Giulio Andreotti was presiding over a meeting of his economic experts when he learned of the message. He called off the meeting and went to his private office in Palazzo Chigi.

The Moro family made no immediate comment.

London Times staffs get wildcat warning

LONDON (AP) — Times Newspapers Ltd. has told printers unions it will shut down The Times and The Sunday Times within two months if wildcat strikes continue, a company spokesman said today.

He reported labor disputes in the printing plant cost the two newspapers a total of eight million copies—20 per cent of their output—in the first three months of this year and $3.64 million in profits.

Company sources said management wants new agreements by November, covering dispute procedures, wages, technology and staffing.

Unions are concerned new machines will displace scores of workers, the sources said.

The Times sells around 300,000 copies a day. The Sunday Times has a weekly circulation of 1.4 million.

CARTER SCORES DOCTORS

SPOKANE, Wash. (CP) — President Carter followed up his criticism of U.S. lawyers with a stinging attack Friday on the U.S. medical profession.

The president, concluding a three-day tour of Western states, said doctors as well as lawyers were primarily concerned with themselves and not with the welfare of their clients.

He criticized the powerful American Medical Association for its lobbying activities and said it was important for him and other political leaders to voice their concern.

Carter was speaking to reporters at an informal news conference less than 24 hours after he said the U.S. had a legal system that sent poor people to prison and favored the rich and powerful, including white-collar criminals and big-shot crooks.

The president has frequently complained about soaring medical costs which are increasing twice as fast as the annual inflation rate of about six per cent.

"There is no doubt in my mind that lawyers care genuinely about their clients, but quite often when they organize . . . a bar association is primarily concerned about the welfare of lawyers and not the welfare of clients," he said.

"And the same thing applies to other people like medical doctors. . . when they organize into the American Medical Association their responsibility is to the welfare of doctors."

He added that when he was governor of Georgia, his concern about the doctors was "even more vivid" than his concern about lawyers.

In a speech Thursday in Los Angeles, the president said the U.S. had 21 times more lawyers than Japan had "but I am not sure we have more justice."

At a news conference Thursday in Portland, Ore., the president said he believed the public's judgment of his performance would improve from its current low point when his policies are understood more completely.

Botswana's chief roasts his allies

GABORONE (AP) — President Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana, in an unusual attack by a black leader against Rhodesia's black guerrillas, said Friday their commitment to "some distant victory on the battlefield" might cost them a role in an independent government.

He accused Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrillas, of taking an uncompromising stance toward a political settlement.

Botswana borders Rhodesia on the west. Patriotic Front guerrillas operate from bases in Botswana, Zambia and Mozambique.

Khama, in a speech at his party's conference in Serowe, also condemned the internal settlement signed March 3 by Rhodesia's white prime minister, Ian Smith, and three black nationalist leaders—Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and chief Jeremiah Chirau. The four men form an executive council and have said they would bring black majority rule to Rhodesia by the end of the year.

"The parties to the internal settlement must know that a settlement which does not end the war and cannot lift (United Nations) sanctions is not worth the paper it is written on," Khama said.

In his comments about the guerrillas, Khama said:

"We appreciate that it is the Patriotic Front's efforts that compelled Smith to start talking about majority rule in the country, but we believe the people of Zimbabwe have the right to decide their own future." Zimbabwe is the black nationalist name for Rhodesia.

Khama appealed to Rhodesian black leaders both inside and outside the country to attend an all-party constitutional conference proposed Thursday by Britain.

British Foreign Secretary David Owen announced Thursday in London that Britain and the U.S. would initiate a new move for a peaceful settlement in Rhodesia and warned of the terrifying risks of failure.

In Salisbury, Rhodesia, P. K. Van der Byl, white co-minister of foreign affairs, said Britain's bid to revive the Anglo-American peace plan was an attempt to divert attention from its "inescapable choice" of supporting the internal settlement or the Patriotic Front.

Botswana is listed with Tanzania, Zambia, Angola, and Mozambique as a front-line state in the Rhodesian struggle.

However, it is highly dependent economically on both Rhodesia and white-governed South Africa. Khama has steered a delicate course, letting black guerrillas use his land for raids against Rhodesia while permitting Rhodesian trains to travel through Botswana to South Africa.

Mistrial called in baby's death

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A mistrial was declared Friday in the baby murder trial of Dr. William Waddill after a jury reported that it was deadlocked 7-to-5, with the majority favoring acquittal.

Orange County Superior Court Judge James Turner declared the mistrial about two hours after the jury first reported it could not reach a decision.

The jury was sent back to think it over, took a seventh ballot and came up with the 7-to-5 division. The jury was divided 9-to-3 on the sixth ballot.

The jury had deliberated 11 days after a 14-week trial which drew the attention of anti-abortion activists across the United States.

Waddill, 42, an obstetrician, was accused of strangling an infant girl shortly after she survived a saline abortion.

Waddill, who testified in his own defence, said the baby was dying by the time he saw it at the hospital, and that death came from natural causes.

Waddill and his wife, Janet, appeared dejected. When she first heard of the deadlock, Mrs. Waddill wept.

Waddill told The Associated Press that he hopes he would have a second trial because "I'm going to clear my name one way or the other in this case."

The prosecutor, Robert Chatterton, declined to say whether the district attorney's office would prosecute Waddill again.

Oil chiefs urged to chuck dollar

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (CP) — United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mana Al-Oteiba said Friday he would urge the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to drop the U.S. dollar as the sole basis for oil prices.

Instead, he said, prices should be fixed by a formula reflecting various major currencies and the price of gold.

The suggestion would protect the earnings of oil exporters from further declines in the value of the dollar and might raise the world price of oil to counter the effect of the dollar's decline.

Oteiba told interviewers he did not expect any firm decision on the proposal from OPEC oil ministers who start an informal meeting here today.

But hoped the ministers would approve of his suggestion. Other ministers, while applauding the idea of using a "basket" of gold and currencies, generally rejected the scheme as too complicated.

The formula would mean an increase in the dollar price of oil whenever the U.S. currency fell in relation to a currency basket.

Rescue spending more puzzling

LAST MONTH Victoria MP Allan McKinnon drew some interesting numbers from Defence Minister Barney Danson dealing with marine search and rescue spending on Canada's east and west coasts.

The defence department spent almost twice as much ($3.5 million compared to $1.9 million) searching and rescuing along the country's east coast as it did on the west coast.

Are the down-easters that much more numerous or careless, we asked?

Pursuing the subject, McKinnon has now extracted some more figures from the government which make this imbalance in spending even more puzzling.

Comparing estimates of marine craft on each coast, we learn there are 400 commercial vessels here compared to 250 down there, 6,500 fishing vessels here compared to 43,000 down there — and 200,000 pleasure craft here, in contrast to 8,000 there.

In aircraft numbers, the estimates are 3,795 here and 1,525 there.

Comparing coastlines, we are advised the defence department's Victoria region for search and rescue covers all of British Columbia, the Northwest Territories west of the MacKenzie River and a chunk of the Pacific Ocean, for a total of 1 million square miles, including 1,600 miles of coastline.

The Halifax region, by contrast, totals about 1.85 million square miles and includes all the Maritime provinces, Sable Island, Labrador, the eastern part of Quebec and half of Baffin Island, including all told, about 23,000 miles of coastline.

Now looking at the defence department and coast guard facilities and staffing on each coast, we are told Comox has three Buffalo aircraft and three helicopters, with staff of 145, while Halifax region has three Buffaloes and six helicopters, with staff of 220.

The coast guard in the Victoria region has two hovercraft, three cutters, two crash boats, three life boats, one launch, six inshore rescue boats and personnel numbering 154.

Opposite numbers for the Halifax region are three cutters, 11 life boats, two launchs, one inshore rescue boat and staff numbering 181.

The Halifax region is almost twice as big and has about 37,000 more fish boats. But the subject is search and rescue — so the most impressive comparison to us is: 200,000 pleasure craft on our coast against 8,000 on the east coast.

McKinnon notes the most significant numbers missing among all these figures are the current numbers of search and rescue "incidents." Back in 1975, there were 2,011 on the west coast and 675 on the east coast.

There are the numbers from the government. They only underline the basic question: how is it that the defence ministry spent twice as much in search and rescue last year on the east coast?

In us they trust

NOTHING IS COLDER than a banker's heart — so it is heart-warming to see how willing bankers are to lend Canada money.

After all those dismal news stories about our shrinking dollar and sundry other economic troubles, Canadians could be forgiven for thinking the country is on the edge of financial ruin.

Yet Canada has just gone to the moneylenders again, this time for a $3 billion international borrowing arrangement, and the American bankers couldn't hand it to us fast enough.

The latest loan arrangements were oversubscribed within a couple of days, says the president of the New York-based Bankers Trust Co.

There must be hope for us, if not here, south of the border.

"You think you're too good for this job, don't you? Just because you've got your Ph.D. and most of us here only have our B.A.s!"

Canadian politics: how others see us

TORONTO — We are so used to rhetoric about the chicanery and evils of one level of government or another, it all seems very normal and ho-hum when accusations are made about the deceit, dishonesty, incompetence, impropriety, irresponsibility of the federal government.

It is a bit different when foreigners make such observations — especially in print. But you sometimes see yourself and your country in better perspective when an outsider passes judgment.

Such an assessment was forthcoming from a rather unexpected source recently. In an edition of a weekly magazine called "To the Point International" there was a run-down of Canada. It is an unusual publication in which to find Canadian material, since this magazine has head offices in Belgium and specializes in coverage of Third World events.

It is a sensible magazine, and doesn't gloss over unpleasantness. It doesn't like Communists, and it seems to think African problems are primarily for Africans to solve. It doesn't go for apartheid, but neither does it approve of terrorism or black oppression of blacks. Nor does it like Cuban mercenaries.

Because of its moderation, some may view it as soft on whites in Africa. The magazine favors the black moderate faction in Rhodesia — something most Rhodesian blacks also support, but white liberals in the West oppose.

The following article on Canada was a bit startling. Here is what subscribers of Point International can read about us, under the title. "Trudeau Facing Biggest Crisis:"

Canada has the dubious distinction of having what is probably the West's most corrupt and scandal-ridden government. It came with the resignation of Solicitor General Francis Fox after Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau threatened to fire him for his involvement in an abortion scandal.

Fox, it is alleged, had forged a husband's signature to get his pregnant married girlfriend a therapeutic abortion but details were leaked to Trudeau who promptly took the drastic action of dropping Fox from his cabinet since yet another cover-up would have destroyed what is left of the government's integrity.

On the other hand, "Trudeaulogists" are wondering if the affair was a convenient put-up job to remove Fox from unceasing grilling in the House of Commons over his mishandling and mis-statements involving the solicitor general's portfolio. After all, they point out, the alleged forgery occurred three years ago.

Fox's departure from the cabinet comes in the wake of seemingly endless indiscretions by key figures close to Trudeau. Some allegations:

● Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer wangled his mistress, a 26-year-old divorcee, a first-class ticket on Air Canada for a five-day vacation in Mexico.

● Transport Minister Otto Lang ran up $750,000 for airline trips over three years and used a military plane for transporting his children's Scottish nanny.

● Senator Louis Giguere (allegedly) used inside government information to make a quick $95,000 profit in a stock deal.

He also allegedly had his fingers in the Liberal party's till.

● Former Environment Minister Jean Marchand was convicted for leaving the scene of an accident. He was banned from driving for a year but had the sentence lifted five months later, after then Solicitor General Allmand admitted he had contacted the national Parole Board chairman for "information" about Marchand's case.

● Former Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet convicted of contempt of court. Several cabinet ministers then improperly contacted the judge to influence the decision.

● Former minister of state C. M. Drury resigned after admitting he tried to alter the course of justice.

● Cabinet Secretary Michael Pitfield improperly took a $1,000 government subsidy for his $180,000 house. He later returned the money after Trudeau announced that his close friend had "acted in good faith."

With a nose-diving economy taking precedence over restless Quebec and Francis Fox, the realm's highest law enforcer admitting a hidden forgery, Trudeau faces his biggest political crisis. Virtually all Canadian magazines and newspapers, regardless of political stripe, concede that at this point the rabbit-like Tory leader Joe Clark could win an election despite himself. Since Canada must have an election within the next year, Trudeau's strategists blanch at the thought.

All Canadians will see the short-cuts and over-simplifications. But the message gets through and the general thrust is fair enough. It makes one feel proud to be a Canadian, eh!

When the bomb goes bang there's a matter of money

By MARK O'NEILL
The London Observer

BELFAST — Freelance insurance investigators often beat police and firemen to the scene of explosions in Northern Ireland.

There are rich pickings for these men — known as loss assessors — in the $100-a-minute compensation paid out by the British government to the victims of terrorism.

After an incident, the government and the owners of damaged property each appoint assessors to work out the damage.

Most of the freelancers are honest and assessment is straightforward with large companies that keep detailed records.

But small businesses leave room for fabrication. To bump up his client's claim, one assessor invented a company complete with bogus trading records.

Since the troubles began nine years ago, more than $500 million has been paid out for property and personal compensation — $330 for every man, woman and child in the province.

A system of public compensation has existed in Ireland since the arrival of the English in the 12th Century. Insurance companies in Ireland have long excluded "riot and civil unrest" from their policies as a matter of routine.

Property claims take the bulk of the money. Owners can recover the cost of repairs or the value. For example, the Daily Mirror, a British daily newspaper, received nearly $2 million after the bombing of one of the most modern printing presses in Europe. They decided not to rebuild and seven years later the empty shell is still there.

The largest single payment was $5.5 million to Belfast's largest department store, the Co-op, after an enormous bomb and fire in 1972. Three days before it was due to re-open, another bomb went off. But damage was slight and the re-opening was delayed for only three weeks.

It is in the interest of government and owners to agree, since a court action means money and delays that can double building costs within two years. As it is, the average waiting time for a claim to be settled is 68 weeks.

The financial director of Stewarts, which owns 23 supermarkets and has had 80 claims totalling $3 million, told me that his company's policy is to re-open as soon as possible, to keep the customers, and to start rebuilding at once.

"Government money comes quicker when they see evidence of rebuilding. At present building prices, it does not pay to wait. We're lucky in being a big company, so we never have a cash-flow problem. But the delay is much harder on the small man, who has to borrow to survive," he says.

Compensation for personal injuries extends from the $1,000 given to two men for the "shock" of removing the body of their mutilated brother, to the $175,000 awarded a 22-year-old policeman left blind and deaf by a bomb.

There have been abuses, usually from people who claim shock from explosions, something hard to disprove. This has led to a new law which says that claims must be above $2,000 or they won't be considered.

And you are disqualified if you are judged to have contributed to the injury. The brother of a prominent Provisional IRA man received $38,000 after being shot on his rounds as a milkman. But he lost it after the government appealed the award, as it was judged his activities had contributed to the shooting which was part of an internal IRA feud.

Words and music

From the Globe and Mail

Although Hal Becker of Louisiana won't say exactly where, he is currently conducting experiments on the effects of "embedding" messages in institutional, programmed music to dissuade shoppers from theft. The messages will not be perceived consciously, but a saint-like voice (by Charlton Heston out of Lloyd Robertson, we imagine) will spirit itself into the subliminal awareness of shoppers, reminding them that, "I am honest," and imploring them not to steal.

These messages, while they may not make people holy, will, according to Mr. Becker, provide "honesty reinforcement" and "theft deterrence". Consider the numbing possibilities of allowing Muzak (the modern substitute for brain waves) to play second harp in the heavenly chorus.

Once shoppers have been successfully dissuaded from shoplifting, store owners could begin suggesting that they "Buy, buy, buy". If the anthem is played before a hockey game, Lucifer could be given a turn at the mike and exhort players to "Kill, kill, kill". As if they needed encouragement.

The trouble with America it's waiting for a cause

WASHINGTON — Something is wrong with the American people. Just about everyone from President Carter on down recognizes the phenomenon although phrasing it in sometimes different terms.

Mr. Carter called it "a preoccupation with self." Others have spoken of the fragmentation of American society. Columnist Meg Greenfield, writing in Newsweek magazine, says it's "almost as if we had developed — all of us — a looter's mentality in the presence of the shattered storefronts of so many administrations' economic policies."

It seems to me that the explanation is clear, and I am not too worried about it because I think it is a temporary condition which in time will cure itself. But meanwhile, it is bound to cause Mr. Carter a great deal of trouble and even anguish. it might indeed doom him to an ineffective presidency.

The trouble is that the American people have run out of visions and causes. They are emotionally exhausted. They are not ready for some new great crusade. They are not in a mood to be roused to high sacrifice.

There have been such periods in American history before but perhaps not one quite like this when it is particularly difficult to see ahead to some new cause which will once more rouse and unite the American people.

The early settlers were driven by visions of new freedoms and new opportunities. Their heirs were fired by the cause of independence.

Once the romance of the Revolution was over they had to set up a new government and make it work. Then came the challenge of the frontier, and the terrible fight over the question of union or secession.

After the Civil War, "the winning of the West" kept the country going until it was galvanized to a wider cause by Woodrow Wilson's crusade "to make the world safe for democracy."

Then there was a brief dead spot in American history between disillusionment over the punitive peace of Versailles and the regalvanizing of American purpose in the Second World War.

The days of Harding and Coolidge were somewhat like these times in that the high vision of a better world which drew some three million American boys to Europe in 1917 and 1918 ended in bitterness and cynicism. Instead of getting a world full of democracies after the First World War, Americans soon found themselves in a world threatened by new tyrannies.

That in itself became the new cause. And after Hitler himself had been overthrown there was still the fear of rampant communism. Americans united to save "the Free World from a perceived danger. In the meantime they tried to build themselves a new and better and more equitable society at home.

But the overseas effort ended in the morass of Vietnam and the home effort lost momentum in the excesses and the skyrocketing costs of the welfare state.

The end of it is that, at the present moment, the American people are indeed trying to live for bread, and selfish benefits, alone. There is no fresh vision. There is only disillusionment with the results of past visions which were pursued sometimes extravagantly and not attained.

No people has ever striven harder for so many high causes over such protracted time. It has been a monumental effort and it has many accomplishments to its credit.

But its leaders made mistakes. They asked more than the people could sustain in Vietnam. And they fell into the habit of meeting mounting demands from group interests by printing-press money rather than by prudent rationing of resources.

The American people have been spending more than they have been earning, both at home and abroad, for some 12 years.

It is not fair to accuse Mr. Carter of failing to provide the new visions which could regalvanize a national mood of willingness to sacrifice personal advantage to the general good. There simply is no new vision on the horizon right now.

The great presidents of the past did not generate the visions. They grasped them and led the people toward what the people wanted. I do not believe that a Washington, Lincoln, or Roosevelt (not one of them) could have fashioned a new vision for the American people out of today's conditions.

The building materials for tomorrow's visions are not yet in hand.

The highest visible cause at the moment in America is to stabilize the economy and save the dollar. It is a good cause, but not the kind of cause which justifies crusades.

It is just an ordinary, everyday type of good housekeeping cause. It needs doing, but who is going to sacrifice greatly for it? So far — not many have volunteered.

Mr. Carter has a tougher time than those presidents fortunate enough to come to office when there was already a visible high cause to be served.

The world's first adhesive-backed postage stamps, the "penny blacks," went on sale in England 138 years ago today — in 1840.

The penny black and the two-penny blue stamp, both bearing a portrait of Queen Victoria, were an immediate success and printers worked night and day to keep supplies available.

The use of adhesive stamps spread and in 1843 Brazil became the second government to issue them.

Trident blast starts with Kitsap county's rural lifestyle

By BRAD KNICKERBOCKER
Colonist-Monitor News Service

KITSAP COUNTY, WASH. — Tucked away in the northwest corner of the United States is a chunk of landscape that might have been torn from the coasts of Scandinavia.

An hour by ferry across Puget Sound from Seattle, Kitsap county looks west over the fjordlike Hood Canal to the snowy Olympic Mountains. People here say their orchards and pine forests are the cleanest in the country, and the visitor is hard put to dispute them.

BUT BIG changes are in store for Kitsap county as the U.S. navy works to complete what will be one of the world's greatest concentrations of nuclear military might. And the question that remains is: How will it affect this area's populace and natural environment?

On 8,200 acres along the Hood Canal the navy is building the first base for the next generation of strategic missile-carrying nuclear submarines. The "Trident system" is designed to pack a bigger punch over longer distances than current U.S. systems, with less chance of being knocked out first by Soviet missiles.

THE NEW 560-foot subs will carry 24 missiles (compared with 16 missiles carried by today's Polaris/Poseideon-equipped submarines) and extend the multiple warhead range from 2,500 miles to 4,000 miles — even farther with a reduced payload. Trident subs will be quieter, faster, and able to stay at sea longer than their predecessors. Their increased range expands by at least 10 times the ocean area from which American subs can hit a target.

Another set of figures fills out the Trident story in terms of the project's impact on the surrounding community.

BY 1985 when the new sub base is fully operational, Trident will have brought more than 25,000 additional people to Kitsap county. This means that the county's population is expected to grow by 37 per cent in a decade.

As a result of more new construction jobs, unemployment here has dropped from seven per cent a year ago to less than five per cent today.

But rents, which used to be less than half as expensive as those in Seattle, now have outstripped that city's rates, shooting up some 175 per cent over the past seven years.

"TRIDENT brings an economic benefit, nobody's going to argue that," says Peter Crane, the county government official in charge of co-ordinating local growth resulting from the project. "But if you're elderly or on a fixed income, Trident can be a disaster."

And for people like Clyde Caldart, mayor of Poulsbo, construction of the submarine base is "putting a lot of things to the test."

Poulsbo is a predominantly Norwegian community of some 2,500 that is expected to double in size by the time the Trident base is finished. The local police force already has grown from one officer with a nightstick a few years ago to a force of eight psychologically screened officers today.

THE TOWN planning council that used to meet once a month now meets twice monthly and often conducts special meetings and weekend inspections of new construction projects.

The number of town employees has tripled (from 10 to 29), and a "grants co-ordinator fiscal analyst" has been hired to see that Poulsbo gets its share of federal funds designated to minimize the impact of the sub base on local services.

WITH congressional representation of considerable prestige, like Senators Warren G. Magnuson and Henry M. Jackson, in Washington, Kitsap county is getting millions of dollars in special aid for the roads, sewers, schools, and other facilities that will be needed as a result of the population boom. The county is abustle with public works construction projects, such as the new Clear Creek elementary school next to the Trident base and divided freeways to replace the two-lane country roads that now bottleneck base traffic at rush hours.

But discussing Trident's impact over a lunch of pea soup and a ham sandwich, Caldart says the project is costing his community more than it is getting from the federal government.

FEDERAL funds are available for capital expenditures, but not for operating costs, says Crane. Federal property is tax exempt, he explains, and Washington state law prevents local communities from increasing property-tax revenues any more than six per cent a year.

"For example, we get federal money to build parks, but we don't have the money to maintain them," says Crane. "I think we're going to have to change the state law."

ON THE whole, however, relations between the navy and Kitsap county are good. With the large Puget Sound naval shipyard at Bremerton and other navy facilities in the area, the county is accustomed to a strong federal presence. Of all the land zoned for industrial use, 97 per cent is federal property. Military families already make up 20 per cent of the population and 54 per cent of the county's payroll comes from Uncle Sam.

But there is a strong desire among residents to maintain the "friendliness, the absence of hassle, the sense of informality," of the county as Caldart sees it, and that, he says, means restricting additional growth.

TO DO this, the county commissioners have adopted a comprehensive plan to locate most new housing, shopping facilities, and public services in existing urban areas such as Bremerton and other incorporated towns. In essence, the county wants to avoid the skip development that has made parts of California synonymous with sprawl.

In some cases, however, development spread before local officials could get a handle on it. Quickly built single-family housing tracts with names like Parkwood East and Woodmere popped up in the rural areas near the sub base before sewer systems could be completed, and problems have resulted.

COUNTY commissioners now are amending their zoning code and meanwhile limiting lot sizes in rural areas to 2½ acres or larger.

"We've taken a lot of heat from developers and rural landowners who want to make a good price off their land," says Crane. "A natural consequence of growth activity is a whole lot of lawsuits."

One lawsuit that has been settled was brought by a local environmental group, Concerned About Trident, which tried to block the project. A federal judge decided in favor of the navy and the group lost on appeal. C.A.T. will continue to keep an eye on the project, but the group's leader approves of the way county officials are controlling growth through land-use restrictions.

"GIVEN the crisis that they've faced, I really think they've done a pretty good job," says attorney Philip Best of C.A.T.

As for the base, it looks more like a woodsy college campus than the spot where immense weaponry will be serviced. Some 5,000 of the 8,200 acres remain forested and deer wander the area, unfazed by the "restricted" and "no photographs" signs. The navy has hired a forester and game warden to keep things as pristine as possible and University of Washington scientists have determined that dredging here will not harm the coho salmon, which migrate through the Hood Canal.

But soon the first of a 10-boat squadron of Trident submarines will arrive, loaded with missiles, for periodic refitting and crew training. They may slip in as quietly as salmon, but things probably will never be the same for Kitsap county residents.

BEST MAY look out from his home on the canal and realize that a nuclear missile could conceivably be launched within his view — and that this could influence potential enemy's targeting plans.

"This is an entirely new ball game," he says. "Never before have we had a missle-launching capacity that could reach halfway around the world in half an hour. The possibility of our becoming a target, of being hit, has become real."

MEANWHILE, the adapting continues here in anticipation of the Trident submarines.

You can't isolate yourself from the rest of the world," says Caldart, who can remember the stern-wheelers and side-paddlers that come into Poulsbo 40 years ago. "You're forced into adjusting."

Of that special friendliness and quality of life that have been Kitsap county's hallmark, Caldart says, "There's no reason why new people coming in can't exhibit that. This is what I'm personally banking on."

To the editor

Study outrageous

Gorde Hunter's article denouncing the Canada Council's grant of $757,182 to the department of political science of the University of Victoria is most apposite.

Even in times when Canada is not seriously in debt, when government spending is properly controlled, and unemployment is less than two per cent of the labor force such a five-year study of change in government and politics in British Columbia during the years from 1969 to 1974 is not only senseless, it is outrageous.

The Canada Council is virtually autonomous. Its financial transactions, even though it is spending public money, are not controlled by Parliament. In 1977 the council received from Canada $59,656,000. Its administrative expenses alone for the year ending March 31, 1977, were $8,965,296, and this included such items as furniture and equipment, $72,340; council meetings including members honoraria, $124,826; staff travel, $310,837; salaries, wages and employees' benefits, $5,408,593.

It is clear that every aspect of the functions and operations of the Canada Council must be thoroughly and publically scrutinized, and the findings of such a detailed scrutiny should be made public.

Extend cut

I read an article recently in which Ald. Robin Blencoe advocated that the local business community give senior citizens a 10 per cent discount on all purchases made in Victoria.

As a local retail merchant I think that is a fine idea. Victoria has a senior population of about 20 per cent which would represent a cost to the merchants of about 2 per cent of net sales per year, providing of course that the practice wasn't abused, e.g. senior citizens buying for the younger members of the family.

Of course I would expect Ald. Blencoe to publicly endorse a similar cut of 2 per cent per year by the non-business segment of Victoria, maybe starting with the union he is closest to.

If, however, Ald. Blencoe will not make such a statement, then we will have to assume that he is just grandstanding for the media, a habit that seems to be common to political animals of all persuasions.

F. WHITFIELD,

Clark backer

Re Lubor Zink's able article in the April 25 Colonist.

He has a good point in suggesting that as "that haberdasher" Truman did so much better than was expected of him. Perhaps Clark would do better than expected. But is it quite out of the question that even at this late date, the party would depose Joe Clark and put in someone in his place.

Protest called to stop Trident

From May 20 to 23 a large group of people will be gathering in Washington state to open up the Trident base. The following morning those willing to risk a jail sentence, will enter the gates with the arriving workers; other groups will participate from a legally safe position outside the gates.

The large group will be divided into regional affinity groups. People attending the demonstration from Vancouver Island are expected to attend an introductory training workshop on non-violence and an affinity group meeting.

Dr. Epstein, a noted authority on disarmament, was quoted as saying he does not think the special session on disarmament at the U.N. will be very effective, since the big powers are not willing to be serious about disarming.

This means that the ordinary person, you and I, will have to take responsibility for what happens to this planet Earth. If we speak with one voice and act in unison, we will be given the strength to stop the dreadful Trident monster, which is a first-strike weapon, capable of destruction that would make the devastation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki look small.

To those who would ask "why don't you protest the Russian arms build-up, I reply — I do protest, and we hear of more and more Russian people protesting.

The film Holocaust showed what can happen when we meekly line up for extermination.

And if you are wondering why lettuce has gone up to $1.39 a head, I would say the military build-up around the world is the cause.

Anyone wishing to participate in the May 22 Coalition to Stop Trident please call David at 382-0210 or Geoff 382-1867 (evenings).

Pension dilemma

Victoria MLA Charles Barber is to be applauded for placing his special motion in the legislature regarding the pensions of United Kingdom citizens residing in Canada.

As one of many hundreds of such people in B.C. this question has been of prime concern to me ever since my wife and I emigrated in 1969 to join our family. I have spent much time and effort in contacting both British and Canadian federal governments at the highest level in order to find out where the responsibility lay for such a ludicrous situation as exists concerning the lack of a Reciprocal Agreement between U.K. and Canada.

Each government in turn blamed the other, but where ever the fault lies, a settlement of the question is long overdue, and in the meantime pensioners from U.K. have their pensions frozen at the level they were when they emigrated. Not only that, they are cut off from the medical benefits they have paid for over many years in U.K.

As Mr. Barber says, it is not a political issue, but a moral one which all people concerned should hasten to rectify immediately.

Still going strong Friday, they exuded confidence that the record would be theirs this afternoon. The current record is 124 hours and 51 minutes.

Betty Ford's hospital treatment in Long Beach, Calif. ended Friday, but a spokesman said the wife of former U.S. president Gerald Ford must deal for the rest of her life with addictions to medication and alcohol. Spokesman Bob Barrett called Mrs. Ford's treatment a complete success and "she's in magnificent health."

Phil Gaglardi has officially withdrawn his name from the federal Social Credit Party leadership race, the party said in Winnipeg, where the leadership convention is being held this weekend. "Gaglardi regretted leaving the race but said he doesn't have the temperament to sit in the House of Commons as an opposition MP and only have the power to shout at four walls," the release said.

Pope Paul on Friday received the credentials of Lombe Phyllis Chibesakunda as Zambia's new ambassador to the Vatican—the second woman envoy to the Holy See.

Cristina Ford and her husband Henry Ford II may be getting a divorce, but she is defending his business conduct as "beyond reproach." Mrs. Ford wrote a letter to the New York Post denying any connection with a stockholders' suit charging that her husband wasted funds of Ford Motor Co., of which he is chairman and chief executive officer, on personal luxuries.

Vancouver lawyer David Freeman has been named a member of the Universities Council of British Columbia for a three-year term beginning May 1, the ministry of education said.

Sewers spark Ganges showdown

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

The vociferous minority gave Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell a rough ride Thursday night when he visited Salt Spring Island to tell about 150 residents how his board is going to install sewers at Ganges.

Campbell, tackling his critics head on, made it clear that the board has the mandate and the orders from the Pollution Control Branch, and is determined to press ahead with a $2,700,000 collection system, treatment plant and outfall into Ganges harbor.

A FEW TIMES during the evening, the meeting erupted into shouting matches, with one resident accusing the board of imposing the will of outsiders on people who don't want a sewer but who will have to pay for it.

Campbell retorted that the plan was not invented on Yates Street (where the Capital Region district offices are) but was the product of various committees on Salt Spring Island.

Accused of preparing to kill Ganges harbor, Campbell became upset.

"I have an aversion to this constant inference that the people who are responsible for solving problems are the ones without a conscience," he stormed.

"I HAVE A scientific education and I have been living by the sea for 34 years. I have as much conscience and concern as anybody in the room. Just because we have the responsibility of solving a problem, I am not going to accept the suggestion that we are not going to solve it responsibly."

He demanded that the accusation that Ganges Harbor would be dead within a few years be withdrawn.

"You aren't the only little group concerned with protecting the environment," he said. "Everyone at this table is concerned and doing as best they can."

ASKED BY Yvette Valcourt about a petition that had been circulated asking for sewers, he said that as far as he was concerned that was a dead issue.

"Since we weren't able to resolve the problem by petition we were compelled to resolve it in any way in which the pollution control director told us to resolve it.

"He told us to define an area where sewers should be installed, and then he ordered us to install sewers there."

THE EXCHANGES prompted Nita Brown to say that the majority of people protesting the sewer project did not live in the area concerned.

"It is not right to treat these people this way when they have come here to help us," she said, and told the region representatives: "The spirit in which you have come here and tried to help us is wonderful. I am ashamed of some of my neighbors."

Her statement brought the loudest applause of the meeting.

"I resolved a long time ago in politics not to be bothered by criticism unless it was justified," Campbell replied. "I have been bothered only a tiny bit tonight."

RESIDENTS WERE told that they would have to pay $412,000 of the estimated $2,700,000 cost of the project, with the rest of the money coming from federal and provincial government grants.

Of the $2.7 million cost, $100,000 will be spent on environmental impact studies, which will form the basis for the sewer design.

"The cold hard fact of the matter is that unless this study shows that it can be done safely by putting an outfall into the harbor, then it won't be done. Then we will have wasted some money and we won't have a solution," Campbell said.

SEVERAL residents questioned the boundaries of the proposed sewer area, saying that many lots close to the boundaries have new houses and septic tanks, with large disposal fields and no sewage problems.

"The boundaries were set because it has been clear that if an area has to be sewered in Ganges this is the one to be served," Campbell said.

Campbell said he was no longer prepared to argue the merits of the boundaries. Such a debate would set the project back another three to five years.

Several speakers feared that installation of the sewers would lead to population growth, pointing out that the proposed community plan mentioned an ultimate population of 6,000 for Ganges.

CAMPBELL said the plan had never been adopted, and planning was now in the hands of the Islands Trust.

However, he said, the project was being designed for the present population, plus about a 50-per-cent increase, and once the planned number of connections had been made no more would be allowed.

"This is being built to clear up a health hazard," he said, "not to allow more building."

Chuck Horel said the first sewer plan many years ago had been for the downtown area only, but health authorities had said it was unthinkable that a system should be installed that did not include the hospital. At that time the estimate for the full project was $153,000.

"THAT SYSTEM hasn't changed a great deal from the one proposed now except that this includes a treatment plant," he said.

"In the 15 years since then we have had many additional engineering studies and the intrusion of committees representing nearly every sector except the Australian sheep herders, but the design has altered very little despite this.

"The delay involved has cost the federal government a great deal," he said.

"For God's sake stop this farce, build the sewer and let's make Ganges a place where we can live and enjoy it."

At the end, as he closed the meeting, Campbell became more conciliatory.

"I think this has been a useful experience for us, and we may be able to modify some aspects of the project in light of your criticisms."

Vogel staying, says Gardom

Canadian Press

Attorney-General Garde Gardom Thursday rejected a demand by the Vancouver and District Labor Council to fire deputy attorney general Richard Vogel for recent statements concerning illegal RCMP activities.

Gardom said he disagreed with some of Vogel's comments on RCMP break-ins and intellegence probes in B.C., but he had no intention of firing him.

Vogel said that most people in the province weren't very upset that the RCMP had conducted illegal break-ins to gather evidence. He also said they should be made legal.

Gardom said he was awaiting a report from his ministry on the activities of the force and would take whatever steps werenecessary to deal with the break-ins, including laying criminal charges.

The minister said he didn't know when the report would be completed but it would be made public.

STUDENTS ARGUED WAY TO VICTORIA

Canada's top high school debaters arrive in Victoria today for a week of sightseeing and debating.

The national debating seminar is Canada's top debating tournament, and its presence in Victoria this year represents the first time the seminar has been held in B.C.

Seven students from each province and the Northwest Territories, at least one of whom must be capable of debating in French, are coming to Victoria after winning top debating laurels in their own provinces, Chris Harker, president of the Debate and Speech Association of B.C. said Friday. Including team advisers and local organizers, about 110 people are involved in the seminar.

"The whole community is involved in providing facilities and transportation for students," Harker said. About 140 people, including MPs Donald Munro and Allan McKinnon, and several MLAs, have been enlisted as judges.

Participants in the seminar will get a taste of West Coast life at its best on Sunday when they board a fleet of eight yachts and head for Salt Spring Island and a salmon bake. The next day debating will start in earnest, following a keynote address by David Anderson, former B.C. Liberal leader.

Lebanon fighting flares up

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Beirut's southeastern suburbs, scene of fierce fighting last month, erupted in renewed violence today. Residents said artillery, mortars and machineguns were used in the fighting.

It was not immediately known who was involved in the fighting, in an area where at least 37 people were killed and more than 220 wounded last month.

The radio station of the Phalangist party, Lebanon's biggest right-wing organization, reported that at least one person was killed and 12 wounded today in artillery shelling on Ain Rummaneh, a Christian district which was the flashpoint of the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

Last month, Syria threw tanks and rocket batteries into action to quell fighting between militiamen in Ain Rummaneh and the neighboring Moslem district.

$10,000 drain for MLA

Canadian Press

Elwood Veitch (SC—Burnaby-Willingdon) said Friday he was losing $10,000 a year by being a member of thelegislature.

"I don't think any member is being paid adequately for their jobs . . . they are simply locked in to working full-time on behalf of their constituents," said Veitch who is also chairman of the legislative committee on crown corporations.

He said he accepts his job gladly but added that "there should be a fresh look at this whole business of parliamentary stipends."

Veitch made his remarks during taping of the television program Capital Comment for viewing Sunday.

At first he wasn't prepared to say what salary MLAs should be paid but after repeated questioning he suggested $35,000 a year including expenses would be adequate.

"I don't think any member should make anything on it—the process of being a member—but they shouldn't loose too much," he said. "They have a responsibility to the public and the public also has a responsibility to the members."

South Korean envoy defects in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Stars says a South Korean diplomatic official is in hiding after defecting and exposing Korean Central Intelligence Agency activities in Toronto.

The newspaper says Yungman Yang, vice-consul at the South Korean consulate here, has applied to Canada's employment and immigration department for refugee status for himself, his wife and three children.

Yang, 41, related what he said were incidents of blackmail, harassment of critics of President Chung-hee Park's right-wing dictatorship and attempts to divide the Korean United Church congregation in Toronto.

The newspaper also says Yang, in hiding along with his family since March 23, has been interviewed by RCMP security officers and has been examined under oath by a senior immigration officer.

Yang's lawyer had been advised by the RCMP that Yang and his family might be in danger because four Korean Central Intelligence Agency men had left South Korea for Toronto on April 28.

Transcripts of interviews with Yang have been sent to the government's refugee status advisory committee in Ottawa, which usually takes about five weeks to render a decision.

Conference in Montana cancelled

On the off chance that you may have been planning to attend a Montana conference on nocosomial infections and their control next week, here's the word from the sponsor of the conference, the University of Washington: It's off.

A strike by Northwest Airlines has forced the cancellation of the conference, a spokesman for the university said Friday. A fair contingent of Canadians planned to attend the course, which was to include a visit to five Montana hospitals.

Nocosomial infections are infections caused by inadequate hospital procedures.

Oil gap a 'hoax'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 7,000-member fishermen's union launched an attack Friday on the oil industry and the Liberal government, calling the prospect of depleting energy resources a hoax.

Supercar is here.

We're calling our Acadians 'Supercars'. The reasons?

First of all, the price. Our 2-door Hatchback is less than a Honda Civic. Less than a Ford Fiesta. Less than a Toyota Corolla 1200. Less than a Datsun B 210 and substantially less than a Volkswagen Rabbit.

Second of all, super standard features. Four on the floor.* Centre console. Reclining front bucket seats. AM radio. Carpeting. Snappy white stripe bias-belted tires. And a 1.6 litre overhead cam engine for super performance.

Third of all, gas mileage. Our little Supercar is able to go 50 highway miles on a gallon of gas. 37 miles per gallon in the city. It already meets gas mileage requirements set by the federal government for the 1980's.

Fourthly, we've got two super models. There's our nifty 2-door Hatchback. And our new 4-door Hatchback. Both have lots of room for you and three friends.

*Automatic Transmission Available at Extra Cost

SUPERCAR

And last, but not least, it's from General Motors. Which means that all the engineering and expertise of the world's largest car company goes into each car.

Plus every Supercar comes with an exclusive 4-colour striping and super decals that make it stand apart from mild-mannered, every day cars.

Acadian. The gas economy of the 1980's. The engineering of the 20th Century. And all at a price that will make you a super hero with your budget.

Trade in that dull, mild-mannered car you're driving and change into a Supercar. Only available at Empress Pontiac Buick. Have a real driving adventure.

Price $4,124.00

Supercar. A super buy. And only available at Empress.

Marine centre receives go-ahead

A new technological centre for highly-specialized marine-oriented companies will be built in North Saanich, adjacent to the Institute of Ocean Sciences.

The centre will occupy 15 acres of land in a 40-acre tract. The remaining 25 acres will be a park.

The technological centre is expected to create 300 new jobs in the area and, according to North Saanich Mayor George Westwood, the project could enrich the municipal treasury by $300,000 a year in taxes.

Plans for the centre have been approved in principle by North Saanich council but before construction can begin, details for site development have to be worked out.

A spokesman for the Institute of Ocean Sciences said Friday quite a number of companies had expressed interest in the site.

CITY PUPILS WRITE WINNERS

Glenlyon scholars at Oak Bay have fared well in the Royal Commonwealth essay competition, winning two major provincial awards.

Andrew Harmsworth, 1959 Beach Drive, won second prize and $70 in class B, for students 14 and 15, and John Mullin of 35 Wellington Avenue won third prize, and $50 in the same class.

Glenlyon headmaster Hamish Simpson said it was the first time two students from the school had won major prizes in the same year.

Other Lower Vancouver Island students awarded recognition in the contest were Laura Downs of Dunsmuir secondary, who was commended for her entry in class A, for students 16 and 17.

Mark Logan of Glenlyon received an honorable mention, and Daniel Stevens of Glenlyon a commendation, in class B.

In class C, for students 12 and 13 years of age, Tybring Hemphill and Philip Spencer of Glenlyon won honorable mentions, along with Larry Kubek of North Saanich.

Winning commendations in class C were James Duffus, Scott Farlowe, and Brian Charlesworth of Glenlyon, and Janice Butler of Quadra elementary.

New try for energy inventor

WASHINGTON (CP) — A White House official said Friday he was trying to ensure that a competent and thorough evaluation is given to a Montreal inventor's innovative proposal to boost petroleum production through electrical heat.

Ted Greenwood of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy said in an interview he was not satisfied with the way in which the fossil fuels division of the U.S. energy department handled the proposal.

Officials of the fossil fuels division said earlier this week that their initial evaluation of the proposal, by Sydney T. Fisher of Montreal, was negative and they were not pursuing the idea.

Greenwood, however, said the negative evaluation of the Fisher proposal "looked very strange" to him and, even though the fossil fuels officials would normally be asked to study such ideas he had asked the Office of Energy Research to look into it.

The proposal, on which Fisher says he has done $800,000 worth of research, is designed to enable a much greater proportion of oil, natural gas, oil shale and even coal reserves to be exploited. Large copper cables in shafts around such reserves would carry enough electricity to heat the fuel to the boiling point, facilitating extraction.

"It looks like a very interesting thing if it works," Greenwood said.

The Fisher plan, which has been submitted to the Canadian and Alberta governments in addition to the U.S. government, is also being examined by staff of congressional committees dealing with energy research.

Tel balks at price cut

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. has refused to comment on a statement made by Robert Bertrand, federal deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs, that a recent court decision should pave the way for cheaper telephone costs across the country.

Bertrand was referring to a Federal Court of Appeal decision upholding the right of Bell Canada customers in Ontario to own their own automatic mobile telephones.

He said telephone rate increases would be kept down if customers own their equipment.

Keith Matthews, B.C. Tel spokesman, said he doubted if the decision would have much effect in B.C. because the automatic mobile telephone market is so small, but declined comment on whether the ruling would result in lower rates.

Pennies from heaven taxman's hope

By JIM POLING

OTTAWA (CP) — There's an old maxim that, roughly translated from Latin, says ownership of the soil carries with it ownership of everything up to heaven and down to hell.

The Manitoba government will likely put the maxim before the Supreme Court of Canada later this month when it argues that the provinces have legislative jurisdiction in the air over their territories. Its lawyers will appear May 15 seeking permission to appeal lower court rulings that no one can own the air space.

What prompted the legal controversy was Manitoba's attempt to apply its retail sales tax to Air Canada flights crossing the province. It assessed the airline $1.3 million in taxes on food and liquor and aircraft repair parts and services for the period July 1, 1971, to June 30, 1974.

Air Canada immediately appealed the taxation and got a Court of Queen's Bench ruling that the province had no authority to tax in the sky. The Manitoba Court of Appeal agreed, and now the province wants the country's highest court to make a ruling.

Manitoba's proposition raises interesting legal questions, the answers to which might have important implications.

"The implications of the question are of grave consequence, since if Manitoba is found to have jurisdiction over its air space, so would have all the provinces over theirs and national air carriers and other carriers could be faced with (many) assessments for the same aircraft in various provinces," the Manitoba Court of Appeal has said.

Manitoba contends that the air space question might affect provincial legislation relating to air pollution, wildlife, liquor offences, telecommunications and even the height restrictions on buildings. The provinces already make laws concerning air pollution and the shooting of flying birds.

The two lower courts indicated the province's proposition was simply impossible.

Message from U.K.: 'Have a care, Pierre'

LONDON (CP) — Pierre Trudeau "has a lot more to do this year besides sit on his laurels," says The Evening Standard in a full-page feature on Canada's prime minister.

In a story headlined "Have a care, Pierre," the newspaper says:

"The 111-year-old Canadian Confederation is faced with the threat of secession by the country's largest province, Quebec, in which a quarter of the Canadian population lives. This summer Trudeau will almost certainly take to the hustings again."

Trudeau's opponents have plenty of ammunition for their campaigns, the newspaper says.

"The Canadian dollar has declined to a 45-year low against the U.S. dollar; unemployment stands at more than a million in a country of only 23 million; inflation is running at least two per cent over the six-per-cent target for the year."

Trudeau, at 58, now the senior statesman of both the West and the British Commonwealth, has just marked is 10th anniversary both as Canada's prime minister and as leader of the governing Liberal party.

"Pretty good for a man who has only been active in politics for 13 years," writes Charlotte Gray.

However, the story continues:

"Trudeaumania is dead. Few Canadians are prepared to offer him the unqualified adulation on which he swept effortlessly to power 10 years ago."

Yet, Gray points out, few political commentators in London are quoting any odds on Trudeau losing the next election.

"In 1968 he was the banister-slider and new broom; the darling of the flower children and the '60s radicals. His appeal was that of a playboy intellectual who spoke of a new society."

A firm believer in the democratic process and a firm supporter of federalism, "Trudeau was going to combat the threat of Quebec separatism, which had been bubbling for a decade, by changing English Canada from within."

Then the Quebec threat "blew up in his face," Gray says.

"The province was rent by a wave of terrorism . . . and the country was placed under martial law.

"By the next election, in 1972, he had a new image—Don't Care Pierre," waiting to "avoid the emotionalism of the 1968 campaign and appeal to the minds, not the passions of the electorate."

It did not work. Eighteen months later he went to the country again.

"Gone were the intellectual detachment, the corduroy jacket, and the hair curling over the collar," says Gray.

"This time he was hellbent on victory and as a political pragmatist he adopted the traditional tactics."

She adds: "But his position on the polls was still slipping until the challenge from Quebec crystallized again—this time in the form of Rene Levesque.

"Canadians then turned to the consistent champion of federalism, Pierre Trudeau, and his stock has been rising ever since.

Death cancels two air shows

EDMONTON (CP) — The next two performances of the Canadian Forces aerobatics team, the Snowbirds, have been cancelled following the death in a plane crash Wednesday night of the group's lead solo flyer.

Capt. Gordon De Jong, 32, was killed during an air show in the northwestern Alberta city of Grande Prairie when his C-41 Tutor training jet appeared to start disintegrating in mid-air before crashing in a ploughed field.

Maj. Vic Keating, information officer at Canadian Forces Base Namao near Edmonton, said tonight's Snowbird performance in Fort Nelson, B.C., and a performace scheduled for Sunday in Whitehorse have been cancelled.

A board of inquiry has been called to investigate the accident which took place before a crowd estimated at several thousand people.

Keating said the findings of a board of inquiry are normally classified but Defence Minister Barney Danson could decide to release the information.

There are still 150 Tutor jets in service.

"This may be one aircraft out of 150 that had a fatal flaw but they're going to try and determine that," said Keating of the investigation.

Calypso dream falters

OTTAWA (CP) — For the 13th and last time in 13 sessions of Parliament, Progressive Conservative Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough) failed Friday to get Commons approval of his dream of closer ties between Canada and the Caribbean.

"They're very important neighbors...if we can't get along with them, who can we get along with?" Macquarrie asked sadly after Liberal MPs talked so long his motion couldn't be voted upon.

He had proposed that a joint Commons-Senate committee be established "to consider the advisability of taking an initiative in promoting closer commercial and cultural relations between the Dominion of Canada and the communities of the Commonwealth Caribbean."

Macquarrie said in an interview, "My ancestors lived in the Maritimes in the golden age of wooden ships and iron men. When this country was founded, living on the Atlantic seaboard was an advantage. The ocean was a corridor of commerce. Now it's the last and most costly station on the CNR line."

ALBERTA'S SWINGIN' SUMMER

It starts in early July, with the world's biggest rodeo — the Calgary Stampede. But it's more than a rodeo. Hang onto your Stetson while you ride ferris wheels and rocket rides, take in chuckwagon races, stage shows, casinos, comedians, singing and dancing acts, and carry on till all hours in nightspots. For ten days you can enjoy pancake breakfasts served from a chuckwagon, square dance in the streets, and songs like Home on the Range become singalong hits again.

It's wild. It's carefree. And a million people get caught up in the fun. You will too.

But that's only the beginning. Take a couple of days to catch your breath, then head to Edmonton for Klondike Days — a chance to relive the Gold Rush - Gay '90s era. Residents and visitors alike dress up in silk vests, top hats, cutaway coats, spats, or ostrich plumes, bustles, parasols. Overnight the city becomes populated with Klondike Kates, sourdoughs and riverboat gamblers. Crowds form around roulette tables in the casinos. Others take their chances at the horse races. And you can enjoy every part of it — the infamous raft and bathtub races, the midway, the nightly Coliseum of Stars, carnival and cabaret — even a promenade to show off your finery.

It's another mammoth party. And you're invited.

There isn't another celebration like it in North America. Three weeks of excitement, action and non-stop enjoyment packed into July. You can make it your entire vacation, or part of your holiday. Plan to join the dress-up crowd and get your outfit here.

We suggest you reserve early. Calgary and Edmonton are alive for the Stampede and Klondike Days, and tickets and accommodations are in high demand.

And remember, there's no sales tax in Alberta.

See you at the party.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Some spirited buying of oil issues helped pull the stock market out of a three-day slide Friday in another extremely busy session.

Leading oil stocks gained ground after a Continental Oil drilling foreman told reporters that early exploratory drilling in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey had encountered "very promising" rock formations.

Among stocks of other companies active in the Baltimore Canyon exploration, Exxon jumped 1¼ to 48⅝ and Cities Service climbed 1¾ to 50.

In its advance the market overcame some persistent worrisome news on the outlook for U.S. inflation and interest rates.

Among Canadian issues on the New York stock exchange, Campbell Red Lake was up ⅝ to 30⅝, McIntyre ½ to 19¾, Seagram ⅜ to 29⅛, and Inco ⅜ to 16½.

Bell Canada was down ⅛ to 49½, and Dome Mines ⅛ to 69⅛.

Pulp arriving, when funds?

Despite federal government sloth in putting its money where its mouth is, Ogden Point docks will be back in the pulp business next week.

The first pulp barge is scheduled to arrive Tuesday with 1,000 tons of pulp from Port Angeles which will be stored in the new warehouse on the dock before loading into a freighter.

The new structure, which replaces the one destroyed by fire last summer, is not completed, and cannot be until the federal government spends $1.25 million to upgrade the dock.

The money was promised last December. It was announced in the House of Commons the money would be forthcoming to raise the dock four feet so the lowest section would be above the storm level.

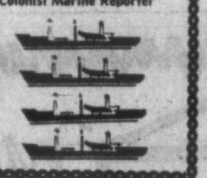

"Not one penny of that money promised has been spent on the docks," said a Victoria shipping official. "The pulp will have to be stored in the warehouse even though there will be no doors. Water and electrical services will a temporary arrangement because there is no use in making them permanent fixtures until the decking is finished".

He also said federal work on the dock more than likely will be put off until September which will make it difficult for the cruise ships which start coming into Victoria within a few weeks.

Another observer pointed out where else but Victoria would you find a blind airport and a harbor with fouled up docks?

MARINE NEWS

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Marine Reporter

Canada is using $1.2 billion to help Algeria form a merchant marine, Donald Munro, Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich recently told the House of Commons.

"It's absolutely ludicrous that we are creating a merchant marine for someone else and we are not doing it for ourselves," he said.

"We seem prepared to help others and we are not prepared to confront the problems in our own country."

Munro made his comments during debate on a bill to give more money to the Crown's Export and Development Corporation, which helps promote the sale of Canadian products abroad through loans and guarantees to foreign customers if the money is spent in Canada.

During this year's herring season fish were unloaded at Nanaimo's assembly wharf by vacuum.

A spokesman for the harbor commission said the discharge of herring formerly was difficult, and as an experiment this year a pumper truck was set up and the boats came in around the clock to have their catches pumped into tote boxes capable of holding a ton each.

About 1,000 tons were unloaded using this method which the spokesman said was an improvement over unloading by hoist.

Fishermen receive $750 a ton for the fish from which the roe is extracted, frozen and shipped to Japan where it is considered a delicacy.

An estimated $175 million is put into the B.C. economy each year by the herring catch.

Africa loans dying?

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada has made no loans to the South African government or its agencies for almost two years, the Taskforce on the Churches and Corporate Responsibility says.

The organization, an ecumenical coalition of the major Christian churches in Canada, is one of a number of groups urging Canadian banks to stop lending money to South Africa.

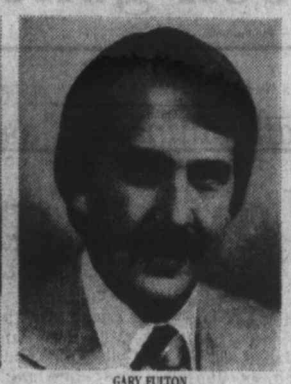

The Royal Bank has not announced a complete embargo on loans but has stated that "under current circumstances it will not make general purpose or balance of payments loans to the South African government because the ultimate use of the funds could not be clearly determined," the church group said in a news release Friday.

Banks in the United States, England and the Netherlands have announced similar positions on loans to the apartheid government..

HAYHURST ADVERTISING APPOINTMENTS

CAM TURNER

GARY FULTON

Kenneth McK. Wright, Senior Vice-President and Western Manager of Hayhurst Advertising, is pleased to announce the appointment of Cam Turner and Gary Fulton as Account Directors.

Mr. Turner, who is an Honours B.A. Business Administration from the University of Western Ontario, joined the Agency in Toronto in 1964 where he gained extensive experience servicing a varied group of large package goods accounts. Subsequently in 1973, he joined the Vancouver office where he assumed responsibility for the provision of a wide range of communication and marketing services for a number of important client accounts.

Mr. Fulton joined Hayhurst in 1973 following service with another national advertising agency. A graduate B.A. from San Jose State College, he has been directly involved in the development and execution of numerous successful marketing, advertising and communications programs on behalf of Hayhurst clients.

The appointments to the senior positions of Account Directors are in keeping with the Agency's policy of continually maximizing its ability to provide the best possible advertising counsel for all clients. The appointments also mark the continuing growth of the Agency that is now celebrating its Fiftieth anniversary year.

F.H. Hayhurst Co. Limited, one of Canada's major national advertising agencies was established in 1928. The company maintains offices in Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal and provides a wide range of marketing, advertising and communication services to leading Canadian and U.S. companies.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Friday's receipts of 1,753 head at the Calgary public stockyards consisted of a light run of slaughter cows. Trade was moderate with a good local demand on all grades of butcher cows. There were no slaughter steers or heifers on offer. Slaughter cows sold steady. Heavy bologna bulls suitable for export traded $1 higher with sales to $55. Feeder steers over 800 pounds sold 50 cents higher while feeders under 800 pounds sold $2 higher. Good stock steer calves traded $5 higher with sales to $71. Feeder heifers and stock heifer calves traded $2 higher. D1-2 cows 43-45; D3 41.50-42.50; D5 39-41.50. Good bulls. 51-54. A normal spring run of all classes of feeder cattle and stock calves met active trade with a broad local and eastern demand. Good feeder steers over 800 pounds 55-59; 700-800 pounds 55-61.25; 600-700 pounds 56-68.90. Good feeder heifers over 700 pounds 53-57; 600-700 pounds 58-58; 500-600 pounds 52-58.35. Feeder cows 40-50.50. Good stock steer calves 500-600 pounds 60-71; 400-500 pounds 55-63.50. Good stock heifer calves 400-500 pounds 53-58.25; 300-400 pounds 52-58.

Wash trading soon gone?

The inclusion of the prohibition of wash trading among amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada, introduced earlier this week in the Commons by justice minister Ron Basford, has been greeted with satisfaction by B.C.'s minister of consumer and corporate affairs Rafe Mair.

The provincial minister stated in a news release this week that "the legislation is long overdue."

Wash trading is a technique of stock manipulation whereby in effect somebody sells a stock to himself at an inflated

Mair says the practice is criminal in nature, and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the provincial Securities Act.

"It has been the provincial view for several years that Ottawa should legislate against wash trading," Mair stated. "When the Securities Act became my responsibility in November, 1976, one of my first acts was to write to price to create the impression that the stock's price is on the upswing.

Ron Basford, urging him to take a renewed interest in this matter.

"Pressure on the federal government was one of the initiatives I announced on April 12, 1977 to clean up the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

"Following my letters to the Minister of Justice outlining our concerns, Mr. Bill Irwin, B.C.'s superintendent of brokers, raised the matter again at two inter-provincial meetings of securities administrators, who by and large have been in favor of the amendment."

Canadian ministers assured

Japan gives trade vow

OTTAWA (CP) — A Japanese minister has assured Canadian leaders Canada's trade with Japan will not be undermined by any Japanese moves to reduce that country's $9 billion-a-year trade surplus with the United States.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Friday that Nobuhiko Ushiba, Japan's external economic affairs minister, told him earlier that "Canadian interests are going to be taken into account."

Jamieson, Prime Minister Trudeau and Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen met Ushiba at an informal working lunch during the Japanese minister's brief seven-hour stopover on the way to West Germany. Ushiba arrived here earlier Friday from Washington.

The Japanese minister, a former ambassador to Canada, said after the meetings he had "very good discussions."

"We had some differences but we share a good understanding," he said. He had talked about preparations for the Western economic summit meeting planned for Bonn in July.

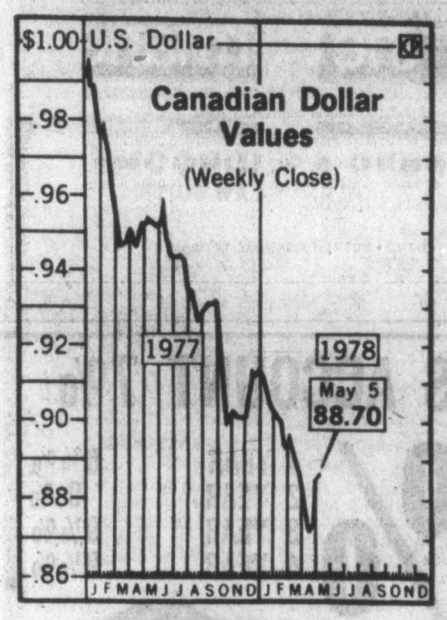

Jamieson said Ushiba was asked about the impact on Canada of Japanese plans to reduce the trade surplus with the U.S. The U.S. has said a lower trade deficit with Japan is essential for an American economic recovery. Without this, the U.S. has warned there might be a move to more trade protectionist measures in Washington.

The Japanese minister expected that plans to increase Japan's imports from other countries "would be beneficial to Canada," Jamieson said. With trade barriers being lowered, Canadian products would have an easier time competing on Japanese markets.

Jamieson also raised the U.S.-Japanese problem and its impact on Canada when he visited Tokyo in January.

Canadian exports to Japan last year amounted to $2.5 billion while imports reached $1.8 billion.

Ushiba also said his government is sure it will be able to reach its seven per-cent economic growth target this year despite predictions from some economists it will fall short. World leaders have said it is important for Japan to achieve this goal as it would help stimulate the world economy generally.

Buck up

Road down was swift one and Canadian dollar is finding way back toward parity with its U.S. counterpart slow one. Canadian currency gained one-fifth of a cent in past week to close at 88.70 U.S. cents.

Full-sized question to car sales figure

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For a while this week it seemed as though the giant among auto manufacturers was humbled by an upstart.

Figures released by R. L. Polk and Co. Ltd. said the small-sized Honda overtook the longtime leading big Chevrolet in the registration of new cars in the first two months of 1978.

"But the key here is 'full-size Chevrolets,'" said Nick Hall, a public relations official at General Motors of Canada Ltd. "They include only three models—the Caprice, Impala and Bel Air.

"We're far ahead as usual in our entire line of GM models."

Polk, a statistics firm, said registration of the Japanese-built Honda models totalled 8,012 units to the end of February for a 5.79-per-cent share of the market.

The full-size Chevrolets registrations accounted for 7,814 units or 5.65-per-cent market share, it said.

Honda registrations were up 58.59 per cent for the two months over the comparable period last year while those of the full-size Chevrolet were down 12.9 per cent for the period.

Fire chiefs want smoke detectors mandatory in all homes

TORONTO (CP)—A survey of fire chiefs across Canada shows they want legislation making smoke detectors mandatory in all homes to help reduce the annual toll of 3,000 fire deaths in Canada.

An investigation by firefighters in the Metropolitan Toronto borough of North York has shown there was no detector in a $150,000 house where six members of a family died in a pre-dawn blaze this week.

Chief William Sproule of the Toronto fire prevention bureau said smoke detectors—one installed on each floor—provided the best protection against fire deaths.

"I believe that if we're going to make a significant reduction in fire deaths, we'll have to get detectors in homes," Sproule said.

A recent survey of fires in a 2½-year period concluded detectors probably saved lives in 21 of 64 fires.

The city of Peterborough, Ont., has passed a bylaw requiring them in all homes, old and new, by next Jan. 1. It allows homeowners to choose the wired-in detectors required for new houses or less expensive, battery-operated detectors.

Peterborough Fire Chief John Ritchie said the bylaw was passed after as many as nine or 10 persons a year died in rooming house fires.

However, Deputy Fire Chief Jim Tuning of Vancouver warned that detectors could give the public a false sense of security if improperly serviced.

Franco, not Nazis, blamed in Guernica bombing

By STANLEY MEISLER
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

MADRID, Spain — In a new deflation of old myths, a Spanish historian has reached the tentative conclusion that the late Gen. Francisco Franco bore more responsibility than Nazi Germany for one of the most infamous acts of the Spanish Civil War — the bombing destruction of Guernica.

Through his study of German archives, the historian, Angel Vinas of the University of Alcala, has concluded that the planes of the German Condor Legion, which destroyed the Basque town in an act that shocked the world, were under the direct command of Franco.

But, according to Vinas, the final proof of direct responsibility lies in the Spanish govenment's military archives of the civil war. These are still secret. Vinas and other historians have asked the post-Franco government of King Juan Carlos and Premier Adolfo Suarez to open them. So far, there has been no response to the request.

But it is obvious that Vinas is convinced that the Spanish archives will not exonerate Franco from at least the moral responsibility for the destruction of Guernica.

Waves of German Heinkels, Junkers and Messerschmitts of the Condor Legion dropped 100,000 pounds of bombs on Guernica on April 26, 1937, in the first attempt in history to destroy an undefended town from the air and terrorize the civilian population. Perhaps 1,000 people died — estimates vary widely — and the demoralized Basques of northern Spain soon surrendered to the armies of Franco.

It has long been accepted by many historians that the Condor Legion was testing some techniques of saturation bombing used later by the German Luftwaffe during the Second World War. During the dictatorship of Franco, Spanish historians insisted that Franco was informed of the raid only afterward and became enraged at the Germans for doing it on their own.

But this version is disputed by Vinas.

"The records show," he said, "that Franco was in very direct and very intense contact with the Condor Legion." Vinas has outlined the evidence for his conclusions in an article published in the Spanish magazine Historia 16 on the 41st anniversary of the bombing.

Adolf Hitler, according to Vinas, sent the Condor Legion to Spain with the understanding that it act only in co-ordination with Franco's army, not on its own. A dispute over this co-ordination arose a few weeks before the bombing of Guernica. Franco had asked the legion to transfer a few of its planes from the northern to the central front. Gen. Hugo Sperrle, commander of the legion, refused, for he believed the transfer violated the terms of the original German-Spanish agreement. In his written refusal, Sperrle set down what those terms were.

"I have strict orders to use the Condor Legion only as a bloc in accordance with your instructions and not in isolated parts. These were the conditions (under) which the Condor Legion ... was put at (your) disposition..."

"The use of the German aviation," Vinas said, "depended on orders emanating from the generalissimo."

In short, Vinas contends, although Sperrle did not have to follow Franco's orders when they deviated from the original agreement, he did have to follow them when there was no deviation.

And, Vinas went on, there is no evidence to suggest any breakdown in communication on April 25 and 26, 1937, that might have forced the Condor Legion to act independently of Franco's headquarters.

The German archives also provide evidence that the plan to bomb Guernica was not concocted in Berlin. "A few days after the bombing," Vinas said, "Berlin did not know much about it, thus making it improbable that Berlin could have ordered it." In fact, the worldwide outcry over the destruction prompted Berlin to demand an explanation from Sperrle.

At that time, Franco's propaganda office was insisting that the Basques had burned Guernica themselves in a devious attempt to win sympathy. The Franco side admitted only that the Germans had bombed a bridge outside Guernica. According to the archives, Sperrle, in his reply to Berlin, lied, telling Berlin only that the bridge and highways had been bombed.

"Here was a continual interaction of responsibility between the Franco nationalists and the Germans," Vinas said. "This was beyond question in strategy and tactics."

The German records also offer evidence that the destruction of Guernica was consistent with a Francoist policy of devastating the Basque lands and destroying their industry. Sperrle reported that Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of Franco's troops in the north, had ordered the Condor Legion to destroy half the factories in Bilbao, the main Basque city.

"Asked why he wanted to destroy industry that he was about to conquer," Sperrle said, "Mola replied that Spain was totally dominated by its industrial centres ... There were already too many industries that only produced discontent."

Employees must have top brass approval

CBC warns political hopefuls

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC issued a reminder to its employees Thursday that it takes more than party affiliation and eager campaign workers before they can take part in the federal election campaign expected this summer.

CBC spokesman Jack Lusher said in an interview that a corporation bylaw passed in June 1977 prohibits staff members from seeking political office without prior approval from corporate brass.

Affected employees must alsotake a leave of absence without pay for the duration of their campaigns.

In addition they must accept assignment to another position in the company if they lose, the bylaw says.

Published reports said that before the bylaw came into effect there was controversy over corporate treatment of employees who stood as candidates in federal and provincial elections.

The best known case is that of former parliamentary reporter Ron Collister, who took a leave of absence to run as a Conservative in the 1974 federal election. When he was defeated at the polls, Collister was promptly posted to Washington, D.C.

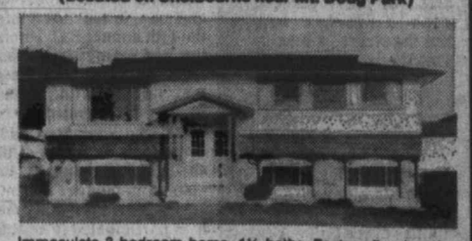

Lusher denied allegations that the bylaw was passed to prevent francophone employees from supporting the expected Parti Quebecois referendum on separation.

Announcement

The President of Capital City Realty, Walt Slocomb, is pleased to announce that SHIRLEY PHILPS has joined our organization. SHIRLEY PHILPS for many years operated her own real estate business in Victoria. More recently she was the Vancouver Island general manager for a large public real estate corporation.

Shirley Philps is a member of the Victoria Real Estate Board and has in the past served that organization as a Director and Vice-President and has the distinction of being the first lady to hold these positions.

With a lifetime dedicated to the real estate industry, SHIRLEY PHILPS with true wisdom and knowledge, has guided the careers of many very successful Victoria real estate professionals.

Real estate marketing is indeed an art and SHIRLEY intends to use her vast knowledge for the benefit of builders-developers who need that extra something, that additional expertise which has always proved paramount. The sale of executive homes is also at the top of her priorities. It is her intention to use Capital City Realty's exclusive "Realty One Hundred" colourful presentation to enable homeowners to sell their properties more quickly.

Her expertise will be an invaluable asset to Capital City Realty and we are indeed proud that she decided to join our real estate concept and we look forward to a long real estate association. SHIRLEY PHILPS will be delighted to hear from her many clients and real estate friends and offers a cordial invitation to call her at anytime she can be of service.

UVIC TO BUZZ WITH YOUNG IDEAS

Outstanding Grade 11 and 12 students from across the province are gathering at the University of Victoria this weekend to exchange ideas and sample university life at the 12th annual B.C. Humanities and Science symposium.

Co-sponsored by UVic and B.C. Telephone Co., the symposium is attended by students who submitted papers or projects on topics of their choice for judging by UVic faculty members.

This year, 150 faculty members participated in selecting 28 winning papers on such diverse topics as violence in sports, Zionism, and a sixth sense.

The writers of the winning papers have been invited to attend the symposium, expenses paid, to present their work in talks scheduled throughout their two-day visit. Also invited to attend are the teachers of the winning students and 80 students who submitted papers of high standards.

A new feature of the symposium this year will be a multi-media workshop to be conducted by UVic educational technologist Geoffrey Potter. A writers' workshop will be presented by UVic professor and well-known author William Valgardson.

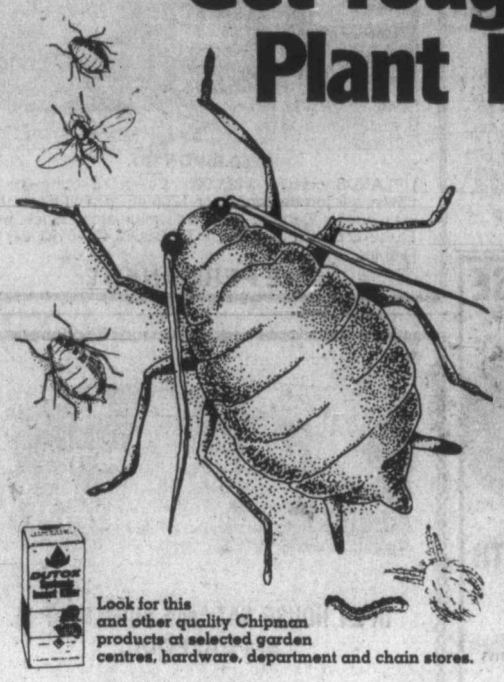

University scholars will themselves give lectures on the natural history of Fiji, Quebec, and Captain James Cook.

Plan means 25 new jobs

Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Thursday his ministry is offering work to 25 young people this year under the government's youth employment program.

The minister said the positions in Prince George, Cranbrook, Kelowna, Vancouver and Victoria will increase the ministry staff by 10 per cent.

Get Tough With Plant Pests

Aphids. Mites. Leaf Miners. Caterpillars. Spruce Budworms.

You may not recognise them on sight, but the chances are you're familiar with the damage they cause flowers, shrubs and small trees.

So how do you combat this destruction?

Simple.

With DUTOX® systemic insecticide. A proven insect control that kills bugs on contact. Plus, it is also absorbed by the plant to kill suckling insects that feed on its juices. So if you're ready to take the ultimate step against plant pests, take it with DUTOX.

Doyle tax arrears bring Tory to boil

OTTAWA (CP) — A Supreme Court ruling that financier John Doyle owes nearly $2 million in income tax prompted Newfoundland Conservative MP John Crosbie Friday to seek a Commons committee investigation of the case.

"It's a scandalous example of maladministration of the income tax law," Crosbie, MP for St. John's West told a Commons finance committee meeting with Revenue Minister Joe Guay in the hot seat.

In a decision announced Thursday the high court dismissed an appeal by Doyle, a Newfoundland businessman turned fugitive from Canadian and United States justice, against revenue department assessments of his 1954 taxes.

Crosbie demanded the committee launch an immediate inquiry into the case since it has been nearly 25 years since the tax was owed. MPs said they could consider the request at an agenda-setting meeting next week.

Meanwhile, revenue department officials indicated the government still faces complex obstacles in recovering the taxes Doyle owes. And Guay said Doyle had every right to use the legal system to challenge the tax decisions.

Doyle, believed to be currently living in Panama, fled Canada in 1974 after the RCMP in Newfoundland charged him with defrauding Canadian Javelin Ltd. of 49,000 common shares worth $540,000. Doyle and four others face 406 counts of fraud on the operation of Javelin and its subsidiary, Bison Petroleum and Mineral Ltd.

The Supreme Court decision was one of four appeals Doyle has launched against revenue department reassessments of tax he owed in the 1950s. The court ruled earlier he owed $200,000 on his 1950 taxes. Dates have yet to be set for the other two cases to be heard in the Federal Court.

"The legal system doesn't always move with the dispatch we would like from the tax collection point of view," B. A. MacDonald, deputy revenue minister, told Crosbie.

Tall ship roster now six

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Captain Cook Bicentennial Committee has lined up six giant square-rigged sailing vessels for celebrations commemorating the English explorer's B.C. landfall in 1778, and is after three more clipper ships in South America.

Committee director Ed Sweeney said in an interview Thursday his organization has confirmed the participation of Japan's Nippon Maru, Kaiwo Maru, and Osprey, the Capitan Miranda from Uruguay, Argentina's Libertad and the U.S. Coast Guard's training ship, Eagle.

With masts standing 50 metres above her decks, the Libertad is by far the biggest of the tall ships that will visit B.C. She is an Argentine navy sail training vessel.

The Nippon Maru and Kaiwo Maru will visit Victoria June 16-20 and Vancouver June 21-27. The remaining four vessels are competing in the Tall Ships race from Hawaii to B.C. and are expected to arrive in Victoria around July 20.

Who else would bring you a car that does all this and doesn't use gasoline?

Here are a few hints.

The same people that some 25 odd years ago brought out a small car that stood the automotive world on its ear.

The same people that revolutionized the industry just a few years ago with the introduction of the most highly acclaimed and advanced auto of the last decade.

Yup, you guessed it. Who else but Volkswagen?

First the Beetle, then the Rabbit, and now the amazing VW Rabbit with an optional diesel engine.

And while there's nothing terribly new about the concept of a diesel powered passenger car, there are some things that are quite remarkable about the Rabbit Diesel.

First, it does everything that diesels are famous for. Like delivering spectacular fuel economy. (Transport Canada has rated the Rabbit Diesel as the very best car you can buy in the country for fuel economy.)

And since the diesel engine doesn't have a carburetor, or spark plugs, or a distributor, or points, or condenser, it never needs a major tune-up. Ever.

But on top of that, the Rabbit Diesel does something that diesels are famous for not being able to do. Like go from 0 to 80 km/h in a mere 11.5 seconds. In fact, the Rabbit Diesel has set 31 world records for 1500 cc diesels.

The price is very un-diesel-like, too. (Until the Rabbit Diesel came along, diesel passenger cars were a very expensive proposition.)

And then on top of all that, since the Rabbit Diesel is, after all, still a VW Rabbit it does all the things that a Rabbit is famous for. So you get sports car handling, rack and pinion steering, a unique "independent stabilizer rear axle", more than enough room to seat four adults comfortably, and more trunk space than a Cadillac Seville. Not to mention innovative standard safety features, some of which are not even available on most other cars as options.

This hard-to-believe car is now available at the only place you'd expect to find this kind of car. Your nearest Volkswagen dealership.

Where else?

The Rabbit Diesel.
Don't settle for less.

*Based on Transport Canada approved test methods. Fuel consumption will vary depending on how and where you drive, optional equipment and condition of your car. Based on EPA Interior Volume Index 1978.

Brezhnev warns of thermonuclear war

BONN (AP) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev told West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on Friday that the world might be engulfed in a thermonuclear war unless the East-West armaments race was halted, the Russian leader's aides reported.

In a 2½-hour meeting with Schmidt on the second day of his four-day visit to West Germany, Brezhnev described disarmament as the world's "most pressing political question," his aides told reporters.

Brezhnev said the pace of the arms race was moving faster than East-West efforts to reach a disarmament agreement and repeated his offer for a joint U.S.-Soviet pact renouncing production of the neutron bomb.

The United States developed the neutron warhead as a weapon against the Soviet Union's superior numbers of tanks in central Europe, and if President Carter decides to go ahead with production the weapons would be deployed in West Germany, NATO's first line of defence against a Soviet bloc invasion of Western Europe.

Carter has announced he is postponing a final decision on whether to build the bomb, which kills by high doses of radioactivity rather than massive explosions. He called on Brezhnev to show his goodwill by reducing the Soviet arsenal in return. But Brezhnev replied by calling on Carter to sign an agreement not to build neutron weapons, and Carter said the offer was meaningless because the Russians didn'tneed the bombs.

Leonid Zamiatin, Brezhnev's spokesman, said the Soviet leader told Schmidt that "the danger of a thermonuclear war remains" unless something was done to end the arms race.

In their talks Friday at Gymnich Castle, the government guesthouse 48 kilometres outside Bonn, Brezhnev and Schmidt expressed "strong interest" in reaching a "positive conclusion" of East-West disarmament talks on reducing troops in Europe and U.S.-Soviet strategic weapons.

The two men met alone in the stone castle as scores of West German border policemen with sub-machine-guns patrolled the fenced park outside, and Soviet plainclothesmen stood watch inside.

Both leaders looked solemn as they left the castle together in a black Mercedes limousine to return to Bonn for lunch. The 71-year-old Brezhnev appeared more relaxed and peppy than on Thursday, when he walked slowly and appeared to be tired after the long flight from Moscow.

Brezhnev
...pact urged

Brezhnev and Schmidt also discussed the status of West Berlin, the non-Communist half of Germany's pre-war capital, by East Germany, said Klaus Boelling, spokesman for the West German chancellor.

The Soviets' claim that West Berlin is separate from West Germany and that Bonn has no authority over it has blocked the signing of Soviet-West German accords on legal aid and cultural and technological exchanges.

A 1971 agreement signed by the four Allied victors over Nazi Germany—the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union—recognized West Germany's right to expand its ties with West Berlin. But Moscow claims that any Bonn government activities in the city are illegal, although it backs East Germany's claim on the eastern sector of the city for its capital.

West Berlin was also the theme of parallel talks between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher at another government guesthouse in Bonn.

Brezhnev and Schmidt will sign a 25-year economic cooperation agreement today before flying to Schmidt's home in Hamburg for more talks. Brezhnev is scheduled to leave West Germany on Sunday.

Germans watch as Brezhnev's health falters

BONN (Reuter) — Politics aside, the state of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's health has proved to be one of the big talking points of his visit to West Germany.

At 71, the Communist party chief is clearly showing his age.

From the moment he stepped slowly down the airplane gangway on arrival, Soviet aides and his West German hosts have repeatedly stretched out their hands to steady or support him.

In an incident caught by news photographers, he had to lean heavily on Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko as he struggled to get up from a low couch at the Bonn chancellery.

The contrast from 1973, when the party chief was last in Bonn, was apparent to West Germans who saw old television clips of an energetic, self-assured Brezhnev during that visit.

To handle any emergency, two Soviet ambulances equipped with heart-lung machines have been flown in from Moscow. Informed sources said one was intended for Brezhnev's time in Bonn, the other for his weekend stay in Hamburg.

Western diplomats said they understood Brezhnev's health could pose problems even before he arrived. The program apparently had to be carefully planned to allow him generous periods of rest between engagements.

His puffy-faced appearance, which has been compared to that of the late French president Georges Pompidou, led one popular West German newspaper to speculate the Kremlin chief was being treated with cortisone.

But although interest in Brezhnev's health has run high, nothing certain on the subject has so far emerged from the visit.

Moscow-based Western journalists who followed him here generally agreed that he looked better than at recent Kremlin engagements. Yet West Germans who compared him with the Brezhnev of five years ago were struck by the change.

Western theories on what afflicts him have ranged from heart trouble to leukemia and cancer of the jaw. But Soviet officials have never acknowledged that he suffers from anything worse than colds or influenza.

Official West German sources said they understood Brezhnev has an electronic heart pacemaker.

London port falling down

LONDON (Reuter)—The Port of London, 15 years ago the world's busiest, is heading toward bankruptcy, according to chairman John Cuckney.

He said in his annual report that only drastic action, including heavy manpower reductions, could avert huge deficits. The port now employs about 9,000 workers, down from the total 15 years ago of 30,000.

Based on present trends, losses would total $140 million by 1982, he said. Reserves of $96 million five years ago had already dwindled to nothing.

Wives beat inspectors in battle of potluck

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Ionia County housewives celebrated a sweet political victory this week with freshly baked pies.

A new state law was enacted protecting potluck dinners, bake sales and ice cream socials from overzealous health inspectors.

Housewife Eleanor Powell, who called attention to the problem, brought 25 of her friends and neighbors to the bill-signing ceremony in the Michigan House chambers—with 35 home-baked pies.

The new law creates a special loophole for charitable organizations that offer food to the public.

Mind and Man lecture topic

Christian Scientist Joseph G. Heard will lecture on Mind and Man Sunday at 3 p.m. in Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

In his lecture Heard suggests it is the intelligent, inspiring prayers of individuals that will do most to heal society's problems. He also stresses the important example set by Jesus Christ who prayed "I and my Father are one." Heard sees this as evidence of the Master's clear realization that effective intelligence comes from God.

"Our part," Heard explains, "is to discover the powerful idea that man is God's complete likeness. That man is not fragmentary, unsatisfied, incomplete. That man expresses God. That man is spiritual, not animal."

Heard suggests this recognition of man's close spiritual identification with God enables people to apply God-inspired intelligence to the effective resolution of problems such as pollution, inadequate food supplies and disease.

Heard

"This," he adds, "brings into our experience a great richness of enduring values that make our lives really meaningful."

A former Florida lawyer and Navy chaplain during the Korean War, Heard was educated at the University of Miami, the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard University. Prior to becoming a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, he headed the youth activities of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Professor O. Herbert Mowrer, an American psychologist, in one of his books tells about his taking to a Protestant church service a young Polish psychologist who was visiting the U.S.A. The visitor was "something of a Communist," and he had never before attended such a service. After leaving the church the Pole was pensively silent for a few minutes. Then, very seriously, he asked his host, "And what are all these people going to do now?"

That question should be asked about all of us who go to church regularly. What are we going to do when we return to the busy world? Does our worshipping have much to do with what we make of our lives, with what we do and think in ordinary life? Or does our worship tend to be an exercise in escape and evasion?

Christianity denies its biblical foundations when it tries to function as a Sunday-only religion, when it would be simply a perserve of piety in which its people can find refuge from the world.

We must not draw false distinctions between the sacred and the secular.

We Christians must build bridges between faith and the world, between the sacred and the secular—bridges capable of carrying heavy two-way traffic. But we must be careful to maintain a firm bridgehead on the faith side.

Openness toward the secular does not require that we trim and tidy our faith so that it does not clash with any of the currently fashionable secularisms. There is something ludicrous in trying to remove from Christianity everything which this secularist and that sceptic may challenge—and then presume to call the soppy residue "real Christianity."

But Christian faith must be responsive to the world and its concerns. Christian faith is primarily about our human existence under God, human existence in the here-and-now world and in its aspirations and destiny—and not merely about pious niceties and genteel respectabilities.

Christian faith, at its deepest levels, has to do with the meaning and purpose of our lives. It is faith which can defy the chaos and the confusions of any moment of time because its foundations are in what is above and beyond the here-and-now.

But Christian faith has its effective reality only in its creative initiatives toward the world: it is not a matter of redeeming persons out of the world but of redeeming persons in the world. It is both a Sunday-morning faith and a Monday-morning faith.

Academy singers eager to visit

The 35-member mixed youth choir and band of Auburn Adventist Academy, Auburn, Wash., will present a concert of sacred music at the Seventh-day Adventist Church, 983 Pandora, on May 13 at 11 a.m.

Their program consists of a wide range of classical, standard and contemporary choir music.

Mrs. Carl Jorgensen has directed the choir and band for several years and they have travelled extensively. The trip to Victoria is a kind of reward for the senior class students who are in this special group. They enjoy the scenery and stores of the capital city.

A concert is also scheduled for Seventh-day Adventist Church, Resthaven Drive, Sidney, May 13 at 9 a.m.

Twelve church choirs to sing

Twelve choirs will join today at 3:30 p.m. at Christ Church Anglican cathedral in a festival service titled The City compiled by the precentor of Coventry cathedral in England.

Most Rev. Godfrey Gower, retired archbishop of New Westminster, is chairman of the B.C. branch of the Royal School of Church Music, which seeks to help church choirs improve.

The 12 choirs come from churches and schols on Vancouver Island and the Mainland. Readers will be Very Rev. Brian Whitlow, dean of the cathedral, Rev. D. R. Chassels, Rev. James McCallum and July Bradshaw. Conductor is Patrick Wedd, oganist of Vancouver Cathedral.

●

This years' Interfaith Service is Sunday, May 14 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral. Theme is Family Rights in Our Canadian Mosaic.

Bishop Remi De Roo and the 40-voice choir from Pearson College of the Pacific will participate in the service.

●

Emmanuel Baptist church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road, will be holding a commissioning service for overseas missionaries at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The missionaries, who come from many Canadian centres, will be going to India, Africa and Bolivia on behalf of the Canadian Baptist Church.

Among the eight who will be present at Monday's service will be Ingrid White, of 3800 Hobbs in Victoria, a qualified teacher who took her training in this city.

Others are: June Marr, John and Martha Easter, Willard and Beverly Warnock and Randy and Elizabeth Legassie.

●

A canvas will be conducted Sunday in the Sidney and North Saanich areas to raise funds for Canadian Bible Society for Bible Society Sunday.

●

Rev. Brian Page, for many years rector of St. Barnabas, returns to Victoria this month to minister at St. Dunstan's Anglican church, Gordon Head. Recently, Page has been theologian in residence at Hythorpe Hall, England.

Rev. W. J. Lunny, rector of St. Dunstan's, will be on study leave this summer at Oriel College, Oxford.

●

The Vocal Jazz Ensemble of the University of Washington will perform at the 11 a.m. service of First United Church on Sunday, the last of its first Canadian tour.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

The group, of 20 vocalists accompanied by an instrumental quartet, all students at the university, has a repetoire that includes swing, latin, blues, gospel and jazz-rock numbers.

●

The first patronal festival for the new Victoria parish of St. Athanasius, the first in Canada to form under the banner of the traditionalist Anglican Church in North America, takes place Sunday at 2 p.m. in Grace Lutheran Church, Fort St.

Their patron saint, St. Athanasius, famed as the defender of orthodoxy in the troubled fourth century, fought almost alone against a hostile ecclesiastical establishment. Banished on five separate occasions, his life was saved by the skin of his teeth. He was greatly loved by his people in Egypt, who coined the phrase Athanasius contra mundum (Athanasius against the world). The creed which was named in his honor summarizes the orthodox faith of the undivided Catholic Church.

Father Roland Palmer of Toronto, the former superior of SSJE (the Cowley Fathers) will be the preacher. Well known for his books, hymns and missions, he is sometimes called the father of the Canadian Prayer Book. He will be glad to meet old friends informally after the Mass.

Victoria Alliance Church, 1792 Townley, will show the 1978 film Pilgrim's Progress Sunday at 7 p.m.

The book by John Bunyan, upon which the film is based, is second only to the Bible in number of copies sold. It was written 300 years ago during Bunyan's imprisonment for failing to conform to the establishment of his day. This immortal classic speaks as clearly and meaningfully to today's generation as it did in Bunyan's time.

The film follows the pilgrim through the Slough of Despond, over the Hill of Difficulty, past Vanity Fair. Along the way he meets men like Pliable, Mr. Obstinate, Mr. Worldly Wise, Evangelist, Mr. Interpreter, and, constantly plotting to keep Christian from reaching the Celestial City, Apollyn.

The film is an abreviated adaptation but the 72 minutes will be well spent as you travel with the pilgrim. Pastor Orlin Craig and the congregation invite the public to attend.

Padre chairs church council justice study

The Victoria Council of Churches is sponsoring a public study of the criminal-justice system and the alternatives program. President Alf Johnson this week announced that Padre H. Gordon Walker is the chairman.

The first meeting for all interested people is slated for Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. in St. John's Old Rectory, behind the church at Mason and Quadra. The proposed program will be discussed and follow-up meetings arranged at this initial meeting.

The program intends to show what prison is and what it does to people. It involves understanding what awaits the convicted offender, what the criminal-justice system ought to do, and how it may be made more humane and effective. The program will deal with crime and reconciliation, community involvement with the offender, citizen participation, parole, community correction centres and the return of the inmate to the community. Proposed alternatives such as diversion will be investigated.

Interested members of the general public, school officials, church people, social workers and people such as staff, former inmates, politicians and lawmakers involved with the criminal-justice system should be especially interested in attending.

Those who choose to come to the meeting will be expected to share their experiences, concepts, and insights; to ask questions and to listen and to learn from each other.

Rev. Gordon, the chairman, has had experience conducting group meetings similar to this one. He was padre at Wilkinson Road Institution in the 1960s and for the past several years has served at William Head Institution and the Pandora CC Centre.

Service of worship aids students' visit

DOAKTOWN, N.B. (CP) — Doaktown United Church conducted a Sunday worship service partly in French to mark the visit to the community of two French-speaking exchange students from Quebec.

Hymns, psalms and gospel lessons were sung and read in both languages.

Rev. Malcolm T. Cogswell said barriers between French- and English-speaking Canadians will be broken down "not by either giving up its identity but by both appreciating the richness of our differences."

●

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — John Lantham, 41, recently left the retail business to become an ordained minister of the Anglican Church.

Rev. Bill Craven of St. John's Anglican Church, where the ordination ceremony took place, said being a minister was a late vocation for Latham, who had been in both the shoe and paint businesses.

"He wanted to help people and he felt the spiritual way was the best," said Craven.

Latham graduated from the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont., with a bachelor of theology.

●

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Peter Jones, president of the Canadian Council of Christian and Jews, says the world will be in trouble if people do not learn to respect the differences between people.

Speaking at a high school seminar, he said Canada could play a major role in learning to respect each other's differences.

"We live in a huge, beautiful hunk of geography," he said. "We should be citizens of the earth and not just Canadians."

●

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. A. C. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, says raising the legal drinking age in Ontario to 20 from 18 would do little to solve the province's alcohol problem.

The editor wrote in the recent issue of the magazine that the problem is mainly an adult one.

He said the laws which forbid an 18-year-old from drinking, but allow him to vote, marry and defend his country seem hypocritical.

"Until we who are older make a sincere attempt to clean up this act, we doubt that there will be value in passing laws to keep young adults from doing what old adults have no intention of doing without."

Paper ads help to swell order

OTTAWA (CP) — The Missionaries of the Holy Family, less known than other Roman Catholic communities, is using newspaper advertisements to recruit priests and brothers to the order.

Rev. Danny Hawkins, sent to Ottawa from the United States a number of years ago to start a Canadian congregation, said 20 men have been recruited in the last few years and 10 still are in the order.

The ad is important because the order is not as well-known as the Jesuits, Franciscans and the Dominicans, he said.

Appearing in papers across Canada, the ad shows a sketch of Christ with the words: "Wanted, men to serve this man in developing man and his society."

The order was founded in 1895 and has 2,000 members worldwide. To be accepted one must have a college degree or the ability to gain one, and take vows of chastity, obedience and poverty.

Failed as hood, he joins ministry team

The Church of the Way has a new minister. Pastor Bill Johns announced that Brian Ruud officially joined the ministering team of the church May 1.

A few years ago Ruud was a man obsessed with crime. He was not much more than a pill-popping hoodlum. It was in solitary confinement that Ruud was converted. He had tried to take his life and failed at that. His story is told in a popular book entitled Son of a Preacher Man.

Now Ruud is a crusading minister who speaks to thousands of high school young people and families every year in high school auditoriums and city-wide crusades.

He relates to people where it's really at with LSD, "speed," and marijuana. Ruud has lectured in Chicago, New York and Las Vegas and it is not unusual to see thousands of people at his crusades.

Ruud, his wife Gayle and their two children now reside in Victoria. The Church of the Way is excited about the possibilities of crusades by their new minister in Victoria and on Vancouver Island. In fact, a crusade is now being planned for October in Victoria.

Economic problems with Japan

U.S. protectionism may grow

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

WASHINGTON (CP) — Although Japan and the United States have been edging closer toward economic co-operation, serious differences remain beneath a veneer of friendly rhetoric.

Now diplomatically forgotten are the recent days when presidential spokesmen stated bluntly and publicly that tough measures would be taken against Japanese goods if Japan did not sharply lower its trade surplus.

Instead, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance said during the Washington visit by Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda that the United States believes Japan has a strong commitment to lower the trade surplus by buying more American products. "Good progress" has been made and more progress will follow, Vance said.

Choosing optimism, the secretary stressed Japanese efforts and ignored questioning whether the Japanese government will meet its pledged goals.

Unofficial forecasts are that the Japanese ecomic growth will hit 5.5 per cent at the end of this year, not the seven per cent promised by Fukuda during his meeting Wednesday with President Carter. If the unofficial forecasts are correct, Japan will not absorb enough U.S. goods to meet the goal of reducing its annul trade surplus with the United States to $6 billion from $9 billion.

The lack of such a reduction may increase U.S. protectionist sentiments, adding another problem in fragile efforts to revive world trade.

For such reasons, the recent Mexico City meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMC) urged faster economic growth in Japan, as well as in other countries not bearing their share of the industrialized world's collective trade deficit with oil-producing countries.

But there is much more to the story than that.

The IMF meeting also expressed concern about instability in world exchange rates, a reference to the recently-falling value of the U.S. dollar. The Canadian dollar also has dropped.

Japanese officials have complained, with varying degrees of resentment, that the United States has been sabotaging world economic recovery by allowing the dollar's value to decline.

The Japanese feel they have been unfairly portrayed as the villains in a trade dispute when the problem goes far beyond simple trade figures.

Koichi Inamura, a senior adviser to the Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan, said in a recent interview that U.S. officials do not recognize how greatly fluctuations in the value of the dollar affect the world economy and particularly such trading powers as Japan.

"The U.S. has the key currency in the world trade and accounts for around 40 per cent of the total GNP (gross national production) of OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development) member countries.

"Thus if the dollar fluctuates too much now, no other country in the free world can stabilize her economy."

Yukio Suzuki, deputy chairman of the Nihon Keizai Shinbun editorial board, argues pithily that U.S. currency mismanagement is preventing Japan from fulfilling U.S. trade demands.

"The rapid increase of the yen exchange rate against the U.S. dollar is seriously inflicting damage on Japan's exports," he says.

"The deflationary effect produced by this is making it virtually impossible for the Japanese government to attain its goal, or economic forecast, of a real growth of seven per cent for fiscal year 1978."

U.S. officials, he suggests, see only that a higher yen will discourage exports of Japanese goods and the officials assume that will mean a lower Japanese trade surplus.

But, he says, the effect on exports mean lower economic growth, lower profits, lower business confidence—and thus lower Japanese imports, precisely the opposite of what the United States is trying to achieve.

"There is even the possibility that Japan's imports will decline sharply in the near future if exports were to completely stop or drastically decrease due to the blow extended by a higher yen."

And such a trend would be a major impetus toward an uncontrollable general "deflationary spiral," the current term for another great depression.

Japanese fears have eased somewhat in recent weeks as the United States, after long ignoring the problem, finally announced some technical steps to prop up the dollar.

THIS HOUSE WAS DESIGNED FOR HANDICAPPED

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist Reporter

A dream come true.

That's how four handicapped people describe their new home at 238 Obed in Saanich.

It was 2½ years ago that they first got together to plan a home of their own, an uninstitutional kind of place where they could live in a regular neighborhood and take care of their own needs.

Many hours of work, about $88,000, and much volunteer support later, they opened their new home officially on Friday, welcoming about 40 well-wishers to the single-storey 2,000 square-foot residence they have christened Obed House.

Designed by architect Vic Davis, the building is newer than other homes in the surrounding area but relatively unobtrusive. A central activity area used for dining, watching television, and just about everything else, opens on to a large patio. To one side of this area are three bedrooms and 1½ bathrooms, including the bedroom and half-bath for attendant Larry McDermid. To the other side are two more bedrooms, a kitchen, bathroom and work room.

The whole house has been designed with wheelchair users in mind, and is the first group home in Victoria to be constructed from the ground up for the handicapped (another successful group home has been operating for about two years in a renovated house on Falmouth Road). The kitchen's low counters and front plug-ins, the bathrooms with their wheel-in showers, and the home's alarm system make it both convenient and safe for the handicapped.

The four people living in the home—Linda Langille, Richard Bennett, Judy Milligan and Tom Daykin—selected each other as residents for the home, and have been involved in designing the home itself.

McDermid is a full-time attendant for the home, but stresses that the residents, and not he, run it. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation provided mortgage funds for the home, and the human resources ministry pays operating expenses beyond what the residents can afford.

The home first started taking shape when the G.R. Pearkes Clinic purchased the property on which it sits, and then served as the catalyst in getting the residents together. Clinic director Derek Thompson says "there is no reason for handicapped adults capable of living independently to live in institutional settings."

The G.R. Pearkes board has found that group home residents adjust extremely well to their new settings and will probably continue to initiate such projects where possible, Thompson said. The clinic also maintains contact with the Group Home Independent Living Society, which officially operates the two group homes in Victoria.

The residents themselves, three of whom are in wheelchairs, find their new home a strong, and pleasant contrast to their former surroundings. Linda and Tom formerly stayed in the Gorge Hospital which is fine for sick people but difficult for those for whom independence is an important goal.

"It sure beats living in a hospital," Linda said in an interview. Daykin said it is much quieter than in the Gorge, although the bustle of Larry and Judy preparing a dinner in the kitchen nearby indicated there is plenty going on.

Richard Bennett had been living with his family before coming to the new group home.

"I didn't know there was so much to do. I have more responsibility now."

Is he ready to move back home?

"This is my home now," he said with a laugh.

Judy, who communicates through a portable signing device on which she types out a message, introduces herself as "the noisy one of the bunch."

She formerly lived in an apartment with a live-in homemaker, sponsored by the James Bay Community Association, and stayed in a wheelchair until a few months ago, when new treatments she is receiving for multiple sclerosis enabled her to leave it.

From the window the residents of Obed House can see a small aviary in the yard next door. That touch is one little detail that convinces the Obed House residents that they are in the right place, for the other group home on Falmouth Road also has an aviary next to it.

"Next time they build something like this they're going to have to find one with an aviary," Linda laughed.

Behind the scenes at Obed House ceremony

As they opened the house Rick just went on raking

Rick White of 4375 is unemployed, but on the other hand, you couldn't really say he isn't gainfully employed.

For the last 1½ weeks he's been toiling around Obed House, 238 Obed, a new group home for four handicapped persons, doing the landscaping for the new home free of charge.

Why? "Boredom, I guess. And I like doing this work."

White gained a year's experience in landscaping at Nanaimo before going to the Yukon to do some pipefitting. Victoria-born, he says there is no work to be had in this area, and he may be heading back north again to see what he can get there.

In the meantime, he learned from friends at a boys' club about the project at 238 Obed, which the boys club was helping to landscape, and offered to lend a hand. Plants were ordered and set in an attractive bark-filled border around the house. They attracted the attention of, among others, gardening enthusiast Senator Ray Perrault, who attended the official opening of Obed House on Friday.

While Perrault was giving his speech to a crowd of neatly-dressed dignitaries in the new home's sheltered patio, White was out on the grounds in little more than a pair of jeans, contouring the topsoil.

Perrault offered the usual congratulations to everyone involved, including the people who had chosen the rhododendrons. After the official announcements were over he leaned across the fence to talk gardening with White.

"There's one guy who really deserves an award," he said, after learning that White was unemployed but helping out anyway.

Writs obtained in Saanich bid for back taxes

Saanich municipality Friday obtained supreme court writs against 10 major property owners who still haven't paid about $117,000 in 1977 taxes.

The move is part of a concerted effort by council to limit the burden on the average homeowner, finance chairman Ald. David Paterson said Friday night.

Paterson explained that although the municipality will collect on the taxes eventually, any back taxes not paid by Dec. 31, the end of the fiscal year for municipalities, become liabilities on the subsequent year's taxes.

"And if it comes down to a tax sale, we can't spend the land. We need dollars," he said.

Paterson said that at last Dec. 31, more than $1 million was outstanding in back taxes. This had been reduced to about $290,000 owed by 18 major delinquents a few weeks ago, when council sent out legal notices informing them writs would be issued unless payment was made.

The next legal step against the delinquents was the filing of writs Friday.

Named are:

- Michael C. Williams, owing $15,773.
- Longhorn Enterprises Ltd., $19,809.
- G. Plan Properties Ltd., $11,186.
- Longhorn Steakhouses Ltd., $13,137.
- Aske Construction Ltd., $13,561.
- Vista Homes Ltd., $14,174.
- Garr Management Ltd., $14,473.
- Selkirk Developments Ltd., $5,225.
- Ralph S. Shepherd, $6,925.
- Kreiger, Stricker and Co. Ltd., $5,422.

Paterson said he recognized last year was a bad one for the property development industry, and expected this one would be better, but council felt the smaller property owners shouldn't be penalized in their behalf.

Lawyers protest lack of space

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

The head of the Victoria Bar Association has criticized interview facilities at the Law Courts building, calling them "disgraceful" and accusing provincial court services officials of reneging on promises made nearly three months ago.

Dean Wilson said Friday the problem of proper interview facilities was a serious one and that his association had made known its requirements since the fall of 1977.

He said the association wanted and had been promised three interview rooms, and that when the provincial courts moved from the Fisgard Street location Feb. 16, only one was available—a little janitors' store room measuring 3½- to four-feet wide, six- to eight-feet long and eight-feet high.

Wilson said a plexiglass partition which divides the room roughly in half prevented lawyers and clients from hearing each other unless they shouted. People could "hear better outside than in the same room."

He said the preoccupation with security was misplaced.

Wilson said representatives of the bar met Feb. 13, three days before the provincial courtrooms began full operation in the Burdett Street building, with Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Supreme Court and Chief provincial Court Judge Lawrence Brahan, as well as members of the court services branch to iron out any difficulties. He said the three interview rooms were discussed and the lawyers were assured they would have them. Wilson said one of the court services representatives even went up to him later and asked him to submit a letter requesting the three interview rooms. Although he wrote that day, nothing had happened since, Wilson said.

Wilson also said he was assured Friday that money—which was mentioned as the main stumbling block—had been made available for the renovations but he asked when it would be done.

MP's question put to labor for phrasing

If organized labor doesn't like the way Victoria MP Allan McKinnon puts a question to his constituents, then perhaps labor would like to word the question for him.

That proposition comes from the Conservative member himself.

McKinnon said he made the offer to Victoria Labor Council president John Shields Friday and was told by Shields it would be "taken up with the executive."

"I thought he would have jumped at the chance," said McKinnon, who had been criticized Wednesday night by the labor council for the way he handled the thorny issue of the right to work movement in a recent questionnaire.

Delegates to the labor council meeting were critical of the fact that the McKinnon question simply asked constituents if they favored the right to work movement, without giving any description of the movement. The movement was born in the southern U.S. and labor says the 20 states where right to work legislation exists have substandard working conditions and pay rates. They say it destroys the union shop concept and is actually a weapon for emasculating the labor movement.

Also bothering the labor council was the comment offered by McKinnon on his printed report of the questionnaire results. He said he was surprised that 75 per cent of the respondents favored the movement and suggested it was possibly time his party started taking the matter seriously.

McKinnon
. . . his offer

McKinnon said Friday night it wasn't a matter of advocating right-to-work legislation. He said the Conservative party favors the Rand Formula—a formula which would allow lemployees to remain outside a union, but would make it necessary for them to abide by certain rules. In return for services received, they would have to pay an amount of money equalling the union dues.

McKinnon said he told Shields that if the labor council wanted to re-word the question to suit itself he would include it in his next questionnaire.

He suggested the council might find it difficult to do so in an objective manner.

Book store adopts Blencoe discount

A sign offering a 10 per cent discount to senior citizens appeared Friday in window of Book Mine, a bookstore at 841 Fort.

It was the first since Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe's appeal early this week for a discount on purchases of all goods and services by senior citizens.

Blencoe, meanwhile, hopes to have posters made saying: "Senior Citizen Store." The posters would be distributed to all firms willing to give the discount to the elderly.

Anniversary

Saturday night visiting hours at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain are 9 to 11 p.m. from now until September, when they will revert to 8 to 10 p.m. However, for tonight only, the dome of the 1.85-metre telescope will be open for public viewing from sunset (8:35 p.m.) to midnight on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the commissioning of the telescope.

Study costs almost as much as the outfall

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

It's going to cost the Capital Region District $560,000 to make an environmental study of the proposed $600,000 McMicking Point outfall.

And after the outfall is built, the studies may show that it should be abandoned.

Consultants for the outfall will be Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co., the committee was told.

The figures were presented Thursday to a special committee concerned with monitoring the proposed 600-foot outfall into Enterprise Channel, and caused at least one committee member some concern.

"When I went to engineering school a 10 per cent charge to guess costs and impact could lose you your job," noted provincial health ministry representative Gerry Duffield. "Here you are talking about 100 per cent."

"And," put in Sooke director Charles Perkins, "at the end of three years the study may result in the Pollution Control Branch saying 'shut her down.'"

"This is the highest possible cost I am presenting, and it's not cost estimates, it's a little different," commented Dr. Derek Ellis of the University of Victoria's biology department who will be co-ordinating the studies.

Ellis agreed with fisheries department representative Vaughan Thomas that much of the material which would come out of the study would provide answers to questions being asked at other outfall sites. He felt that about 50 per cent of the cost would be exclusively of benefit to McMicking. He promised to present figures to the public works committee showing how much of the study costs would be inevitable for construction purposes, and which parts of the study would have a value which could be offset against general information on Victoria area sewers. The balance, he said would be directly chargable to the McMicking project.

Cost of the first year of studies he estimated at $245,000, and that monitoring program would provide a basis for the next two years of studies which would follow installation of the sewer.

It was decided to get the breakdown of apportionment of costs, and meanwhile to pass Ellis' proposal to the Pollution Control Branch for comment.

Ellis said he needs to know what contaminants are present in the sewage being put into the ocean off Oak Bay. Most of the flow from Oak Bay sewers, he said, was storm water, which could be loaded with insecticides, pesticides and lead from highway runoff. Until the present time the pollution control branch has not shown much interest in storm water runoff, but Ellis felt the attitude was changing and information would be needed.

On previous occasions, Ellis said, he had not been in on the start of a program. This time he had the opportunity to put together information with which to answer criticisms if the decision was to proceed with the project after that information was in.

Perkins suggested that priority be given to tidal and current studies to see if sewage put out into the channel would stay off local beaches, but Ellis said such a concept would put the project back some 12 months since the scientific information would also be needed before construction could start.

Ellis agreed that his studies would be more comprehensive than any done previously but said that demands had increased along with the ability to do more sophisticated work.

"The public concerns have been very vociferously expressed, and I am sure there are going to be more concerns expressed over the next few years," Ellis said. "I have made my recommendations in the light of the concerns at Esquimalt Lagoon because I feel the board should have a comprehensive assessment to meet criticisms which have been levelled at outfalls in the area."

Duffield said it was impossible to prove that something would not do any harm. "There has not been enough money printed to allay the fears although the concerns are really more social than scientific."

Duffield contended that much of the material that washes back on to beaches is not contaminated sewage, but plastic material readily identified by the public as sewage, and it will not break down.

There was difficulty decided how much information would be needed in order to get a PCB permit to build the outfall, he said.

"The branch may issue a permit, and then this little noisy minority that is opposed but which is very well organized will go for an appeal which will be granted and then the board will look at it and will uphold the appeal and you are back to square one," he said.

"I don't know how you score in this game because somebody keeps moving the goal posts."

"The number of objectors isn't great. It's just the decibels that seem to get measured."

Finnish loss assures Canada of world playoff spot

PRAGUE (AP) — The United States, winless in five previous starts, won a furious battle of tailenders Friday with a surprise 7-3 victory over East Germany at the world hockey championship.

Harvey Bennett of Minnesota North Stars and Mike Eaves of the University of Wisconsin scored two goals each as the U.S. squad pulled even in the standings at 1-5 with the East Germans and Finland, a 5-3 loser to West Germany in Friday's other game.

Canada, 3-2, resumes play today against Sweden, 4-1, while the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia meet in a matchup of the two unbeaten teams.

East Germany took a 1-0 lead on Jachim Stasche's unassisted goal at 1:31 of the first period. However, Bennett's first of the game tied it at 6:08 and the Americans went ahead to stay on Eaves' first, on a power-play, at 9:41.

The Canada-Sweden contest will be televised on channel 8, beginning at 11:30 a.m. PST.

Curt Bennett of St. Louis Blues, Pat Westrum of Birmingham Bulls and Mike Fidler of Cleveland Barons got the other U.S. goals. Friedhelm Boegelsack and Rolf Bielas were the other East German scorers.

Pete LoPresti of the North Stars was a standout in the goal as the East Germans outshot the Americans 47-30.

The game was a rough encounter which ended in a bench-clearing brawl after Westrum was struck in the face by a high stick. Boegelsack got a minor penalty for his part in the altercation, while Westrum was assessed a major. Bill Gilligan of Cincinnati Stingers received a major and misconduct.

Harvey Bennett received a minor and major after a stick-swing duel with East German defenceman Joachim Lempio.

Meanwhile, the Finnish loss ensured Canada's elevation into the top four and a berth in the playoff round. The Canadians needed either a loss or a tie by the Finns, who upset them 6-4 in the opening game of the preliminary round-robin.

Seppo Repo scored two goals for Finland, but it wasn't enough to prevent the West Germans from all but guaranteeing themselves a continuing berth in the A group next year.

West Germany faces rival East Germany in the final game Sunday after a game between Finland and the U.S.

NFL castoffs enter the Leos' CFL fold

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have signed four more players, including three imports, to 1978 Canadian Football League contracts, the Western Football Conference team announced Friday.

They are imports Frank Oliver of Kentucky State, Bill Rice of Brigham Young University and Gary Evans of Iowa State, and Canadian Terry Davis of the University of Western Ontario.

Oliver, 26, is a defensive back who had two tryouts in the National Football League with San Francisco '49ers, Buffalo Bills and Tampa Bay Bucaneers. The six-foot-one, 196-pounder was released by the '49ers last year.

Rice, 24, tried out with the NFL New York Giants last year as a defensive tackle. He's six-foot-four and 257 pounds.

Evans, 22, is an offensive tackle who dropped out of college last year with one year of eligibility remaining. He's six-foot-three and 230 pounds.

The Lions selected Davis, 24, in the 1977 CFL Canadian draft, but the six-foot-two, 240-pound guard elected to return to school.

More tests for ailing runner

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuter) — New Zealand track star John Walker, suffering from a recurring calf ailment which is threatening his athletics career, will undergo tests on his leg on Monday.

On the basis of the results of the tests, which were put back from today, Walker will decide whether he has a chance of competing in the Commonwealth Games at Edmonton in August.

Walker, holder of the world mile record, had an operation on his right calf in February aimed at curing a mysterious cramp which troubled him after he had run about five miles (eight kilometres).

After recovering from the operation, he cautiously began training and gradually built up to 80 miles (130 kilometres) a week with no sign of the cramp returning.

But a few weeks ago, when he tried to increase his weekly mileage, the cramp struck again, halting his training.

Rollick into semi-finals

EDMONTON (CP) — Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, using his patented smash at key points, outlasted Ken Priestman of Kitchenerin men's single quarter-finals at the Canadian badminton championships.

Rollick, 35, lost the first set 12-15, but won 15-10, 15-5 in the next two sets for the right to meet John Czich of Ottawa today in a semi-final match.

Czich defeated Pat Tryon of Montreal 4-15, 15-9, 15-8.

Defending-champion Jamie McKee of Toronto and Lucio Fabris of Creighton Mines, Ont., whipped John Taylor of Vancouver 15-7, 15-0 and Don Smith of Calgary 15-7, 15-2, respectively.

McKee, Czich, Rollick and Fabris, in that order, were the top four seeds in the 60-man field for the championships, from which Canada's Commonwealth Games team will be named.

A mild upset was posted in women's singles when Barbara O'Brien of Ottawa defeated Johanne Falardeau of Quebec City 11-7, 12-11 for the right to meet top-seeded Wendy Clarkson of Calgary in a semi-final today.

Clarkson survived a tough second set to defeat Claire Backhouse of Vancouver 11-1, 12-10 while in the other quarter-finals, second-seeded Jane Youngberg of Surrey downed Lesley Harris of Calgary 11-3, 11-3 and Sharon Crawford of Calgary bounced Helen Binns of Montreal 11-7, 11-2.

Crawford, seeded fourth, had a difficult time reaching the quarter-finals. She needed three sets to nip Sandra Skillings of Vancouver 6-11, 11-2, 12-11 in a morning round.

Nuggets capture series opener

David Thompson hit three crucial jumpshots in the final three minutes and Denver Nuggets overcame foul problems to defeat Seattle SuperSonics 116-107 Friday night in the opening game of their National Basketball Association semi-final playoff series.

The second game in the Western Conference final will be played here Sunday, with the next two contests scheduled for Seattle.

The SuperSonics, who fell behind by as much as 13 points early in the second half, kept things close by scoring 47 points from the free throw line.

Thompson recovered from a poor shooting first half to finish with 23 points and Anthony Roberts had 22.

Seattle centre Marvin Webster, a former Nugget, took game honors with 28 points and scored 13 straight Seattle points to keep the Sonics within range midway through the game. Forward John Johnson added 21.

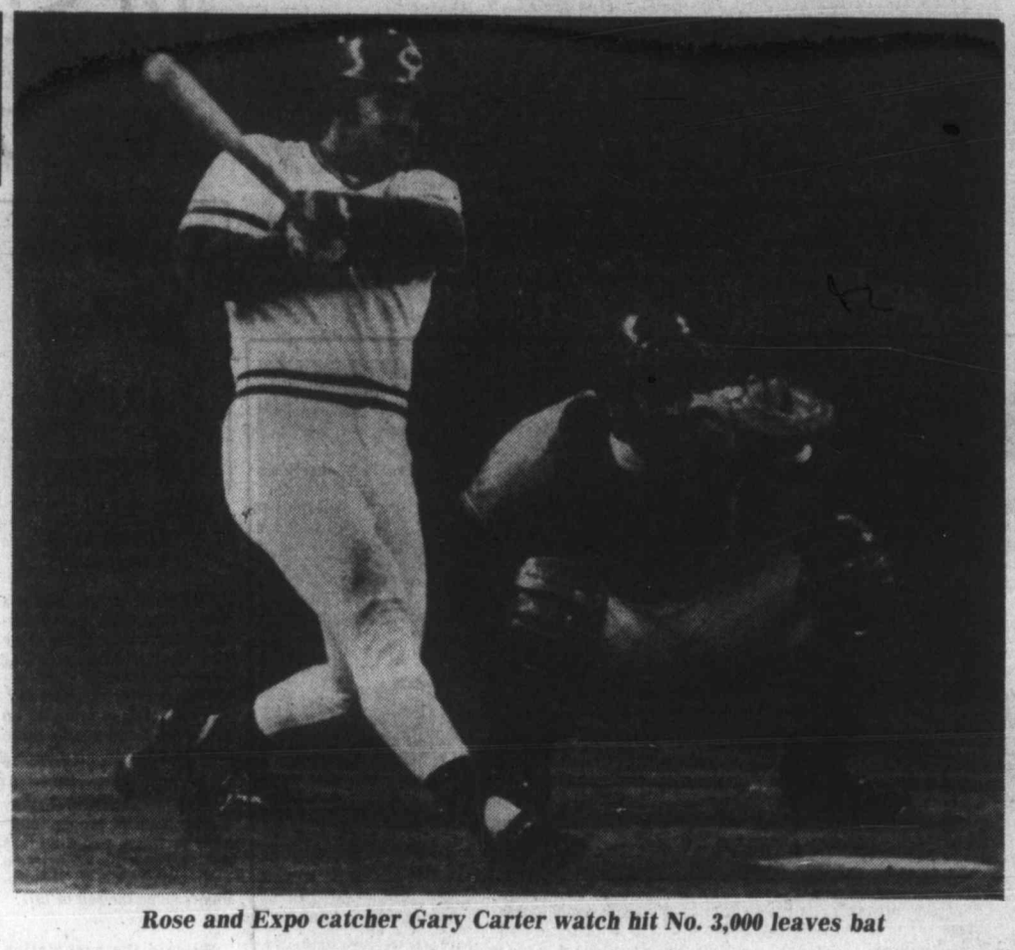

At Landover, Md., Bob Dandridge scored 30 points for Washington while Julius Erving managed only 11 for Philadelphia as the Bullets whipped the '76ers 123-108 in a rough playoff game.

The victory gave the Bullets a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven semi-final, with the fourth game to be played on Washington's home court Sunday afternoon.

Clinic today

More than 100 girls will attend a junior Olympics field hockey clinic at the University of Victoria today.

The girls, aged 9-16, will receive instruction from the UVic Vikettes varsity field hockey team from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Rose and Expo catcher Gary Carter watch hit No. 3,000 leaves bat

Rose collects 3,000th hit Ryan fires fifth one-hitter

Calling his shot, Pete Rose joined baseball's exclusive 3,000-hit club Friday night and then set his sights on Stan Musial's National League record of 3,630.

And amid all the ruckus, Nolan Ryan of the American League's California Angels, reached a milestone of his own.

"With a couple of strong seasons in the next two or three years, I can do it," the Cincinnati Reds' star said after collecting two hits off Montreal's Steve Rogers to reach his latest milestone.

It wasn't enough, however, as Rogers scattered six hits and struck out 10 in the Expos' 4-3 victory.

On Thursday, Rose had predicted he would reach the magic total Friday night to prevent a conflict with Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

After narrowly missing a hit in the first inning with a liner to left, he bounced a high chopper to the mound in the third for hit No. 2,999.

When Rose went to the plate in the fifth, to the roar of more than 37,000 fans, Rogers wasn't going to play cat-and-mouse.

"At that point, I said, 'To heck with it—go right at him,'" said Rogers, adding that both hits came on fast balls on the inside of the plate."

The switch-hitting Rose is the 13th player to enter the 3,000-hit shrine.

Ryan tossed the sixth one-hitter of his career for the Angels 5-0 victory over Cleveland Indians. He allowed only a sixth inning single by Duane Kuiper and he also struck out 12 batters to move into No. 12 spot in the all-time list.

Ryan lost his bid for a record fifth no-hitter when Kuiper, batting just .193, singled inside the third-base line in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the National League, Tommy Boggs belted his first major league home run and recorded his first league victory as Atlanta Braves defeated Houston Astros 5-2; Philadelphia Phillies dumped New York Mets 9-4; San Diego Padres nipped St. Louis Cardinals 2-1; and Los Angeles Dodgers clipped Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2.

Boggs had a 1-10 record during two seasons with Texas Rangers in the American League before the Braves acquired him in a trade, He worked seven innings, allowing five hits, before being relieved by Eddy Solomon.

In the American League, Thurman Munson had three hits and drove in two runs to lead New York Yankees to their fifth consecutive victory, a 5-2 triumph over Texas Rangers. The loss broke a seven-game Texas winning streak.

Baltimore Orioles got by Minnesota Twins 2-1; Milwaukee Brewers blitzed Kansas City 9-0; and Oakland A's pinned a 5-1 defeat on Detroit Tigers.

Rookie John Johnson tossed a four-hitter as Oakland collected its fifth consecutive victory.

The A's improved their record to 19-5—tops in the majors—in winning the battle between the American League's division leaders which attracted a paid crowd of 14,612—second largest of the season at the Coliseum.

SOFTBALL ROUNDUP

A's, Elks win

Larry McKinnon beat out an infield hit, advanced on a wild pitch and scored the winning run in the eighth inning Friday night, as Victoria Athletics nipped Capital Builders 6-5 in a Heywood Men's Softball League game.

Successive singles by Ryan and Bernie Talbot brought McKinnon around after the clubs went into extra innings. A four-run Capital outburst in the sixth knotted the score after Victoria built up a 5-1 lead over four innings.

In the only Stuffy McGinnis League game, meanwhile, Ernie Holness stayed in command for the distance, doling out six hits in pitching Elks to an easy 7-1 decision over Juan de Fuca Builders at Central Park.

Holness' only mistake was a home-run pitch thrown to Pat Duncan in the third inning. In seven innings, he struck out three batters and walked two.

Elks brought out the lumber early, scoring three runs in the first inning. Mike Lee hit a homer with a man on in the fifth and Alf Hass led off the sixth inning with a bases-empty shot off losing pitcher Ken Gordon.

At Sanscha Park, Prairie Inn managed to steal a 3-2 decision from Harvey's Sporting Goods in the only Sidney Men's Association contest. A passed ball in the seventh inning allowed the winning run to score.

Winning pitcher was Jim Bowden, while Dick Michaud was handed the loss.

FA Cup final opens TV fare on hectic day

A world-wide television audience estimated at four hundred million will watch Arsenal and Ipswich Town battle today at Wembley Stadium for one of England's top soccer honors, the English Football Association Cup.

And the TV audience for the Kentucky Derby, on a particularly interesting day of telecasting for sports fans, may be as great. Among other events being offered are the Canada-Sweden world hockey championship game, Stanley Cup action, the Byron Nelson Golf Classic, the usual baseball games and other odds and ends of live and taped shows.

Inside Wembley Stadium, where the Cup final has been played since 1923, will be 92,000 who have been able to acquire tickets literally worth their weight in gold.

Many times this number of rabid soccer fans would go to almost any lengths to secure a ticket for English soccer's greates spectacle. It is the great "scalping" day of the year for ticket touts, the opportunists who buy tickets and sell them for 20 times their face value.

Paradoxically, Cup finals are often disappointing from the purely football point of view. With so much at stake, players are affected by extreme nervous tension, and they find the fresh, lush turf of the little-used Wembley pitch a big contrast to the grounds on which they have recently been playing.

The millions of British soccer fans who cannot be at Wembley mostly call a halt to their normal activities to watch on television. The Cup final is given saturation coverage, with both British channels opening up their Wembley broadcasts hours before the kick-off as build-up to live transmission of the match.

On the field it is moment-by-moment combat in which one bad slip can mean the loss of the trophy and a sad end to the run of five wins in the knock-out competition which has brought each team to the Wembley showdowns.

The winners not only take the Cup but also earn the right to play in the money-spinning European Cup-Winners Cup the following season.

Arsenal, which has won the Cup four times, is an even-money favorite to prevail Saturday. Ipswich Town, in the final for the first time, is on offer at 5 to 2, with 9 to 4 quoted against a draw after 90 minute play.

Arsenal also has the better recent form. It ook fourth place in the league championship while Ipswich finished in the bottom half. And Ipswich has been bludgeoned by injuries and ended a series of poor results in the league with a 6-1 defeat by Aston Villa last Saturday.

But manager Bobby Robson is unshakenly optimistic.

"Being the underdogs helps ease the tension and that suits us fine," he commented. "West Bromwich Albion were favorites to beat us in the semi-finals and Arsenal seem to be most people's choice this time, but that does not worry us in the least."

A CBC spokesman in Vancouver said Friday night that the FA Cup final would be shown on channels 2 and 6, starting at 9 a.m.

Other times and channels:

11:30 a.m.— Byron Nelson Golf Classic (4)
11:30 a.m.— World hockey, Canada vs. Sweden (8)
2 p.m.— Kentucky Derby (4, 8)
5 p.m.— National Hockey League playoff, Montreal Canadiens at Toronto Maple Leafs (2, 6).

Bruins goal maybe wasn't

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — It is too late now, but officials of Philadelphia Flyers feel they have a legitimate complaint about the game-winning goal scored by Rick Middleton of Boston in the second game of the Bruins' 7-5 National Hockey League semi-final.

Philadelphia general manager Keith Allen and other team officials spent a good deal of time Friday studying videotapes of Middleton's goal from the lip of the crease.

It appeared on the tape that the puck hit the crossbar and never crossed the goal-line.

The strange thing is that the Flyers never complained to referee Wally Harris about the play at the time. The tape showed Harris appeared to be out of position.

The Flyers did whine during the game about the fifth goal scored by Bobby Schmautz at 2:36 of the second period, claiming Don Marcotte had deliberately interfered with goaltender Bernie Parent on the play.

Parent argued with Harris for a few seconds, but to no avail.

Vic High, Oak Bay reach rugby semi-finals

KELOWNA — Two Victoria-area representatives moved into today's semi-final round of the B.C. high school rugby championships, each winning three games Friday.

Victoria High Titans, Greater Victoria league titlists and defending provincial champs, shut out Centennial of Coquitlam 10-0, blanked North Kamloops 29-0 and followed suit against North Delta, winning 7-0 in Group D.

Greater Victoria finalists Oak Bay Barbarians bounced South Delta 20-6, dumped Penticton 10-0 and handled Cranbrook 25-0 in Group A.

Vic High meets Kelowna, which got by Claremont of Victoria 6-0, Fort St. James 38-0 and topped North Surrey 24-24 Friday, while the Barbarians tackle Mountain High. Mountain triumphed over Kamloops 10-0 and Port Alberni, the fourth Island rep, 26-0. The Fraser Valley school also bombed Elphinstone 28-0.

Claremont bowed to North Surrey 6-0 but thrashed Fort St. James 44-0. Port Alberni salvaged a win, tripping Elphinstone 15-4, but dropped a 19-10 decision to Kamloops.

Following today's 10 a.m. semis, the final goes at 2 p.m.

Other scores:

Group A — Penticton 16, South Delta 7; Penticton 18, Cranbrook 3; South Delta 20, Cranbrook 4. Group B — Kamloops 21, Elphinstone 4. Group C — North Surrey 46, Ft. St. James 0. Group D — N. Kamloops 4, N. Delta 0; Centennial 6, N. Kamloops 3; Centennial 10, N. Delta 0.

Maple Leafs confident 'old feeling' returning

TORONTO (CP) — Despite the fact they trail 2-0 in their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series against the team with the best record during the NHL season, Toronto Maple Leafs are confident heading into tonight's third contest.

The Leafs found themselves in the same position heading into the third game of their quarter-final series against New York Islanders and came back to tie and eventually win the set in the seventh game.

"In the second game, we were getting the feeling we had in the Islanders series," said defenceman Brian Glennie. "It was starting to come.

"I think we had a let down in the first game after the Islanders series which we tried not to do. Last night we felt the spirit coming back. We hit a little more and we played a lot better.

Tonight's Montreal-Toronto game will be telecast on channels 2 and 6, starting at 5 p.m.

"I think with our hockey club you will find 20 players who don't mind taking the man. We hit a little more in the second game and I think you will find we will hit even more tomorrow night.

"We just have to worry about going out there and winning the game."

"With the result last night, we feel more now like we did when we were coming back from the Island. We were coming on strong last night and that's what we have to do here.

"I thought we outhit them. That was probably the main difference from the first game.

"We will probably have to hit a lot more at home. It's always easier to hit at home. You don't get the crowd calls against you.

"We'd like to hit heavy. We've got to catch them first and if we do, we certainly will be hitting."

Canadiens' coach Scotty Bowman, whose club won two and tied one of the three games at Maple Leafs Gardens this season, reiterated that his club will have to guard against taking silly penalties tonight.

In Thursday's second game, which the Canadiens won 3-2, Rejean Houle was assessed a bad hooking penalty in the neutral zone, something which upset Bowman.

"We have to be careful with penalties," he said. "We haven't had too many so far—three in each game.

"They have a dangerous power play. It seems the more they work, the more dangerous they get.

"And when you are taking penalties, that means that their best players are on the ice while your best are not."

The Leafs have managed just one power-play goal all year against Montreal and that was in the second period Thursday night when Dan Maloney scored while Bob Gainey, one of Montreal's top penalty killers, was off for hauling down Lanny McDonald.

Toronto has had six advantages so far in the series and were 0-for-17 on the power play in five games against Montreal during the season.

Gainey, who is teamed up with Doug Jarvis up front on the penalty killing unit, said a lot of credit should go to the defence for Montreal's effort.

"We get a lot of credit for killing penalties during the course of the year, to me it always goes on the defencemen's shoulders.

"To me when penalty killers are good, it's because a guy goes into the corner against two players and that's what Guy (Lapointe), Larry (Robinson) and Serge (Savard) do.

Meanwhile, there was a surprise visitor at the Forum Friday afternoon as the Canadiens prepared for tonight's game.

Mark Napier, who has expressed a desire to play with the Canadiens, watched the workout and was introduced to several Montreal reporters by Ron Caron, Montreal's chief scout.

Napier, 21, and a member of Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association, had been the subject of considerable controversy when he was signed as an underage junior at 18 to play in the WHA with Toronto Toros.

Third game of the Boston-Philadelphia semi-final is slated for Philadelphia on Sunday. The Bruins lead the series 2-0.

Fibak, Okker team for win

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Wojtek Fibak of Poland and Tom Okker of the Netherlands defeated Romania's Ilie Nastase and Jamie Fillol of Chile 6-3, 6-4, Friday night in the World Championship Tennis doubles tournament. Because of the round-robin format, the victory assured Okker and Fibak of a spot in the championship match Sunday.

Bradner here today

Athletics hope to add to loot

Life has been sweet to Victoria Athletics lately and today the Vancouver Island Soccer League premier-division champs try to keep a good thing going.

The A's, who rallied from a second-place finish to take the division playoff title and later added the Jackson Cup to their pile of booty, face Bradner Redshirts of the Fraser Valley League in a Province Cup quarter-final match at Royal Athletic park. Game time is 2:15.

Like Victoria, Bradner's trip to the provincial tournament has been all uphill. The Redshirts wound up fourth in league play but upset league-leading Langley Borsato in the opening round of playoffs, then went on to the title.

Borsato plays host Sunday to Cosmopolitan Royals, the club Athletics bested in the Jackson Cup final.

Playing-coach Brian Robinson is on crutches with blood poisoning in the leg, so will be unable to help out at centre-back. Otherwise, the A's are healthy.

Four Bradner players are ticketed for play in the Pacific Northwest League, which opens locally at Royal Athletic Sunday.

In that one, Vistas, the Island's entry in the summer league, meet North Vancouver Pegasus, currently in first place, at 2:15 p.m.

The Athletics won't help man the representative team in the opener, because of their Province Cup committment. But Vistas coach Brian Hughes has named his lineup.

Starting in the nets will be Ted Van Waes (UVic), with help from Mike Hardy (Gorge), Ray Telford (Nan), Dan Lomas (UVic) and Ian Bridge in the back four. Midfielders are Mark Robb (Gorge), Steve Forsland (Vic West) and Garnet Moen (Vic West), while starting forwards will be chosen from league scoring champ Rob Williams (VW), Don Attig (N), John Liere (UVic), Pat Smith (Duncan) and Steve Farrell (Royals).

Host golfers tops in senior event

Host Victoria Golf Club captured the Life Members team trophy Friday in the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf Association spring opening tournament.

Ray Cranston, Harold Morrow, George Bigelow and Bob Bonar turned in a collective gross of 318, nine strokes in front of second-place Royal Colwood.

Gorge Vale was third with a gross of 332, followed by Glen Meadows with 335.

Cranston walked off with top individual gross honors too, winning the C.F. Smith Rose Bowl by carding a 70. Bigelow was runner-up with 74.

Tom Butt of Saltspring won the Larry McCooey Rose Bowl for best low-net score, with a 65. Clyde Clark of Royal Colwood had the same score but lost in a playoff.

Winners and runners-up in each handicap division:

6-12 handicap, low gross: Noel Filmer (Nan) 75, Vic Painter (RC) 76; 6-12, low net: Tony McLachlan (GM) 67, George Barnes (CH) 68; 13-15 handicap, low gross: Phil Eldridge (RC) 80, Dick White (RC) 80; 13-15, low net: Jim Walker (RC) 67, Gordie Rennie (GM) 68; 16-18 handicap, low gross: Harold Price (RC) 84, Sid Chappell (CH) 84; 16-18, low net: Harry Tobin (GM) 66, Al Speight (GM) 68; 19-20 handicap, low gross: Wilf Latournier (U) 87, Dale Hawkshaw (V) 88; 19-20, low net: Bob Bonar (V) 70, Wilf Grant (U) 71; 21-24 handicap, low gross: James Tedlie (GM) 92, John Brown (GM) 94; 21-24, low net: Joe Zdan (GV) 71, Jay Ingram (RC) 73.

Whalers thump host Nordiques

QUEBEC (CP) — New England Whalers drubbed Quebec Nordiques 7-3 Friday to take a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven World Hockey Association semi-final playoff series before 11,751 fans in the Colisee.

The series moves to Springfield, Mass., for the fifth and possibly deciding game Sunday on New England home ice.

Dave Keon scored twice for the Whalers, and other New England goals came from Alan Hangsleben, Mark Howe, Mike Rogers, Mike Antonovich and Larry Pleau.

Quebec's three goals were scored on power plays by Marc Tardif, Real Cloutier and Alain Cote.

Whalers goalkeeper Louis Levasseur stopped 19 shots, while Richard Brodeur for Quebec had 32 saves.

The Whalers led 4-2 at the end of the first period, outshooting Quebec 16-8. They kept the Nordiques tied up with a tight-cheking game and took advantage of holes in the Quebec defence to score.

Whalers added the only two goals of the second period and after the score reached 6-2, defenceman Paul Baxter, in an apparent gesture of frustration, came up behind Johnny McKenzie of the Whalers and pulled him to the ice with the blade of his stick on McKenzie's neck.

Baxter's action earned him a major penalty as well as match penalty for attempting to injure from referee Peter Moffatt. Moffatt will report the incident to WHA officials who will decide on any other action.

Derby noise - a one-time experience

By Ed COMERFORD
Colonist-Newsday feature service

LOUISVILLE — When a trainer is getting ready for the Kentucky Derby, he faces a special problem: How will his horse react to the pandemonium?

The horses have never before encountered anything like the noisy, julep-soaked mob at Churchill Downs, which reached 163,628 four years ago. And since the race is limited to 3-year-olds, they will never be exposed to such a scene again. How they handle it can make all the difference in their Derby chances.

As soon as the horse leaves the barn area, he sees a huge crowd in the infield, where he is not accustomed to seeing people. Then, surrounded by howling fans all the way, he goes through a tunnel, around a curving path and into an enclosed paddock in back of the stands. After he is saddled, he goes out through the tunnel and the moment the first horse comes onto the track, the bands blare "My Old Kentucky Home" over the loudspeakers and a roar goes up that could be heard in Cincinnati, 100 miles up the Ohio River.

It would be enough to scare a bull elephant, much less a young member of one of the most high-strung breeds in the animal kingdom.

When horses get nervous, a foamy sweat pours down their necks, a condition called "washy." Some horses go to the post in the Derby looking as though they have been sprayed with shaving cream. Many horsemen believe pre-race anxiety cost Damascus the 1967 Derby, in which he finished third; he proved much the best of his generation with convincing victories in the remaining Triple Crown races, the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, and thereafter.

Most trainers try to prepare their horses by taking them to the saddling area during the races a few days before, so that it will not all be new to them on Derby day. Neither of this year's co-favorites, Alydar or Affirmed, will have that conditioning although their two chief rivals, Sensitive Prince and Believe It, will.

The case for "paddocking," as the procedure is called, was made by Jimmy Jones. He has been watching the Derby since 1917 and for a 25-year period he and his late father, Ben, dominated the race, teaming up to win it eight times. Jimmy, who has long retired from training, assisted Ben with the first six and sent out Iron Liege and Tim Tam on his own.

"I'm not saying it (paddocking) wins," Jones said one morning this week on the back-stretch. "But, sure, we always did it. It seemed like touching all the bases; any little thing might make your horse win by a nose. But every trainer knows his own horse, what's good for him."

Only once did the Joneses have a problem saddling a Derby horse. That was Hill Gail, in 1952. "But not because he was nervous," Jones said. "He was just a mean horse. When he started acting up in the paddock, Ben took him out under the stands, away from the crowd, to saddle him. The paddock judge was mad; he threatened to order Hill Gail scratched. But hell, Hill Gail was the favorite, we knew management wasn't gonna let him be scratched." Hill Gail settled down, and won the Derby easily.

John Veitch, the 32-year-old trainer of Alydar, is saddling his first Derby horse but is not following the custom of paddocking at Churchill Downs. He gave three reasons:

—Alydar has always been a well-mannered horse and does not need much precautions. He does not even have a stable pony going to the post with him.

—Paddocking involves the risk that the horse may do something to hurt himself.

—"Whatever you do, nothing can really prepare a horse for the confusion of Derby day, anyway."

If all the veteran trainers were paddocking their horses this year, Veitch might encounter some criticism. However, Affirmed's handler, Laz Barrera, is not doing it either.

Barrera said that he paddocked Bold Forbes, who won the Derby two years ago. "I thought it might help him," Barrera said, "but this one is a very quiet horse. He don't need it."

Woody Stephens is an old Derby hand" Believe It is his ninth Derby starter. "I had him in the paddock between races the other day and I'll bring him over again tomorrow," he said Wednesday "I always do it." Stephens recalled that Proud Clarion, the 30-1 shot who upset Damascus, "was paddocked every day of Derby week."

"I did it once this week," said Allen Jerkens, who trains unbeaten Sensitive Prince. "It depends on the animal. I don't know how much good it does; it can't really prepare him for the bedlam of Derby day."

Jerkens, who earned his nickname "The Giant Killer" with upsets over such greats as Kelso, Secretariat, Wajima and Forego, conceded that conditioning thoroughbreds is an inexact science. "Horses are funny," he said. "You can do everything you think is right, then they'll go the other way on you."

Television coverage of today's Kentucky Derby is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. on channels 4 and 8.

Alydar early favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Alydar was the early 7-to-5 favorite after preliminary betting on the Kentucky Derby closed Friday at Churchill Downs.

Affirmed was second at 5 to 2, followed by Sensitive Prince at 7 to 2 and Believe It at 5 to 1.

A total of $240,603 was in the win pool, with $103,534 in the place pool and $90,976 in the show pool. Win betting on Alydar was $81,981 while $57,207 was bet on Affirmed.

The odds on the other three-year olds entered for today's Derby were Darby Creek Road, 24 to 1; Esops Foibles, 30 to 1; Dr. Valeri, 35 to 1; Raymond Earl and Chief of Dixieland, 70 to 1 each; Hoist the Silver, 80 to 1, and Special Honor 90 to 1.

Olds drivers lead qualifiers

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Tighe Scott and Buddy Baker, a pair of Oldsmobile drivers, led qualifying Friday for the final half of the field in Sunday's $250,000 Winston 500 Grand National stock car race.

Scott averaged 186.405 miles an hour to earn the 20th of 41 starting berths. Baker hit 186.307 m.p.h.

Cale Yarborough won the pole position Thursday with a speed of 191.904. The track record is 199.658 in 1970 by the late Bobby Isaac.

Capitals want satisfied fans

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Washington Capitals president Abe Pollin doesn't want any dissatisfied customers. He has offered 20 per-cent refunds to next year's season ticket-holders if his National Hockey League team fails to be one fans can be proud of.

Pollin, in a prepared statement, said the refund deal is a no-strings-attached, no-questions-asked offer.

The agreement will be honored regardless of the Caps' record or final standings in the 1978-79 season, Pollin added.

Pollin's campaign promises change in the team which has finished last in the Norris Division in all but one of its last four seasons. A year ago, the Caps managed to claim next-to-last place in the division.

"Today, I feel strongly that the extra attention, capital and effort we are prepared to put into the team will result in a substantial improvement in the 1978-79 squad," he said.

"Along those lines, I am willing to back up my feelings with a concrete offer . . . All we want you to do is decide if we kept our promise and brought you a hockey team you could be proud of."

The release said 20 per cent of all season ticket receipts would be placed in an escrow account at Citizen's Bank in Riverdale, Md. Within 30 days of the end of the campaign, season ticket-holders who want a refund can contact bank representatives for the money.

All interest accrued on the account will be donated to Children's Hospital, Pollin said.

Pollin, who owns the Caps, the National Basketball Association Washington Bullets and the Capital Centre arena here, took over as Caps' president last month when Peter O'Malley resigned to devote full time to state politics.

Memorial Cup final starts in east tonight

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Petes and Three Rivers Draveurs meet tonight in the first game of the three-team Memorial Cup tournament for the junior hockey championship of Canada, split between here and Sudbury.

The Petes won the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League title Thursday night over Hamilton Fincups while the Three Rivers has had a lengthy rest after sweeping Montreal Juniors in the Quebec Major league final series.

The third team in the tourney is New Westminster Bruins of the Western Canada league, defending the title they won last year in Vancouver and making their fourth successive appearance in the Memorial Cup.

The Bruins play their first game Sunday in Sudbury against Peterborough and then face Three Rivers here Monday to complete the first cycle of the double round-robin tournament.

Peterborough and Three Rivers play at Sudbury on Tuesday before New Westminster and Peterborough have their second engagement here Wednesday.

The last game of the double round-robin will be played at Sudbury Thursday between New Westminster and Three Rivers before the top two teams meet in a championship game at Sudbury next Saturday.

The round-robin games will feature sudden-death overtime, lasting as long as it takes to determine a winner.

Peterborough coach and general manager Gary Green said Friday he thinks Three Rivers will pose an offensive challenge to the Petes, although he admitted he can't be sure because he has not seen either the Draveurs or Bruins play this year.

"All three teams are in the same boat. From what I've heard from National Hockey League scouts around, the Three Rivers team is offensive minded and probably is very explosive. On the other hand, they could turn out to be a defensive hockey club.

"New Westminster figures to be like all Punch's teams, big and aggressive and able to finish off their checks," Green said of the Bruins, coached by Ernie (Punch) McLean.

But Green said it would be difficult to handicap the tournament, given the unpredictability of the sport.

"Anything can happen in junior hockey."

He said the Petes may have been helped by the fact they played Ottawa '67s and Hamilton in the Ontario playoffs.

"Three Rivers could be very much like the '67s, quite offensive minded. And Hamilton was a lot what I think the Bruins will be, so I'm glad we met those two clubs on the way here."

CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF VICTORIA

NOTICE OF HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT all persons deeming their interest in the property affected by the following matters will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the City Council at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, on THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1978 at 7:30 p.m.

Re: "REZONING BYLAW (NO. 12), 1978" (APC Study Case #214-118)

This bylaw provides to amend the Zoning Bylaw by rezoning certain lands in the area bounded by Grant Street, the east side of Elford Street, Pandora Avenue, Camosun Street and the south side of Balmoral Road from "R-3(2), Multiple Dwelling" to "R-2, Two Family Dwelling."

Copies of the draft bylaw may be inspected in the Douglas Street foyer, City Hall, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. any day the City Hall is open for business, prior to the hearing.

City Hall,
Victoria.

Colin F. G. Crisp,
Assistant Municipal Manager.

Plan 'preposterous'

MONTREAL (CP) — World soccer's ruling body, FIFA, has dismissed as "preposterous" an announcement by the city's Olympic installations board (OIB) that it will send a two-man delegation to Argentina next month to bid for the 1990 World Cup.

OIB officials Jean Lafleur and George Schwartz intend to present their bid at the FIFA congress in Buenos Aires, the site of this year's World Cup, the board said earlier this week. They are to be accompanied by two Canadian Soccer Association officials.

"We have already told them that we are not accepting bids for the 1990 World Cup until 1982 or thereabouts," said FIFA's chief press officer Rene Courte.

"The site of the 1990 World Cup is not on the agenda in Buenos Aires and will not be on the agenda," Courte said. "We have absolutely no intention of discussing it or accepting any bids.

Watson fires 67 in wind to move into tie for lead

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson scrambled his way to a wind-blown, three-under-par 67 that lifted him into a three-way tie for the lead Friday after the second round of the $200,000 Byron Nelson golf tournament.

Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year, a two-time winner this season and former Nelson champion, shared the top spot at 136 with Jim Dent and Steve Melnyk. Dent, the first-round leader, shot a 71 Friday and Melnyk had a 69.

"I don't like the way I'm striking the ball, but I sure like the way I'm scoring," said Watson, who played when the whipping winds were at their worst. He didn't make a bogey, but holed four putts in the six- to eight-foot range to save par and salvaged another with a 15-footer.

"With the wind, today was an exercise in patience," said Melnyk, who holed a 12-foot, downhill putt on the last hole for a share of the lead.

"I feel real confident," said Dent who, like Melnyk, has yet to win a PGA tour title. "I hit a lot of good shots. I just didn't make the putts I made yesterday (when he shot 65)."

Arnold Palmer, meanwhile, took himself out of it. The 48-year-old veteran, a single stroke off the lead at the end of the first 18 holes over the 6,993-yard Preston Trail Golf Club course, blew to a 77 and a 143 total. He opened the day's play with five consecutive fives and three-putted four times.

"My short game went berserk," he said.

Jay Haas, the winner of the San Diego Open earlier in the season, was a single stroke off the lead at three-under-par 137 after a 66, the best round of the day. He was tied with Ed Sneed, who had a 67, including birdies on two of his last three holes.

Larry Nelson, no relation to the Hall of Famer who has lent his name to the tournament, matched par 70 and was two shots off the lead at 138.

Lee Trevino, with a 69, and Tom Purtzer, 68, were at 139.

Defending champion Ray Floyd had a 75 and was well back at 143. Ben Crenshaw, who chased him to this title a year ago, was 72-144.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, shot a 73 Friday and was tied with 10 others at 145, just making the cut for today's third round.

Gary Player, whose three-tournament winning streak was broken last week, birdied his last two holes for a 69 and was at 144.

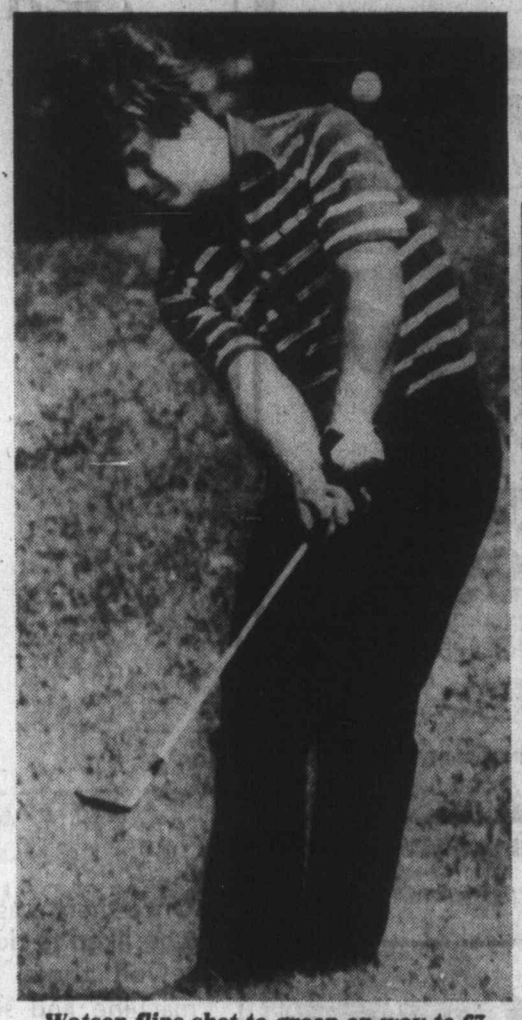

"It was a very, very good putting round for me," Watson said. "I've been hitting the ball better this year, but my putting has been off. I'm really pleased to see my putting coming around."

He made a pair of eight-foot, par-saving putts on his front nine, dropped a 25-footer for birdie on his 10th hole, twice saved par from six feet, twice got it inside of four feet for birdie and holed a 15-footer to save par.

Dent bogeyed three holes, once three-putting and twice after missing the green, and got his birdies on an iron shot that stopped 12 inches from the flag on his 10th hole and a 10-foot putt two holes later.

Melnyk had an erratic effort that included three bogeys and four birdies, the last on the final hole.

Eagles, owner file big suit

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles and the team's owner, Leonard Tose, filed a $12 million conspiracy suit Friday against a Philadelphia bank, two of the bank's officers and Herbert Barness, a limited partner in the National Football League club.

Tose charged in the suit that John R. Bunting, chairman of First Pennsylvania Bank, masterminded a conspiracy to oust Tose from control of the Eagles in favor of Barness.

Barness is a Bucks County real estate developer, has an interest in Keystone race track, and owns 29 per cent of the Eagles.

BARNEY GINGELL MEMORIAL TROPHY

The third annual Barney Gingell Open Race, organized by the Victoria Wheelers (of which Barney was a member), will be held Sunday, May 7th, at 10 a.m. starting from Centennial Park. The trophy and other prizes are provided through a perpetual fund made up of contributions from Barney's friends.

Kiwi driver leads series

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (CP) — Kevin Holmes of New Zealand had four wins at Saratoga Raceway Friday to take over the lead in the world harness driving championship series ahead of Pecca Korpi of Finland and Joe Hudon of Canada.

Holmes ran his series points total to 289 while Korpi moved into second place with 254.

Hudon, from Lorette, Man., who had the lead going into Friday's program, didn't place better than fourth in any of the seven races and dropped to third place with 243 points.

Herve Filion of Angers, Que., an at-large entrant, also had a poor night and slipped to sixth place with 203 points.

Jan grabs early lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Australian Jan Stephenson, despite consecutive bogies on the back side, put together a four-under-par 68 Friday for a two-stroke lead after the first round of the Women's International golf tournament.

In second place at 70 was Pam Higgins, followed by four golfers tied at 71—Carol Mann, Debbie Austin, Donna Caponi Young and Geralyn Britz.

Swirling winds caused some grief among the 68 players on the Devil's Elbow Course at Moss Creek Plantation. But the breezes were gentle compared with the gale Thursday which caused first-round play to be delayed 24 hours. The final round in the 72-hole tournament will be held Monday, a day later than scheduled. The winner will take home $12,000 of the $80,000 total prize money.

Stephenson birdied the first, fifth, 10th and 11th holes before her first bogie on the 12th. She rammed her second putt five feet past the hole on the 13th and three-putted for another bogie.

Then the blonde Australian, now playing out of Palm Springs, Calif., settled down with birdies on the 14th and 16th.

"I didn't play as well as I normally think I should, but the greens were spectacular," said Stephenson, the seventh-place money winner on this year's pro tour with more than $30,000 in seven tournaments.

"This course reminds me of Australia—the sea, the sand and, of course, the wind."

She said she "still has nightmares" about the trap shot Sally Little holed out on the final green of the inaugural of this tournament two years ago to beat her by one stroke for the title. Little had a 74 Friday, while Sandra Palmer, last year's winner, was well back with a 76.

Coming in with even-par 72s were Mary Mills, Laura Baugh and Nancy Lopez, this year's leading money winner with more than $50,000 and the only pro to win two tournaments thus far in 1978.

A pair of amateurs from Fonthill, Ont., were well off the pace after Friday's round. Cathy Sherk had nines of 38-41 for 79, while Marlene Streit was another stroke back after a round of 40-40—80.

Ontario meetings resume

TORONTO (CP) — Racing resumes today at Ontario Jockey Club tracks after a joint agreement on a new purse structure was reached Friday afternoon between the horsemen and OJC.

"We're back in action," OJC publicist Bruce Walker said. "We'll have full cards Saturday at both Woodbine and Greenwood."

A joint statement from the OJC, the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association and the Horsemen's Protective and Benevolent Association, said agreement had been reached on a purse structure covering 1978 and 1979.

The aggregate purse distribution in 1978 will be 47 per cent of The Jockey Club share of 9½ per cent of each $1 bet at the tracks plus 35 per cent of the breakage. Breakage is money left after the OJC pays off its bets to the lowest 10 cents. That means a $6.47 payoff by the parimutuels would leave seven cents in breakage.

"The racing association," the joint news release says, "has guaranteed that the minimum amount of revenue generated by the breakage in excess of 25 per cent will be $125,000 for each of the two divisions."

The 1979 purse structure calls for 47 per cent of the OJC's commission on wagering plus 47 per cent of breakage with a minimum guarantee of $150,000 in excess of the current 25 per cent breakage allotted the two divisions—the OHHA and HPBA.

The horsemen had been seeking 48 per cent of the OJC's take plus 48 per cent of the breakage. The OJC had been offering the same as last year, receiving 47 per cent OJC's takout from the mutuels plus 25 per cent of the breakage.

The talks reached an impasse last weekend and the two associations asked their members not to enter their horses for cards at Woodbine and Greenwood, affecting race cards at the two tracks by Wednesday.

THE STORY OF The Little Seamstress

Once there was a young woman who liked to design clothes. She sewed them on her sewing machine and sold them to her friends.

One day, she thought "I could sell many more of my beautiful dresses if I had a store so that everybody could see what I make". So the woman found a little shop to rent, and opened a boutique. She put ads in the newspaper to tell people all about it. People soon learned about her clever designs and were impressed by her deft needlework. Soon she had more orders than she could fill.

So the woman hired a friend to sew up the clothes that she designed. She would sketch in the evenings, spend the mornings searching for the gorgeous fabrics, the right trims, that perfect piece of lace to incorporate into her latest gown and give it that individual touch her customers loved so much. In the afternoons, both would sew furiously, and wait on customers as they came in.

Soon business was so good, that it became necessary to hire another person to look after the selling end of things, so that the woman could devote more time to designing and buying what she needed to work with. The woman was very happy. She was making a good living; two other people were too, and she enjoyed the reputation she was fast building for herself as a fashion designer.

But then a funny thing happened.

The young woman's father came to visit her from the east. "I can't understand you expanding, my dear," he said. "Don't you know there's a recession on? The foreign situation is a mess. The domestic financial picture is worse. Where have you been?"

The young woman pondered upon her father's words, and cancelled her order from the fabric house. She stopped changing her windows quite so often, and didn't place any more ads in her daily newspapers. Business dropped so badly in the next month that she had to let her helpers go.

"You were right, father" she said as she closed the shop for the last time, "We certainly are in the middle of a great recession."

ALCOHOL CONSTANT COMPANION

Peril in flight for stewardesses

By GEORGE FRANK
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The glamorous life of airline stewardesses as perceived by the millions of passengers they serve has a darker side. There is loneliness, liquor and pills.

Long cross-country flights through several time-zones, strange motels and hotels, and short hectic trips with a dozen or more takeoffs and landings can create an environment ripe for alcoholism.

UNIONS and airline companies are becoming increasingly aware of the problem.

Without company assistance, small groups of stewardesses are secretly meeting in some cities, including San Diego and Los Angeles, to help each other in their battle against alcohol.

"It came to that day. When I woke up something clicked," said Marilyn, 36, a veteran flight attendant for United Airlines. "I didn't recognize myself in the mirror, to be honest with you. I was shaking."

THAT WAS 6 1/2 years ago when Marilyn, a stewardess for nearly 15 years, began her ongoing battle against alcohol. She has not had a drink since, but she still considers herself as recovering from the disease.

In January she was instrumental in organizing a small group of flight attendants in Los Angeles who are fighting the same battle.

A similar group, under Marilyn's leadership, has been formed in San Diego. The first meeting is scheduled for this week.

She said those attending the meetings are from various airlines, including TWA, Continental, United and others.

Hectic life creates environment ripe for alcoholism

'Alcohol and pills are, unfortunately, part of flying today'

SOME OF the participants are funnelled into Alcoholic Anonymous. Others find the support they need within the group to stay "dry." Such fellowships are in operation in Seattle and Chicago.

"Alcohol and pills are, unfortunately, part of flying today," said Kathy Knoop, president of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants, which represents 6,000 attendants at American Airlines.

INSOMNIA is rampant among flight attendants and pilots," she said. "The use of pills to go to sleep, pills to get up, are common habit. I am sorry to say that but it is true."

"Most crews will go take a 'nip' because it relaxes you," said Ms. Knoop, a stewardess before taking the top elected post in the association. "A lot of flight attendants will have a bottle of wine before they go to bed so they can sleep."

There are 45,000 flight attendants working for U.S.-based airlines. About 15 per cent are men.

SALARIES for flight attendants at American, which start at $731 a month, rise to a top of $1,228 a month.

One flight attendant for a major airlines outlined the physical problems of cross country flights.

Take a West Coast based flight crew that flies from Los Angeles to New York. The next morning in New York the pickup time at the hotel is 7 a.m.

"That is 4 a.m. for the crew," whose bodies are running on West Coast time, she said. "That means you have to get up at 3 a.m. your time in order to be ready to meet the limousine that takes you to the airport for the return trip."

THE STEWARDESS, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the flight arrives back in Los Angeles at noon.

"It is very hard to maintain a body rhythm. The night you spend in New York you try to get to sleep by midnight because you have to get up early the next day."

"Your body is saying, 'I don't want to go to sleep now,' " she said. "But if you don't go to sleep then you don't get enough rest to take your trip home the next day."

Alcohol or sleeping pills help to solve the problem of getting to sleep, she said.

"WE ALSO find that flight crews that have a problem with drinking will substitute an 'upper' or whatever to get through the flight time when they know they can't have a drink," said Ms. Knoop.

"Unfortunately a myth has been perpetuated that pilots are infallible, God-like creatures. I don't mean that negatively because we have wonderful guys out there.

"They most assuredly are no different than anyone else," she said. "The same as a construction worker, plumber. Everyone has problems."

SHE SAID airline companies don't want to talk about alcoholism among flight crews.

"They would rather not hear about it," she said. "Chief pilots would rather not hear about it. The vice presidents would rather not know."

"It is very sensitive in the aviation world to talk about alcoholism in aviation," said Dr. Robert Wick, medical director for American. "As you can appreciate, the people get very nervous about alcoholics being involved with an airline."

ON THE other hand, Wick said, there are 37,000 employees in American Airlines and it would be "absolutely silly to say because we are an airline we don't have alcoholism."

"That's why we have a program," he said.

He said General Motors, U.S. Steel and other major companies have alcoholism problems, and so do the airlines.

IF THERE is an increase in the number of flight attendants with drinking problems, said Pat Robertson, president of the 18,000-member Association of Flight Attendants, it could be due to the increasing number of years a flight attendant stays with the airline.

The career tie for a flight attendant during the 1970s has jumped from 18 months to nine years.

The association, an AFL-CIO affiliate, has been receiving an increaed number of reports of alcohol-related problems from flight attendants employed by the 16 airlines covered by the union.

"RIGHT NOW we have alcoholism programs either in the process of being implemented or in operation on five carriers," she said, adding that most of them were initiated by the companies in the last year.

The Association of Flight Attendants represents flight attendants working for United Airlines, Western, Braniff, Frontier, Aloha, Hawaiian, New York Airways, Overseas National, Piedmont, Airlift, Allegheny, Alaska, Hughes Airwest, North Central, Ozark and Texas International.

"A FLIGHT attendant's job is a high pressure type job," Ms. Robertson said. "I am not saying it contributes to alcoholism, but I can tell you it is a high pressure job."

No one really knows the extent of alcoholism among stewardesses. But most officials at the companies and unions say between 5 per cent and 10 per cent may have problems.

There are physical problems related to the job that also add to its pressure, said Kathy Knoop, president of the APFA.

- Pressurized cabins tend to dry out the skin of flight attendants, which speeds up the aging process.
- Dandruff among flight crews is common because of pressurized cabins, and most stewardesses have "vein problems" because of the amount of walking they do, a lot of it when the plane is on an upward or downward angle.

"IF A person is very conscientious about her appearance," Ms. Knoop said, "this can be a real blow to her ego."

Another aspect of a flight attendant's job that could contribute to a drinking problem is that she is constantly around alcohol.

In 1954, the Association of Flight Attendants approved a resolution asking that drinks not be served aboard flights.

The resolution indicated that stewardesses were having problems with intoxicated passengers and the logistics of serving the beverages caused a dilemma.

PAT ROBERTSON, president of the organization, said there used to be a voluntary agreement between airline companies that drinks would be limited to two to each passenger.

"It wasn't observed and it sort of dropped away," she said. "It was the competition of airlines providing extras on flights that kind of increased the problem."

Supersandwich is masterpiece

By J. LEE ANDERSON
Colonist - Monitor News Service

LA JOLLA, CALIF. — The supersandwich, depending where you happen to live, is variously known as Submarine, Torpedo, Hoagie, Poor Boy, Grinder, Rocket, Bomber, Zeppelin and what may be most appropriate for this heroic-sized masterpiece, Hero.

In the pantheon of supersandwiches, the celebrated Poor Boy of New Orleans is sometimes lumped, inaccurately, with the Hoagies and Heroes - Subs — Torpedoes.

Still Po' Boy in the city of its origin, it is a non-Hero, a big, versatile creation that may contain any of a medley of basic ingredients: crispy fried fish, piping-hot breaded oysters, thinly sliced ham or roast beef, tasty cheeses, all manner of cold cuts, chourizo, a spicy flavored pork sausage, or plump meat balls flecked with bits of chopped onion and flakes of red hot peppers. Lettuce, tomatoes, and some sort of dressing or gravy are often added.

Supersandwiches are usually of Italian lineage and ingredients, frequently originating in pizzerias, little restaurants with take-out counters, or busy delicatessens redolent of pungent hanging cheeses, spicily aromatic sausages, simmering tomato sauce, olive oil, crusty bread hot from the oven, baccala which is diced, salt cod, and above it all, the lovely, heady bouquet of 10,000 cloves of garlic.

You may find Hero-Sub-Torpedo sandwiches in many cities, often under a variety of names, but the authentic Hoagie belongs only to Philadelphia. Hoagie fans, too, seem to have an unusually fervent attachment for these generous sandwiches, a love unmatched, perhaps, by the big sandwich brotherhood of any other North American city. Here is the recipe.

HOAGIE

6 8-inch Italian rolls, split
Olive oil
24 thin slices capocollo
24 thin slices Provolone cheese
36 thin slices Genoa-style salami
24 thin slices cooked cotechino or Polish sausage
1 medium head lettuce, finely shredded
6 tbsp. coarsely chopped Bermuda onion
6 medium tomatoes, thinly sliced
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
2 tbsp. crumbled leaf oregano
Hot cherry peppers

Remove some of bread from cut sides of each roll. Brush cut sides generously with olive oil. On bottom half of each roll, place 4 slices capocollo, 4 slices Provolone cheese, 6 slices salami, and 4 slices cotechino or Polish sausage.

Add shredded lettuce, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, and 1 sliced tomato. Drizzle with olive oil, and season lightly with salt, pepper, and oregano. Top with 2 or 3 small hot cherry peppers. Cover with roll tops and cut each in half. Makes 6 sandwiches.

HERO

6 8-inch Italian rolls, split
1 medium head lettuce, finely shredded
1 medium red onion, thinly sliced, then coarsely chopped
6 tbsp. olive oil
3 tbsp. red wine vinegar
36 thin slices Italian salami
Grated Romano cheese
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced OR
2 cans (4 oz. each) sliced mushrooms, drained
Butter (if fresh mushrooms are used)
1 tbsp. crumbled leaf oregano
18 thin slices Provolone cheese
18 thin slices capocollo
½ pint Italian-style cracked olives, pits removed 18 slices tomato (3 large tomatoes)
Salt
Basil
1 jar (12 oz.) pepperoncini, drained

Remove some of bread from cut sides of each roll. Place shredded lettuce and chopped onion in a large bowl. Mix oil and vinegar thoroughly, then pour over lettuce and onion. Toss lightly to distribute oil and vinegar evenly.

On bottom half of each roll, arrange a layer of shredded lettuce and chopped onion, 6 salami slices, grated Romano cheese, a few sliced mushrooms (previously sauteed in butter, if fresh), a sprinkle of oregano, 3 cheese slices, 3 capocollo slices, some cracked olives, and 3 tomato slices.

Season tomatoes with salt and dried basil. Cover with roll tops and cut each in half. Serve with a bowl of pepperoncini, mild pickled Italian peppers. Makes 6 sandwiches.

POOR BOY

3 18-inch loaves French bread
3 pounds catfish fillets
½ cup yellow corn meal
½ cup flour
1½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
Lard or vegetable oil
New Orleans Tartar Sauce
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Trim round ends from loaves of bread, then cut loaves into 2 equal portions. Slice each portion in half horizontally. Remove some of bread from cut sides of each loaf.

Cut catfish fillets into approximately equal portions. Into a large bowl, sift together corn meal and flour; add salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Roll catfish fillets in corn meal mixture and pan fry in hot lard or vegetable oil in heavy skillet until flaky and golden brown, about 5 minutes per side.

If desired, catfish may be deep fried in a deep kettle, preferably equipped with a wire basket. Heat lard or vegetable oil to 375 degrees F. and add a single layer of fish pieces to basket. Fry until flaky and golden brown, about 5 to 7 minutes.

Drain fish on paper towels and keep warm on baking sheet in preheated 250-degree oven until all fillets are fried. Place several hot pieces of fried catfish on bottom half of each loaf. Season fish with additional salt and pepper, if desired, and spread generously withNew Orleans Tartar Sauce.

Cover with loaf tops and cut each in half. Serve at once. Makes 6 sandwiches.

NEW ORLEANS TARTAR SAUCE

1¼ cups mayonnaise
1 tbsp. Creole mustard or prepared brown mustard
½ tsp. Louisiana hot pepper sauce
2 tbsp. sweet pickle relish
2 tbsp. finely chopped onion
2 tbsp. finely chopped parsley
1 tbsp. capers, drained

In large bowl, blend mayonnaise, Creole or brown mustard, and hot pepper sauce. Add pickle relish, onion, parsley, and capers and mix thoroughly. Let sauce stand in the refrigerator for an hour or two before using to allow flavors to blend. Makes about 1½ cups sauce.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: From the day my husband died (three years ago), I've been wondering about all those "bereaved widows." I suspect some of them are not so bereaved. I know I'm not.

My husband and I were married 28 years. We had no significant money problems. Our sex life was good. We were blessed with four healthy, happy children and three lovely grandchildren.

I'm busy with civic, church and club work. Two of my best friends are also widows. After many long talks they finally confessed to having the same feelings as I — "the freedom is wonderful. I'm enjoying life now as never before. I'm glad he's dead."

I wonder how many readers feel as we do but wouldn't dare admit it — not even to themselves.

Although I'm signing my name to this, please don't even use my initials, or pinpoint the city. I'd hate for my children to know — Widowhood Is Great

Dear Widow: Being completely honest about your feelings is healthy. But I wonder — were you so honest in describing your life together? I doubt it. For a woman to have had 28 very good, trouble-free years and then say, "I'm glad he's dead," seems mighty strange to me.

Your letter is going to anger a great many widows who really do miss their husbands. But thanks for leveling. I wouldn't print your name for all the gold in Fort Knox. Your life would never be the same, lady.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column about the bank teller who accidentially gave an extra $20 to the "super-honest" customer hit close to home. Hear this:

A friend took a $100 check to cash at a local bank. The teller in her haste gave him ten hundreds. He said, "Ma'am, I think you've made a mistake." She snapped back, "We don't make mistakes here."

"Friend" put the money in his safety deposit box. He returned the next day and brought along the bank personnel manager and the money. He then asked the abrupt teller, "are you still of the opinion that you don't make mistakes here?" She was stunned as he explained to the personnel manager what had happened. "Friend" returned the $900 (the exact amount her till was short the previous evening) and walked away. — It Happened In Montana

Dear Hap: They don't hardly make'em like than any more. Hooray for Montana honesty!

Dear Ann Landers: Elmer and I will be married soon. We don't have enough money for a place of our own, so we've decided to live with Elmer's parents. They have a large home, completely furnished — especially the kitchen.

How can I let my friends know I don't need any appliances or household items without appearing ungracious or commercial? — Orange Blossoms

Dear Orange: You don't expect to live with Elmer's parents foever, do you? Well, don't instruct your friends on what to buy. Accept whatever they send. You'll be awfully glad to see those appliances and household items in a few years.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can a person live on protein food alone? I don't mean the liquid protein, but regular protein food, like fish, etc. — J.J.

Not for long. It would lack many of the essential nutrients obtainable in other foods — fruits for vitamin C, etc. This is why doctors cringe when they hear of someone going on an exclusive "this or that" diet. But as long as there are charlatans around pushing crack-pot schemes there will be thousands to take them up on it, usually to their detriment. The rest of your letter, which I couldn't use because of space, indicates you are getting ready to go off the deep end on this diet business. Before you do, at least give commonsense a chance.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 30 and for the past 20 years I have been cracking my knuckles. I find it sort of relaxing. Except for annoying people I'm with, are there any harmful effects from this? — B.L.

Except for annoying your friends, none.

Low government priority

Nutrition education gets chop

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — An official of the Ontario Dietetic Association says reductions in public health budgets at all levels of government have almost eliminated nutrition education departments and programs.

Executive director Corinne Trerice of Toronto told an Ontario Women's Institute conference this week that nutritionists still employed by governments now serve as consultants for medical or nursing personnel in their departments or health units.

"Nutrition information material for the public is almost non-existent and nutrition education programs are limited to those which suit the purpose or current priorities of the government department heads."

Mrs. Trerice said there is limited knowledge of basic nutrition facts among of all age groups and the problem is compounded by the prevalence of incorrect nutrition information and food fads.

She said that one reason for this is that there is no priority given to nutrition education in school systems, particularly in the training of doctors, dentists, nurses and others who need such knowledge in their jobs.

"Many nutritionists and dieticians have expressed concern when home economics programs have been dropped from courses, or their emphasis has been diverted to sociological subjects such as marriage preparation, family life or how to get along with your boss."

The former community nutritionist, hospital dietician and cook-book writer also cited prenatal, adolescent and old-age malnutrition as major health concerns.

She urged institute members to "get acquainted with nutrition."

"Consider introducing voluntary continuing-education programs in nutrition to your WI (Women's Institute) format, whereby each member earns points or credits for what she learns."

Antique chest big favorite of collectors

By BEATRICE LEVIN
Colonist-Monitor News Service

Every collector knows how hard it is to find a beautiful antique chest of drawers at a good price. Such chests are always in demand.

Small chests provide ideal storage places for magazines or unread newspapers. In a dining area, a small chest stores tablecloths, napkins, silverware, and pieces of silver service kept in protective flannel bags. A small chest also can store playing cards, checkers, chess, or other games and puzzles. A chest may substitute for a lamp table, an extra server when the buffet isn't large enough, or even for a home filing cabinet.

The chest is one of the earliest forms of furniture. The panelled type, representing the best form of construction, dates from the 14th century. Some decorative carvings on these chests such as lunette, arch, and guilloche were popular in the 1700s, and the famous tulip patterns, were common in Holland around 1639 and in England before 1660.

What do you look for in a really old chest? There are four major categories to examine: wood, hardware, patination, and proportion.

Since it is not practical to match timber from different trees precisely, 18th-century cabinetmakers made individual pieces of furniture from the timber of a single tree. A chest that appears to have different grains or colors in different parts is likely to be suspicious "antique"; but if you like it and the price is right, buy it and enjoy it for what it is.

While Victorian chests of mahogany, rosewood, and black marble usually turn up in good condition and need very little restoration, old country chests may have feet, molding, drawers, or brasses missing. If the chest you have acquired has a top that is essentially unrepairable, you could cover it with a slab of marble at not too great an expense.

All 17th and 18th century keys for English chests were made of steel by blacksmiths. A truly old chest can be dated by its key. The handles of the keys are bow-shaped and the thinner the bow, the better the piece of furniture for which it was made.

Before 1750, brasses were light in color because of a high content of zinc and tin. From 1750 on, brass was darker as copper was added. Some brasses, after 1750, also had gilded surfaces which wore through.

Hardware on old chests is a revealing giveaway to age, and collectors can check the handles to make sure the escutcheons match. Handles might have worn out with use or could have been replaced to keep up with changing styles, but the keyhole plates or escutcheons were not as easy to replace. So if the handles and escutcheons don't match, a dealer sometimes dates the piece by the escutcheons.

Drawers are the most informative part of a chest and one of the first places to check when assessing the age of a piece. Pull out the drawer; see how it is made and if it is worn. The drawers should be the same color and of similar workmanship. (North American chests may have secondary wood used in drawer sides and bottom, woods such as chestnut, poplar, or pine. The English frequently used oak as a secondary wood.)

If the drawers have been replaced or repaired, the value of the piece is not as great as with the drawers made for this chest. Run your hand under the bottom of the drawer and see if the inside of the piece feels the same as the outside. You can see if the drawer will slide in upside down. If it is a genuine old piece, the drawer should go in easily. Remember that top drawers were used far more than bottom ones so they should be the most worn.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

If you have a problem spot in your garden that gets little or no sun, you could do a lot worse than plant it up with a small colony of Aquilegia, the Columbine of Chaucer and Shakespeare and a favorite flower in grandmother's cottage garden.

I doubt if grandmother would recognize today's Columbine, though, for some of the modern hybrids make magnificent blooms as much as four inches across, and with spurs four inches long. They come in almost every imaginable color; plants are not very expensive to buy at the garden centres, and the Aquilegia is one of the easiest of all perennials to grow from seed.

It has the reputation among gardeners of being a "buggy" plant — a reputation which I don't think is altogether deserved. It is true that two pests attack it, but you don't get anything like the menagerie of aphids, thrips, leafhoppers and other assorted critters you would find on, say, a rose. Moreover, the two common pests of the Squilegia are fairly easy to control once you understand their habits.

One of these is the Columbine Leaf Miner, a tiny grub that tunnels through the tissues of the leaf, making a pale-colored serpentine trail zigzagging crazily across the surface of the leaf.

If only a few leaves are so marked, better pick them off and burn them, and make a mental note to cut down and burn the topgrowth during the autumn clean-up. Actually, if you are observant enough to spot an attack in its early stages, such handpicking of the infested leaves is the simplest and most effective method of control.

In the past, spraying or dusting against the leaf miner hasn't been of much help once the tiny grub is holed up comfortably within the inner tissues of the leaf, where a contact-type bug-killer can't reach it.

With the advent of modern systemic insecticides — the kinds which are absorbed into the sap and circulated throughout the plant — it isn't any trick at all to control this annoying pest. Cygon, Protexall, Di-Syston and Gardol are all effective.

Another and much more serious enemy of the Aquilegia is the Columbine Borer, a fat pink caterpillar which enters the stem and burrows down into the fleshy root, killing the plant.

A reddish brown moth is responsible, laying her eggs in the soil close to the plant. These eggs hatch out in late spring, and the baby grubs make their way into the plant stems and down into the roots, growing prodigiously as they feed upon the Columbine's tissues.

Here again, there isn't very much you can do once the borer has taken up residence inside the roots of your plant, and when you find a Columbine drooping and wilting mysteriously, you can be pretty sure one of these plump, salmon-colored caterpillars is living and eating in the roots. Obviously, the only thing to do is to dig it up and consign it to the incinerator before the grub can become a moth and start laying more of her infernal eggs.

About the only time you can attack this enemy with any hope of success is before the eggs hatch, while the tiny grublets are making their way across the short stretch of soil to the plant stems.

Before the days of modern soil insecticides, old-time gardeners made it routine practice to scrape up the soil around each pet Aquilegia and consign it to the garden bonfire. This was done in early spring, and in this way the unhatched eggs were destroyed before the plant was invaded.

Nowadays, the usual method is to scratch a little 5 per cent granular Diazinon around each Columbine in early spring, or drench the soil and stems thoroughly with 12½ per cent Diazinon liquid emulsion, 2 tablespoonfuls per gallon water. This renders the soil lethal to the hatching grubs.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — If you never really liked Richard Nixon but never understood why, perhaps his son-in-law David Eisenhower has come up with the only logical reason. In an interview in Your Place magazine, David theorizes that the reason most people showed antipathy toward the former president is that he happened to be a native of California, which is "an untempered state by Eastern standards."

Mr. Eisenhower was quoted as saying that Mr. Nixon seemed to be "an American political figure uniquely capable of inspiring personal hostility because, throughout his political career, he represented California in all its meanings in American politics."

I buy the theory.

In all my years in Washington I have never seen a state maligned as much as California. Everyone in the 49 other states holds some grudge against it. Some people are just mad at it because it's there.

But others have more rational reasons for their hostility. It isn't surprising to go to a party back East and hear someone say, "do you know what I paid for a head of California lettuce today?" And the other person will reply, "probably as much as what I paid to see StarWars, which was made in Hollywood." Or, "this California white wine tastes like it was pressed by Sen. Hayakawa."

The image of California has been distorted by the gossip columnists. Most people think all its women look like Farrah Fawcett and its men drive Rolls-Royces and wear Gucci shoes when playing tennis on their private courts.

The enmity toward California can be translated to one word: jealousy. In the old days Americans couldn't take it out on Charlton Heston, so they had no choice but to kick Richard Nixon around.

I've talked to many people in the East about their hostility toward Nixon and it's amazing how irrational their responses were. One person said, "he turned San Clemente into a slum."

A professor from an Ivy League school said, "when he was vice president, I heard his cocker spaniel used to do do-do on the bushes in the Rose Garden."

A secretary in New York city admitted she was turned off by Nixon as a politician because every time he took a walk on the beach near San Clemente, he wore a shirt and tie and a pin-stripe suit with the pants rolled up. "When you see a guy walking in surf like that on television you have to figure he's doing something to screw up the country."

It isn't just the East but also the Midwest that harbors a paranoia for California. A friend from the Midwest said he hated the state because "every time it rains in San Francisco we get snow in Chicago."

Although I was born in New York, I went to the University of Southern California, and I've never shared the enmity toward Nixon felt by so many people in the rest of the country.

I never mistrusted Richard Nixon because he came from California.

A president should not be judged by where he came from. The sole criterion should be his record in office. If he was a good leader and chose an honest staff, and was never involved in the obtruction of justice or coverups, and never resorted to dirty tricks, and always paid his taxes and told the truth and never violated the law, then in my book he's an okay guy.

The best way for people to get over their prejudice against California politicians is to search their souls for 18 1/2 minutes, and then ask, "Was David Eisenhower talking about me?"

Arthur Hoppe

You can always tell when it's a slow news week by glancing at the magazine racks. The current issue of Time features a ballet dancer named Gelsey Kirkland while Newsweek's cover story is about death.

The latter is a six-page article entitled, Living with Dying, which describes how the topic is sweeping the nation.

President Carter has appointed a committee to examine the subject. The number of U.S.A. publications on death have jumped from 400 to 4,000. And more than 1,000 schools and colleges are offering courses in how to die properly.

All this was music to the ears of my young cousin Bertram. Bert survived the decriminalization of pot, a dozen consciousness expanding therapies and the sexual revolution.

Last year, he got into dying. "Man," he said enthusiastically, "it's the ultimate trip."

* * *

Unfortunately, like most converts, he was determined to drag the rest of us along in his footsteps. His prime target, naturally, was the oldest member of our family, Auntie Persephone, who is 88.

Last Christmas he gave her a year's subscription to Popular Dying. "I would've made it a three-year subscription. Auntie, but one never knows, does one?" said Bert, attempting a winning smile.

"What do I want this for?" asked Auntie, suspiciously examining a sample copy at arm's length.

"You have to face reality, Auntie. You have to think of your future."

"I have," said Auntie. "I've booked a six-weeks cruise to Pago Pago for next November."

"But, Auntie, what if death, as it must to all persons, comes first?"

"Then I won't go to Pago Pago."

"But you should prepare yourself for that eventuality," said Bert, leafing through the magazine. "Look at these helpful articles, Funeral Plans of Ten Hollywood Stars, Whom to Invite to Your Death Bed, Gay Rites, and —hey, look! —here's an ad for a Pick Your Plot Bus Tour of 123 cemeteries."

"All things considered," said Auntie, "I'd rather go to Pago Pago."

* * *

Bert, however, wouldn't give up. Just the other day he was around waving that copy of Newsweek. "See, Auntie?" he cried triumphantly. "I was right! Everybody's getting into dying these days."

"If you ask me, it's one of those fun fads that isn't going to catch on," said Auntie with a sniff. "Most people I know just aren't ready for it."

"You've got to get rid of those silly taboos," said Bert. "You've got to accept dying as just another ordinary human activity that everybody dies, like brushing your teeth or having sex-ual . . ."

"Watch your tongue, Bertram!"

"Darn it, Auntie, you've got to die with dignity if it's the last thing you do."

"Why?"

"Because dying is the most wonderful, most exhilarating, most exalting . . ."

Bert immediately saw he'd gone too far when Auntie shrugged, said, "Whatever turns you on," extracted a .38 from her reticule and drilled three neat holes in his brisket.

Grandpa Ed, who's a lawyer, says Auntie should get off on a plea of justifiable homicide.

"This new-fangled idea of folks discussing dying frankly and openly may be okay," he says cautiously, "but only if the subject is brought up by the party concerned."

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Robert Duvall, one of the finest actors in the business, is out of it (Ike and the War Years), after one day's shooting.

Duval, who looks like the ideal casting to play Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, departed in a mystery.

One of the other stars of the movie said no one seems to know the reason for the sudden departure.

Meanwhile, Darren McGavin, also in superb casting, continues as Gen. George Patton. Darren is tough, aggressive and, if need be, arrogant, which just about describes Patton to a T.

The English-American series, which will be seen over ABC-TV, has a number of British actors playing George VI, Winston Churchill, Noel Coward, Field Marshal Montgomery, and other historical characters. None of their names are known outside of the English theatre.

But the departure of Duvall is a real shocker.

Two successful TV series of the past — The Burns and Allen Show and The Ed Sullivan Show — are both due for revival.

Producer Jerry Zeitman and that eminent Oscar winner George Burns are making a pilot for ABC on the series. Believe it or not, someone else will play Burns.

Zeitman said the format is to do the routines with young people in their 20s. They are auditioning now.

Sullivan Productions and Dick Clark Productions are working on reviving the Sullivan variety format with Clark as host.

It will be interesting to watch this one, because Ed, who was a good friend, was a real phenomenon of television. He couldn't sing, dance or tell jokes. In fact, he wasn't even that glib, but he was one of the medium's most imitated stars.

Opening lead: King of diamonds.

Declarer complained about bad luck after he lost today's testing game. A smart kibitzer would agree that his luck was not good; however, the kibitzer would also note that declarer was suffering from the malady of ignorance.

Declarer won the first trick with his diamond ace and cashed the queen and ace of trumps, ending in dummy. Next he played dummy's ace of hearts and took a losing heart finesse. West won, cashed his diamond queen and led another diamond, declarer ruffing.

With two tricks for the defense, declarer's last chance lay with the club suit. A trump was led to dummy's king and a club led to declarer's king, hoping that this finesse would win. No such luck. East split his honors, declarer's king went to West's ace, and East's remaining club honor produced the setting trick.

'Every finesse was wrong for me,' moaned South. 'All I needed was one of two finesses – a 75 percent chance.'

The smart kibitzer would agree about the luck, but he would also note a much better play.

To make the game, declarer should refuse the first diamond and win the continuation. A trump to dummy's ace would allow a diamond ruff high to eliminate the diamond suit and the stage would be set to end play West. Lead a low trump to dummy's seven and return a low club from dummy.

This would bring East's jack, declarer's king and West's ace, but West would have no safe leads.

A fourth diamond would offer a ruff and discard, a heart lead would surrender a free finesse and a club to East's queen would establish declarer's 10. The latter would provide a heart discard from dummy and the game would become a sure thing.

What if East plays a low club when clubs are first led from dummy. Then declarer inserts the club 10 and West is end played regardless of how the club honors are divided.

Cars deadliest for children, says minister

Health Minister Robert McClelland Friday warned that more children die in automobile accidents than from any other single cause.

He was commenting on a recent report from the B.C. Medical Association which noted the vulnerability of children to severe head injuries, even in low-speed car accidents.

"Holding a child, even an infant, isn't a safe solution either," McClelland said. "In a crash, forces 10 to 20 times the child's weight may pull the child from the adult's arms to slam the child against the windshield or instrument panel.

"Car seats" for children are not recognized as an adequate protective device, McClelland said. The Canadian Standards Association has been commissioned to come up with an acceptable safety harness.

MLAs have been given a $22-a-month raise to operate their constituency offices.

Speaker Harvey Schroeder said the extra few dollars and the way MLAs are allowed to spend them would permit greater flexibility in constituency operations.

In the past, MLAs were allowed $728 a month for the salary of the constituency secretary and $250 a month for office rental. The funds could only be used for the specific purposes designated.

Under a new system introduced by Schroeder, members will be able to claim up to $1,000 for office and secretary. Basically that means that the MLA could save on rent and pay the secretary more.

□

Brig. Henry Bell-Irving will be sworn in May 18 as B.C.'s 23rd lieutenant-governor.

The ceremony will be conducted by Chief Justice J. L. Farris at Government House at 11:30 a.m.

Bell-Irving succeeds Walter Owen who has served since March, 1973.

LEGISLATURE BRIEFS

David Freeman of Vancouver has been appointed a member of the Universities Council for a three-year term starting May 1.

Freeman, a lawyer, is a former member of the senate of the University of B.C. and was president of the Vancouver Institute in 1972-73. He is a director of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews.

The council advises the education minister on university affairs.

The provincial government has declared 3.4 hectares of property on the Kennedy River west of Port Alberni as an ecological reserve.

Environment Minister James Nielsen said the reserve, to be known as the Sutton's Pass Adder's Tongue Fern Reserve, will protect the rare fern, ophioglossum vulgatum.

Nielsen described the fern as a living fossil found only in two areas of B.C.

Another reserve of 69 hectares is located on a flood plain island of the Skagit River to protect a stand of black cottonwood.

The NDP Friday revived a year-old debate as part of its attack on the credibility of Premier Bennett.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre), speaking in the debate on the premier's spending in the current fiscal year, accused him of the "cheapest, grossest political act in the history of the province . . . petty political revenge" when the Railwest manufacturing plant was closed in Squamish.

The plant was closed when orders for new rail cars ran out. About 60 people lost their jobs in the closure.

Lauk said an inquiry should be held into the closure with the premier, Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe heading the probe.

Lauk said the government closed the plant because there was a heavy NDP vote in Squamish.

Provincial COURT

A 13-year-old boy who led two police forces on a car chase through Saanich Peninsula Tuesday morning has been remanded in custody until next Tuesday so that appropriate counselling and community involvement agencies can be called into the case.

The boy, whose name cannot be published because he is of juvenile age, appeared before Judge Fred Giles in Victoria provincial court's family division Friday morning but was remanded after an application for more time from crown counsel John Higginbotham.

The Central Saanich youth was pursued by Central Saanich police and Sidney RCMP for about 10 kilometres before the stolen vehicle went out of control and crashed through a fence at Pat Bay Airport. Found in the car were a .22-calibre rifle with a cartridge in the chamber, 14 more cartridge shells in a magazine, 85 rounds stuffed in the youth's pockets and 400 rounds lying about the vehicle.

He was charged with taking an auto without owner Thomas Goan's consent, dangerous driving, obstructing a peace officer, carrying a concealed weapon, possession of a firearm, and driving without a valid driver's licence.

Defence lawyer Ted Hanman objected to a proposed one-week remand in custody at the Juvenile Detention Home but agreed to the shorter remand period.

A 38-year-old man with an obvious taste for lobster was given a 14-day, intermittent jail term in provincial court by Judge Harold Alder.

Keith Hartlen, Franklin River camp, entered a guilty plea to a charge of theft under $200.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Hartlen was at the Fairways Market on April 20 and bought $28.88 worth of groceries but failed to pay for two tins of lobster spread and two tins of lobsters valued at $9.80.

Lang said Hartlen had a previous criminal history which included convictions for theft on Jan. 24, 1958 and Nov. 4, 1970. He was fined $50 on each occasion.

●

A father and his son elected trial by judge and jury on a joint charge of robbery with threats of violence.

Angus Nelson Townsend, 42, of 2683 Blanshard, and Michael Nelson Townsend, 22, of 3140 Washington, were charged in an April 28 holdup of Ron's Chevron Service, 2200 Quadra.

Their preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 27.

●

Alder handed out a 30-day, intermittent sentence to a 47-year-old man after learning it was his third conviction for a drinking-driving offence in less than four years.

Henry Washington, 3835 Saul, pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 April 13.

Lang said Washington was spotted by Saanich police at 9 p.m. heading south on Elk Lake Road and was noticed straddling the centre line at one stage and swerving into oncoming traffic on another occasion. Subsequent breath-test readings of .25 were obtained, Lang said.

His previous convictions were both for impaired driving, on Sept. 20, 1974 when he was fined $375, and on Nov. 12, 1975 when he was jailed for 14 days.

Defence lawyer Alan Bigelow said his client asked a friend to phone for a taxi at the Royal Oak Inn earlier but none came.

"Congratulations, sir," Alder told Washington. "You're still alive."

●

Fined for drinking-driving were Muriel Colli, 56, of 1104 Hilda, $500; and Stephen Edward O'Hanlon, 22, of 1639 Hampshire, $400. O'Hanlon was also fined $100 after pleading guilty to driving while under suspension.

Court award $76,520

A Victoria couple were awarded $76,520 damages in B.C. Supreme Court Friday because of a traffic accident more than four years ago.

David John Minty, 27, was awarded $71,520 by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger and his wife, Peggy, was awarded $5,000. Defendant in the action heard this week in court was Maurice Paul Smith of Victoria.

The accident occurred Oct. 27, 1973 at the intersection of Trans-Canada Highway and Koksilah Road south of Duncan.

Minty claimed that Smith was driving without lights and began a left turn and entered the lane for southbound traffic in which Minty was travelling. Smith denied this, saying Minty drifted into the left-turn lane for northbound traffic in which Smith was travelling.

Berger, after reviewing the evidence, said Smith was driving without lights and was not paying attention to oncoming traffic and was negligent. He said there was no contributory negligence by Minty.

Inquest moved to April 30 in triple-fatal house fire

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has adjourned an inquest in the April 30 deaths of a Victoria couple and their infant boy until May 18 after more than three hours of testimony Thursday night.

The inquest was called in the deaths of 31-year-old Patrick Jackson, his 20-year-old common-law wife, Catherine Dick, and their infant son, Anthony. The three died following an early-morning fire at a duplex at 840 Bay. Two men, James McIntosh and Darryl Wilson, the dead couple's four-year-old son, Gerald Stephen Dick, and a six-month-old cousin, Marion Willie, escaped from the blaze, which apparently started shortly before 7 a.m. in the main floor living room where two of the bodies were found.

Eight persons testified Thursday before the coroner called a halt after learning that a pathologist's laboratory tests being performed would take about 10 days to complete.

The May 18 session will be held in the small claims court in the Law Courts building, 850 Burdett, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Ruling Monday on bull hearing

Judgment will be given Monday in a Victoria county court case in which a Central Saanich farm laborer is accused of having sexual intercourse with an underage girl and wilfully killing the girl's Highland bull.

Judge Leslie Cashman said he had "no difficulty" regarding the accusation that Donald Harry Schultz, 39, had sexual intercourse with a girl aged between 14 and 16 in Central Saanich between July 1 and Aug. 31, 1977.

But he wanted to read some of the case law cited to him and a "novel point" made by defence counsel Terry Dalton on the charge of wilfully killing the bull March 5, 1978 in Central Saanich which gave him "some difficulty."

Dalton said his research into Canadian and British law cases disclosed no case where an accused person could be found criminally responsible for the conduct of an animal.

Crown counsel Donald Laughton argued that this would not be a rule of law or of good sense.

He pointed to part of the Criminal Code, defining the word "wilfully" in a property section, as "everyone who causes the occurrence of an event by doing an act or by omitting to do an act that it is his duty to do, knowing that the act or omission will probably cause the occurrence of the event and being reckless whether the event occurs or not, shall be deemed, for the purposes of this part, wilfully to have caused the occurence of the event."

The crown has alleged that a vicious dog at the farm was at large and Schultz tethered the bull in the yard, then left with others returning to find the bull dead, one day after the girl told Schultz she wasn't going back to work on the farm.

Visiting sailor fined

A New Zealand sailor who rammed a stolen taxi into a Victoria city police motorcycle late Thursday night was fined $200 after pleading guilty in Victoria provincial court to impaired driving.

Bruce Roger Rae, 19, of Te-awamuta, was one of two men from the visiting warship HMNZS Walkato who were arrested following the incident on Store Street.

Rae, who is an electrician's helper, and 19-year-old Maurice Peter Kennett of Auckland, apparently took the Island Taxi vehicle from outside the Stardust Cabaret, 860 Yates, at about 11:53 p.m.

Six minutes later, police spotted the taxi on Store and as an officer approached the vehicle, Rae threw it into reverse and smashed a motorcycle.

Judge Harold Alder also ordered Rae to pay compensation of $100 to Island Taxi and $140 to the Victoria city police for damage to the vehicles.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said that "in the interest of Commonwealth relations," he was entering a stay of proceedings on charges of taking an auto without the owner's consent against both men. Lang made the move after an officer from the visiting ship told the court conviction on that charge would mean dismissal from the navy.

Kahl loses property case

Esquimalt MLA Lyle Kahl and his wife Donna won't be able to subdivide their Oak Bay property, the B.C. Supreme Court ruled this week.

Mr. Justice Thomas Berger dismissed a petition by the couple which sought to overturn the rejection by municipal approving officer Geoffrey White of the subdivision at 1383 St. Patrick St. because it would injuriously affect the established amenities of neighboring properties.

Eleven of 16 neighboring property owners opposed the creation of a new lot, saying it would injuriously affect the park-like environment of the area.

The judge said the subdivision and construction of a house would involve destruction of trees.

"I think the approving officer was justified in regarding the trees as an established amenity even if they are on private property," he said.

He said there was no suggestion the approving officer did not act in good faith or that he discriminated against the Kahls and there was no basis for saying he erred in law.

Court bars Canadian fishermen from U.S. waters

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States District Court Judge has issued a temporary injunction that forbids Canadian boats from fishing within coastal waters off the Western U.S., and Canada might be forced to take reciprocal action, a Canadian fisheries official said Friday.

U.S. fisheries authorities argued that the order would strain relations between the two countries, which have been operating under an interim agreement while negotiating the terms of a more permanent treaty since the establishment of the 200-mile limit last year.

In Vancouver, Rod Hourston, director of governmental affairs for the federal fisheries ministry confirmed those fears Friday night. Canada could be forced to ban U.S. boats from Canadian waters if "we are turfed off their side," he said.

The ruling will affect Canadian trollers who have been fishing for chinook in U.S. waters since the season opened on May 1, Hourston said. Canadian halibut fishermen off the coast of Alaska, and fisheries on the East coast may also be affected, Hourston said.

U.S. Judge Donald Voorhees issued the temporary injunction Friday, ordering the federal government to stop Canadian vessels from fishing off the West Coast.

Voorhees stayed his order for seven days to allow time for an appeal.

Canadian fishing boats have been allowed to fish within U.S. waters since the early 1970s by reciprocal agreement between the executive branches of both governments, Edward Evans, northwest regional counsel for the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, argued.

An agreement has been drafted between the two governments, Evans said, but has not yet been ratified by Congress.

The suit was brought against the state commerce department and the U.S. state department by the Washington Trollers Association and the Quileute Indian Tribe.

The groups argued that Canadians were violating U.S. statutes by fishing within the 200-mile limit. The statutes could only be overturned, the plaintiffs argued, by congressional action.

The federal government argued that although congressional approval of the treaty was required, the government retained its right to use discretion in enforcing the law, Evans said.

"It ill-behooves the federal government to come in here and enforce treaties, which it has done, and not enforce

S. Africa troops still in Angola, envoy tells UN

Colonist wire services

PRETORIA — South Africa defended Friday its one-day helicopter raid deep into Angola, saying the town it attacked was a headquarters for guerrilla forces harrassing Namibia. Officials here denied Angolan assertions that civilians were killed in the assault.

Angola denounced the raid — said to be the largest into its territory since 1975 — as "racist South African aggression."

At the United Nations Friday, Angola charged in the Security Council that South African troops are still in Angola and are being reinforced.

Angolan ambassador Elisio De Figueiredo told the council, called into session to consider charges by his government of South African aggression, that the claim the troops were withdrawn after a limited action is a myth.

"Reinforcements are still being brought in, even now, and the troops show no sign of withdrawing," Figueireido said. The bombardment has been extended."

A draft resolution proposing that the council strongly condemn "this latest armed invasion perpetrated by the South African racist regime" was circulated as the council met. The draft, prepared by non-aligned states, also would warn South Africa that the council would have to consider applying sanctions in case of a repetition of the attack on Angola.

South Africa's military high command confirmed that South African troops, flown by helicopters, penetrated 160 miles into Angola to attack the mining town of Cassinga. Lt.-Gen. Jack Dutton, the army's operations chief, said the town was completely occupied by the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) as the headquarters for terrorist operations against Namibia, which is administered by South Africa.

Six South African troops were killed in the attack on Cassinga and in simultaneous raids on other SWAPO camps close to the Angola-Namibia border, the army said. It did not disclose losses inflicted on the guerrillas by the ground attack and bombing raids. The object of the operation, a military communique said, was to discourage further SWAPO operations against Namibia, not to kill people.

The raids achieved surprise, particularly against the SWAPO headquarters personnel at Cassinga, sources said. The attacks began early Thursday morning and most of the troops were back behind the Namibia fortified border 12 hours later. Remaining invaders returned early Friday morning.

Large quantities of SWAPO weapons and ammunition were seized or destroyed. In Cassinga, South African army medics treated women and children in a hospital, apparently family members of SWAPO, the communique said.

Although there have been occasional "hot pursuit" operations by South African troops across the border into Angola during the past year, this was the first deep penetration since

Jaguars pounce on rebels

PARIS (Reuter) — Mauritanian troops pursued Polisario guerrilla survivors Friday after French Jaguar strike planes killed dozens of the guerrillas in a low-level attack with cannon and rockets deep in Mauritania, officials said here.

The guerrillas, in a column of 50 vehicles, were heading across the Sahara Desert for the world's largest open iron ore mining centre at Zouerate, where the workers include over 200 Frenchmen. Mauritania is a former French colony.

French officials said there was only one sortie by the Jaguars, that no French planes were hit and that Mauritanian ground forces were pursuing the fleeing guerrillas.

At least seven Polisario vehicles were destroyed in the air strike, French officials said.

Between six and 10 Jaguars were sent to the Chad capital of N'Djamena last week. Returning visitors said the fleet was already making a show of strength over the north but had not yet gone into action.

MOMENT THAT REALLY COUNTS

That titan of trivia, Bruce Lowther has struck again.

The genial manager of augmented channel services for Cable 10 observes that today a rare time-date sequence occurs. The numerical order for moment today is 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8 or 12:34 on May 6, 1978 (12:34, 5-6-78).

The next moment of digital history will occur at 23:45 June 7, 1989.

And if you want to break it down into seconds, mark 12:34:56 July 8, 1990, on your calendar.

15,000 jobless pay for servant's flub

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will ask about 15,000 individuals to pay back nearly $4.3 million in unemployment insurance benefits mistakenly paid to claimants in B.C., Quebec and Nova Scotia, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Friday.

Cullen told John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) in the Commons the overpayment "was not the result of cheating or ripping off."

"It was a mistake, a human error made by an official in my department," he said. The money would be recovered with as little hardship as possible to individuals who were overpaid.

Larry St.-Laurent, head of unemployment insurance operations, said the overpayments totalled about $1.6 million to nearly 6,000 claimants in the Montreal area in December and January; about $1.5 million to about 5,000 claimants in Nova Scotia last April, May, June and September; and about $1.1 million to nearly 4,400 claimants in the Vancouver region last April and May.

St.-Laurent said where individuals showed financial hardship making repayment impossible the government would "write the overpayment off completely."

The error was made by a public servant who granted six extra weeks of benefits to the 15,000 claimants because the regional unemployment rate in their areas was one per cent higher than the national unemployment rate.

Unemployment insurance regulations stipulate that six weeks of extended benefits are not supposed to be granted unless the regional unemployment rate is 1.1 per cent higher than the national rate.

By June 1 all individuals who were overpaid should have received a letter from the government saying so. They will be asked to speak with district unemployment insurance officials who can reduce the repayment if the person had accumulated enough insured earnings before the six-week period to have made them eligible for re-establishing a claim.

St.-Laurent said it would likely be mid-July before all individuals affected made contact with officials and several more weeks before each individual was told exactly how much, if any, was owed back.

Each claimant then has 30

Perrault sees fall election

Senator Ray Perrault steered clear of election forecasting Friday but hinted, with a smile, that federal polling day could come in the fall.

Perrault, government leader in the Senate who was in Victoria for discussions with Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf regarding Victoria's Inner Harbor, said the federal government's first duty to Canada was to try to "turn the economy around."

He said "believe it or not, that is the main preoccupation of Ottawa. And there are indications that improvement is taking place and that things will be fairly good in the fall. If coincidentally an election was called at that time, well ... the spring of '79 would be pretty good, too."

Bawlf said his discussions with Perrault involved the juggling of federal funds and a clearer defining of priorities. "They didn't involve any big changes," Bawlf said. "It was just one of those meetings where we decide what will come next and when the funds can be released."

Bikes hit, man dies

Gerald Arthur Bezanson, 25, of 2866 12th Ave., Port Alberni was killed Friday afternoon on Highway 19 when his motorcycle struck an accompanying motorcycle, throwing him into the path of a car about 12 kilometres north of Qualicum Beach.

Bezanson was taken to Nanaimo Regional General Hospital where he died shortly after arrival. His female passenger, Carey Sorenson, 27, of Port Alberni was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital. There were no other injuries.

LONDON FULL UP

LONDON (AP) — London's hotels are full up and the tourist board has appealed to tourists not to travel to the British capital. A board official said Friday the unusual situation has been caused by a business conference, forthcoming sports events and the Ascension Day holiday in Europe. The board said visitors should try to find hotel rooms on the south coast.

Carter steering clear of Quebec

SPOKANE, Wash. (Reuter) — President Carter refused on Friday to become involved in the controversy over the secessionist movement in Quebec.

Carter maintained his neutrality when asked by a Spokane citizen at a town meeting if the U.S. would consider granting statehood to other Canadian provinces if Quebec broke away.

Amidst laughter and applause, he said he always made it a practice to avoid answering at least one question—and that was the question Friday.

"I'll let the Canadian people decide about the future of their great country," he said.

"When they make a decision, I'll abide by it."

Coup threat triggers power play

VICTORIA, Seychelles (Reuter) — The Seychelles government assumed emergency powers Friday, saying 21 persons suspected of involvement in a plot to seize power were being held under the new laws.

The laws give the president of the Indian Ocean republic the power to detain without trial anyone he considered behaving in a manner "prejudicial to public safety".

They also also give him the right to impose censorship on the media.

Police announced Tuesday the arrest of 21 persons, including several women, who they said planned to launch a coup against the left-wing government of President Albert Rene during his current visit to China and North Korea.

Hydro peace over hurdle with bus pact

The second of three hurdles has been cleared en route to B.C. Hydro industrial peace —but not by much.

"It wasn't really overwhelming," Amalgamated Transit Union spokesman Preston Storey said Friday night after transit bus drivers, mechanics and tradesmen had voted 68 per cent in favor of accepting a new collective agreement with Hydro.

Earlier in the week, gas workers covered by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, accepted a similar agreement by an 88 per cent margin. The third union, the Office and Technical Employees Union, is conducting a ratification vote. Sources say they expect the package will be readily accepted.

The difference in the transit workers' vote and that registered by the gas workers is being attributed to the touchy spareboard issue which affected only the bus drivers.

"I think it would have been higher except for the spareboard thing," said Storey, recording secretary of the ATU's Victoria local.

A portion of the union's members felt it was wrong to give up full control of the spareboard, a system involving the assigning of drivers during peak periods. But ATU officials said it was not a case of turning control over to Hydro. The union, they said, had relinquished only exclusive control and would still have control of policing and other aspects of the system.

The spareboard issue was the springboard to a one-week Hydro strike late in March. The strike came at the height of protracted disputes with the three unions.

The wage settlement for the transit workers involves a 6.18 per cent increase in the first year and four per cent in the final eight months.

The contract is retroactive to last July 30.

Breakfast from Tiffany's—for $125

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tired of the same old snap, crackle and pop at breakfast?

Now there's "Breakfast from Tiffany's," the breakfast delivery service that will bring everything from Dom Perignon and caviar, to beer and fresh bagels to your bedside.

For a mere $125, you can sip either Tattinger Blanc de Blanc or Dom Perignon and nibble on Beluga caviar, toasted bits of French bread, strawberries Parisienne or Black Forest cake.

Wish you were on the Champs Elysee? Voila! Breakfast from Tiffany's delivers a fifth of French champagne, red salmon caviar or Canadian Nova Scotia salmon, toasted bits of French bread and fresh bagels and cream cheese — all for $50.

If you travel by the American Plan, you can substitute American champagne and skip the French bread for a $26 breakfast of Canadian Nova Scotia salmon and fresh bagels.

New Yorker Bonnie Schachter said she was inspired to found Breakfast from Tiffany's by the movie — not the jewelry store so she says there'll be no 14-carat diamonds delivered.

"We're out to prove romance is alive and flourishing," she said. All orders are accompanied by fresh-cut roses, served on French lace.

Then there's the the $21 "Bunker Plan."

It comes with a six-pack of beer, belly lox, fresh bagels and cream cheese.

Vera is plugging along with her Siamese 'twins'

A Mexican journalist hitch-hiking her way to Alaska was in Victoria this week, along with her two Siamese cats which have followed her every step of the way.

Vera Aida Gonzales, 24, a freelance writer for the magazine Revista de Revistas, said she had been on the road since April 17, when she left her home in Cuernavaca, Morelos, about 60 kilometres from Mexico City.

She hitched rides on both cars and small planes, she said.

HITCH-HIKING by plane is simple, Ms. Gonzales said. She just goes to an airport and asks if anyone is flying in the same direction in which she's travelling.

With luck, a pilot may be headed in the same direction, or just going up to accumulate hours.

THE CATS, Leonardo and Valeria, don't seem to mind the flying a bit. And when she hitch-hikes on the highway and has to walk, they walk right behind her.

Sometimes, of course, Leonardo and Valeria perch on her shoulders, and "become quite cranky if it rains and they get wet," she said.

The cats have sweaters if it gets too cold.

SHE SAID that when they were kittens, she wanted to give them Egyptian names, "but they had a Latin temperament."

Ms. Gonzales said she has hitch-hiked for five years, and has never had any problems with people. Her intuition tells her right away if there will be a problem, she said, and she can then avoid any trouble.

Her parents — her father is a supreme court judge and her mother a medical doctor — allowed her the freedom to travel and go to university.

This makes them different from many parents in Mexico, she said, where as in other countries, custom dictates a different set of rules for women from those for men.

SHE WROTE her master's thesis in sociology at the National University in Mexico City on Mennonite communities in Mexico.

She lived with Mennonites for six months, studying their customs which had not changed for hundreds of years — no electricity, no cars, and a strict religious education, for example.

THESE CUSTOMS were the same as customs in Canadian Mennonite communities.

Ms. Gonzales had hitch-hiked to B.C. three times before but this was her first visit to Vancouver Island.

She had also visited Alaska before — one small plane she was hitch-hiking on almost crashed in a snowstorm — and she hitch-hiked to Quebec in 1972.

HER LONELIEST time was a few years ago in Alaska, she recalled. It was on the Alaska Highway, and she hadn't seen a car for six hours. The sky was flat and grey, and everything seemed grey. It was cold, and she hung a colorful jacket in the branches of a tree for something to look at.

People in B.C. were friendly, she said, and more easy-going than in the United States. B.C. was her favorite spot, she said, and Oregon her next choice.

On Tuesday, Ms. Gonzales saw the Legislature in action. She said the members generally carried on like bad-tempered children, cursing, getting red in the face and hitting their desks with their hands.

She would like to write stories on the forest industry in B.C. and the province's cultural heritage, as seen through the totem art of the Haida Indians.

HER NEXT STOP is Alaska. In about six weeks, she said, she'll return to her home in Mexico.

New wrinkles show in labor's campaign

Some new wrinkles are showing up in labor's campaign against non-union construction firms.

They include:

- A continued assault on a particular target, even after construction has been completed.
- An attempt to enlist new allies in the form of prospective tenants of non-union projects.
- A hint that the boycott weapon may be brought into play.

According to Al McMurray, organizer for the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, the objective is to let prospective tenants know that money saved "by taking it out of the pockets of underpaid workers" isn't being passed on in rental or purchase savings.

The target Thursday was the combined business-living quarters building at Hillside and Blanshard.

Representatives of construction unions went to the site to pass out leaflets to people inquiring about tenancy rates.

McMurray said an approach had already been made to Westcoast Savings Credit Union, the new building's major tenant.

"We asked why they, a credit union, would locate in a building put up with non-union labor and we were told that the main concern was to get the best deal possible for the shareholders," McMurray said.

"We pointed out that a lot of their customers were union members and that they might consider boycotting them because of this stand. A boycott may not be a bad idea. It could be carried out."

Questioned about Westcoast's policy regarding non-union buildings, Heather Weller, manager of the new branch, said: "I have no idea."

The leaflet handed out to would-be tenants claims that non-union workmen employed in the construction received pay rates "considerably below" industry standards and suggests that none of the savings are being passed on.

The main thrust of the message is to encourage the reader to purchase or rent union-built accommodation "at competitive prices or rates, and of quality construction."

Supercar is here.

We're calling our Acadians 'Supercars'. The reasons?

First of all, the price. Our 2-door Hatchback is less than a Honda Civic. Less than a Ford Fiesta. Less than a Toyota Corolla 1200. Less than a Datsun B 210 and substantially less than a Volkswagen Rabbit.

Second of all, super standard features. Four on the floor.* Centre console. Reclining front bucket seats. AM radio. Carpeting. Snappy white stripe bias-belted tires. And a 1.6 litre overhead cam engine for super performance.

Third of all, gas mileage. Our little Supercar is able to go 50 highway miles on a gallon of gas. 37 miles per gallon in the city. It already meets gas mileage requirements set by the federal government for the 1980's.

Fourthly, we've got two super models. There's our nifty 2-door Hatchback. And our new 4-door Hatchback. Both have lots of room for you and three friends.

 Automatic Transmission Available at Extra Cost*

SUPERCAR

And last, but not least, it's from General Motors. Which means that all the engineering and expertise of the world's largest car company goes into each car.

Plus every Supercar comes with an exclusive 4-colour striping and super decals that make it stand apart from mild-mannered, every day cars.

Acadian. The gas economy of the 1980's. The engineering of the 20th Century. And all at a price that will make you a super hero with your budget.

Trade in that dull, mild-mannered car you're driving and change into a Supercar. Only available at Empress Pontiac Buick. Have a real driving adventure.

Price $4,124.00

Dog victim in sea accident

NANAIMO — In a twist of the classic dog-saves-his-master story, a large dog with strong self-preservation instincts was killed by his master Thursday after the two and another man were thrown into the water when their 17-foot canoe overturned at Nanoose Bay near here.

Keith Mansbridge of nearby Lantzville and Robert Gilchrest, 20, of Edmonton, were in the canoe with the dog when winds and a chop overturned the light craft.

In its attempts to get out of the water, the dog tried clambering on Mansbridge's shoulders, almost drowning him, RCMP said, so he had to kill his dog.

The two men clung to a Canadian Forces buoy for half an hour before their cries for help were heard. They were rescued by sailors aboard a minesweeper.

Gilchrest was treated in hospital for hypothermia and was released Thursday night, RCMP disclosed Friday.

In another Nanaimo story, this one with a happier ending,an RCMP constable was able to talk a prisoner into surrendering Thursday after a standoff between the prisoner and provincial sheriff's deputies backed by RCMP.

Sheriff's deputy Gib Perry said the prisoner had walked in off the street to appear in court on an indecent assault charge.

Perry said the man was sentenced to three months in jail and while being searched, asked guards whether the search meant he was going to jail.

He said that when the prisoner was told that was the case, he replied: "Somebody is going to get killed."

As the prisoner took off his belt he took a folding knife from a pouch on the belt, opened it and threatened the two guards, said Perry. The two men backed off, locking the door behind them, and RCMP and sheriff's deputies were called to assist.

Perry, who was knifed and beaten three years ago when three prisoners escaped, said RCMP Constable Ron Dobysh managed to talk the prisoner into laying the knife on a table and surrendering.

Darryl Stead, 20, of Nanaimo, was later charged with assaulting a police officer and with common assault. No court date was scheduled.

Working hard on the Rim

TOFINO (CP) — With the first big camping weekend of the year two weeks away, an emergency program is being worked out at nearby Pacific Rim National Park to handle an expected 600 camping units.

Although the park has 91 regular campsites at Green Point and room for 120 tents at nearby Schooner Cove, a walk-in area, park director Frank Camp says one will be turned away.

In past years, the camping overflow was handled by a privately-owned campsite adjoining the Vancouver Island federal park but this has been closed because owner Bert Braiden says he is losing money. He has offered to sell his 400-unit camp to the park for more than $3 million.

Camp said it appears unlikely that the campground will be acquired before the Victoria Day weekend and provisions are being made to handle 400 overflow units on a temporary basis.

College chief quits with heavy heart

By DONNA REIMER

NANAIMO — "Now, how do I convince you that I wasn't fired?"

The question was in jest, but the amicable, open way that Malaspina College's founding president, Dr. Carl Opgaard, announced that he will be leaving the college this fall was characteristic.

Once Opgaard's resignation was announced, the Malaspina president was concerned that the press, and public, understood that his reasons for leaving were no reflection on the college.

And, the press conference called the afternoon of the resignation announcement, was an excellent opportunity for Opgaard, college council president Beryl Bennett and the press to reminisce about Malaspina's first 10 years.

When Opgaard came to Malaspina College in February of 1969, the institution was just one step beyond being a dream. From the original small college office on Wallace Street, to the dream of a new campus overlooking Nanaimo, Opgaard has been with Malaspina during the exciting formative years.

And now, he said, it is time to move on to a new challenge.

That challenge will be at Dakota State College in Madison, South Dakota. As president of the four-year college, Opgaard hopes to help guide the implementation of new programs.

Ten years is long enough at any job, he said. "Where I'm going they have a law that you can't be president more than 10 years."

Opgaard's spot at Malaspina will be hard to fill, Beryl Bennett said. The college council will be looking for a man like Opgaard, "with a great deal of ability to sell the college to the community, an imaginative personality, who is able to relate well to all disciplines in the college."

The college will advertise across Canada and the United States, and then pick the best person possible, she said, hoping, of couse, to find a qualified Canadian.

She and Opgaard reflected on Malaspina College's successes during the past 10 years.

Opgaard credits the citizens of Nanaimo with giving the support necessary for the successes.

"I'm incredibly biased when it comes to this community. There is not any other community in B.C. where there is as close a relationship with the college."

The college council president pointed out the new Madronna Exhibition Centre as an example of the community support for the college.

Money for the centre was raised in the community, when it became obvious that government grants would not be available without the extra source of funds.

Opgaard also praised the college council, saying that it has always had a vision about Malaspina, especially in connection with its international programs.

Council president said that at a meeting she attended recently in the U.S., Malaspina was pointed out as an example in international programs.

"The rest are still courting the idea, while we have consumated the marriage."

The international programs, specifically with Japan's Tamagawa University, are an example of Opgaard's philosophy of the value of international study.

He himself studied as a Fulbright scholar, and he has encouraged his four children to do the same.

"It is a very important aspect of international understanding and world peace. It's not good enough to just have the diplomats travelling between countries."

Another Opgaard characteristic is his willingness to take chances. He has proved his point with the new Malaspina Campus. The college still does not hold title to the national defence department property, but, the president pointed out, if the college had waited for the title, construction would not yet have started.

"If you wait until you have all the problems solved, you never do anything."

And, for much the same reason, Opgaard believes that the time has come to move on.

"This is undoubtedly the best job in a college in Canada. I'm not moving because I'm uncomfortable. It would be much more comfortable to stay."

In South Dakota, he will be applying much of the successful community college philosophy to an existing four-year college.

The state has a high percantage of high school graduates, but a low percentage of those attend college, he said. The aim is to make a college more accessible and more responsive to those not now choosing to attend college, he said.

The leave-taking is amicable, and done with a bit of regret, Opgaard said.

But council president admitted that she is just a bit miffed. After all, it is during her term as college council president that Opgaard's shoes will have to be filled.

B.C. grant aids centre

NANAIMO — The community of Nanoose Bay near Nanaimo has been awarded a grant of $19,535 to help with construction costs of the community hall portion of its library centre, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Friday.

Bawlf said the grant was one of the first to be awarded under the recreation and facilities assistance program, which provides for grants of one-third of capital construction costs up to $400,000.

Cowichan estuary, too

Library watch is kept by ratepayers

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley Electoral Area D Residents and Ratepayers Association has been informed that extensive research was conducted before any decision was made to move the regional library from its present location to the new community centre.

Vancouver Island Regional Library official Fred White, guest speaker at the ratepayer meeting, said users of the library were canvassed to determine if the relocation would affect their access to the library.

He said the results indicated that the majority of users drove to the library rather than walked.

"We found that an overwhelming number drove to the library and wouldn't be affected by the move to the community centre," he stated.

The ratepayers decided to invite White, after some members indicated that the library's move might make it more difficult for them to visit.

White admitted during discussion that the library had received letters expressing dissatisfaction with the proposed relocation.

The library official said the move was in part prompted by the need for more space by the Old Age Pensioners Organization, which has adjoining facilities at the Government Street location.

"That pressure and the fact that 5,000 square feet, 2,000 more than at the present location, is available at a good figure ($2.50 per square foot), resulted in the decision," he said.

North Cowichan Mayor George Whittaker, who was in attendance as an association member, agreed that the regional library had got a good deal.

Whittaker said the income from the five-year lease would hardly meet the cost of renovations for the library.

The library official said the $12,000 annual rent also covered janitorial services and utilities.

In other business, estuary committee chairman David Sharp said federal, regional, provincial and municipal governments had been advised on the association's views regarding development in the Cowichan estuary.

A slide prsentation was given on groundwater geology.

Association president Nora Maxwell said the provincial secretary's office had promised that a cabinet minister would be available as guest speaker at the next meeting May 24, but it was still uncertain which minister would be available.

Future looks brighter

Duncan SPCA receives shot in the arm

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley's ailing Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals received a shot in the arm and was revived here, following an enthusiastic and well- attended meeting at the Legion Hall.

The future of the SPCA had been in doubt, following the closure last April of its Cassino Road shelter. A few individuals have been trying to keep the society going, but its membership has shrunk from more than 200 to under 30.

Many new memberships and donations were received at the well-attended meeting and British Columbia SPCA executive director William Leach of Vancouver, who spoke to the audience on the aims and activities of the society, was successful in setting up a steering committee.

The 10 steering committee members are Stan Hall, treasurer; Pat Glover, secretary; Linda Berry, Jane Gibson, Colleen Richards, Kim Harvey, Pat Garraghan, Jean Ward, Margaret Restall and Lyn Kuhn.

Leach said the only thing the new members needed to get the show on the road as far as the animal shelter was concerned, "was an enthusiasm for animal welfare."

He said the Cowichan branch had closed down after being one of the oldest on the Island, because of a dispute over unionization between former management of the shelter and the executive.

The president of the society then resigned because of ill health, and the branch asked the provincial executive to take over.

Leach said the current assets of the local society included the shelter, currently valued at $50,000, and a bank account of about $3,000. These assets would revert back to the branch within three years.

"We've had some very generous donations and many new memberships tonight, and are well on our way to making this a viable operation once again," Leach said.

Don Adams, SPCA Victoria branch manager, said his branch would give any technical and practical help and advice that the local branch might need.

Linda Berry, a steering committee member largely responsible for the meeting, said the society still needs new members and donations, with about $2,000 required to get the shelter operational.

She said that a number of complaints about abused animals has been lodged in recent months but the SPCA has only been able to issue warnings because there was no shelter to take the animals to.

According to her, co-operation has been pledged from the staff of the Prevost Vet Clinic and municipal poundkeeper Dan Hughes.

Memberships cost $5 per year and this includes insurance should a dog bite anyone.

Those interested in becoming SPCA members or helping out in any way can call Linda Berry at 748-8398.

Finnish loss assures Canada of world playoff spot

PRAGUE (AP) — The United States, winless in five previous starts, won a furious battle of tailenders Friday with a surprise 7-3 victory over East Germany at the world hockey championship.

Harvey Bennett of Minnesota North Stars and Mike Eaves of the University of Wisconsin scored two goals each as the U.S. squad pulled even in the standings at 1-5 with the East Germans and Finland, a 5-3 loser to West Germany in Friday's other game.

Canada, 3-2, resumes play today against Sweden, 4-1, while the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia meet in a matchup of the two unbeaten teams.

East Germany took a 1-0 lead on Jachim Stasche's unassisted goal at 1:31 of the first period. However, Bennett's first of the game tied it at 6:08 and the Americans went ahead to stay on Eaves' first, on a power-play, at 9:41.

The Canada-Sweden contest will be televised on channel 8, beginning at 11:30 a.m. PST.

Curt Bennett of St. Louis Blues, Pat Westrum of Birmingham Bulls and Mike Fidler of Cleveland Barons got the other U.S. goals. Friedhelm Boegelsack and Rolf Bielas were the other East German scorers.

Pete LoPresti of the North Stars was a standout in the goal as the East Germans outshot the Americans 47-30.

The game was a rough encounter which ended in a bench-clearing brawl after Westrum was struck in the face by a high stick. Boegelsack got a minor penalty for his part in the altercation, while Westrum was assessed a major. Bill Gilligan of Cincinnati Stingers received a major and misconduct.

Harvey Bennett received a minor and major after a stick-swing duel with East German defenceman Joachim Lempio.

Meanwhile, the Finnish loss ensured Canada's elevation into the top four and a berth in the playoff round. The Canadians needed either a loss or a tie by the Finns, who upset them 6-4 in the opening game of the preliminary round-robin.

Seppo Repo scored two goals for Finland, but it wasn't enough to prevent the West Germans from all but guaranteeing themselves a continuing berth in the A group next year.

West Germany faces rival East Germany in the final game Sunday after a game between Finland and the U.S.

NFL castoffs enter the Leos' CFL fold

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have signed four more players, including three imports, to 1978 Canadian Football League contracts, the Western Football Conference team announced Friday.

They are imports Frank Oliver of Kentucky State, Bill Rice of Brigham Young University and Gary Evans of Iowa State, and Canadian Terry Davis of the University of Western Ontario.

Oliver, 26, is a defensive back who had two tryouts in the National Football League with San Francisco '49ers, Buffalo Bills and Tampa Bay Bucaneers. The six-foot-one, 196-pounder was released by the '49ers last year.

Rice, 24, tried out with the NFL New York Giants last year as a defensive tackle. He's six-foot-four and 257 pounds.

Evans, 22, is an offensive tackle who dropped out of college last year with one year of eligibility remaining. He's six-foot-three and 230 pounds.

The Lions selected Davis, 24, in the 1977 CFL Canadian draft, but the six-foot-two, 240-pound guard elected to return to school.

More tests for ailing runner

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuter) — New Zealand track star John Walker, suffering from a recurring calf ailment which is threatening his athletics career, will undergo tests on his leg on Monday.

On the basis of the results of the tests, which were put back from today, Walker will decide whether he has a chance of competing in the Commonwealth Games at Edmonton in August.

Walker, holder of the world mile record, had an operation on his right calf in February aimed at curing a mysterious cramp which troubled him after he had run about five miles (eight kilometres).

After recovering from the operation, he cautiously began training and gradually built up to 80 miles (130 kilometres) a week with no sign of the cramp returning.

But a few weeks ago, when he tried to increase his weekly mileage, the cramp struck again, halting his training.

Rollick into semi-finals

EDMONTON (CP) — Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, using his patented smash at key points, outlasted Ken Priestman of Kitchenerin men's single quarter-finals at the Canadian badminton championships.

Rollick, 35, lost the first set 12-15, but won 15-10, 15-5 in the next two sets for the right to meet John Czich of Ottawa today in a semi-final match.

Czich defeated Pat Tryon of Montreal 4-15, 15-9, 15-8.

Defending-champion Jamie McKee of Toronto and Lucio Fabris of Creighton Mines, Ont., whipped John Taylor of Vancouver 15-7, 15-0 and Don Smith of Calgary 15-7, 15-2, respectively.

McKee, Czich, Rollick and Fabris, in that order, were the top four seeds in the 60-man field for the championships, from which Canada's Commonwealth Games team will be named.

A mild upset was posted in women's singles when Barbara O'Brien of Ottawa defeated Johanne Falardeau of Quebec City 11-7, 12-11 for the right to meet top-seeded Wendy Clarkson of Calgary in a semi-final today.

Clarkson survived a tough second set to defeat Claire Backhouse of Vancouver 11-1, 12-10 while in the other quarter-finals, second-seeded Jane Youngberg of Surrey downed Lesley Harris of Calgary 11-3, 11-3 and Sharon Crawford of Calgary bounced Helen Binns of Montreal 11-7, 11-2.

Crawford, seeded fourth, had a difficult time reaching the quarter-finals. She needed three sets to nip Sandra Skillings of Vancouver 6-11, 11-2, 12-11 in a morning round.

Long rest in hurler's future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cleveland Indians pitcher Wayne Garland underwent surgery Friday which disclosed, as expected, a sizeable tear in the rotator cuff of his right shoulder, Dr. Frank Jobe said following the operation.

However, the Los Angeles orthopedic specialist said he was encouraged about Garland's future by what he saw during the operation.

Jobe said he told Garland, 26, he should not throw a baseball again, or begin any kind of rehabilitation on the arm, until spring training next year. He said after Garland does start throwing again, it will be "just a matter of hard work."

Bruins goal maybe wasn't

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — It is too late now, but officials of Philadelphia Flyers feel they have a legitimate complaint about the game-winning goal scored by Rick Middleton of Boston in the second game of the Bruins' 7-5 National Hockey League semi-final.

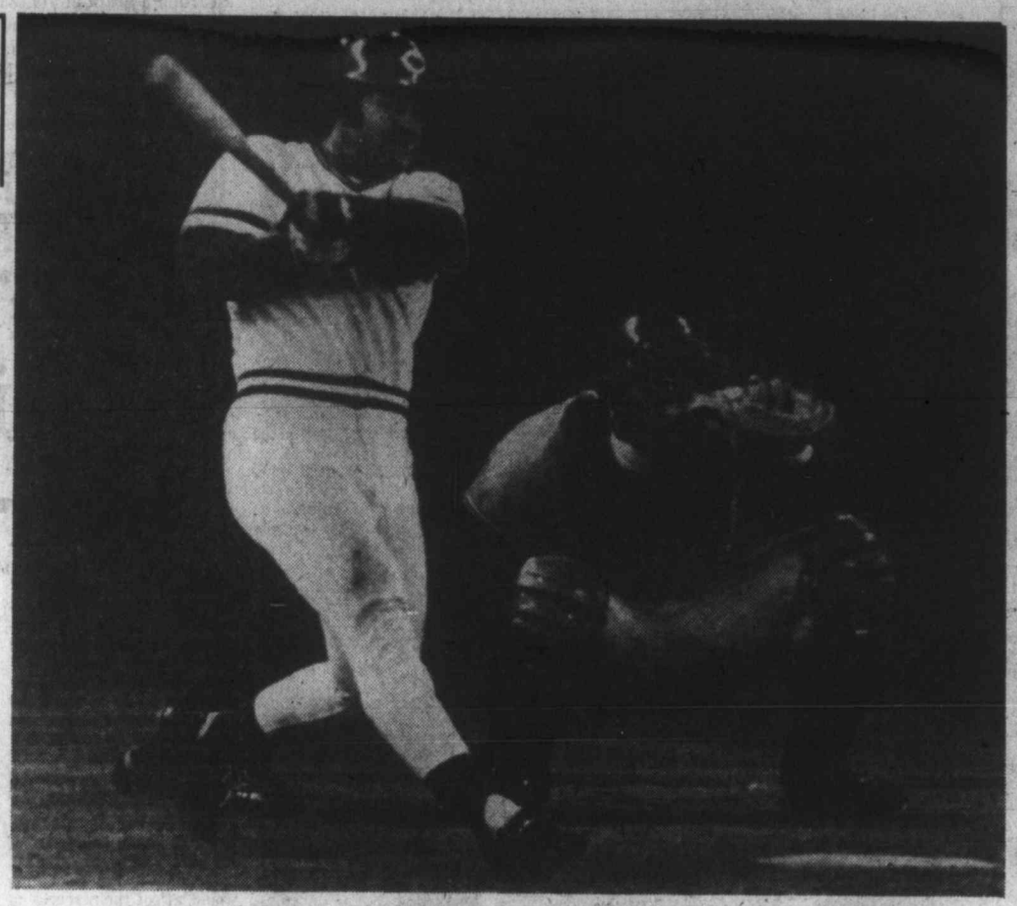

Philadelphia general manager Keith Allen and other team officials spent a good deal of time Friday studying videotapes of Middleton's goal from the lip of the crease.

It appeared on the tape that the puck hit the crossbar and never crossed the goal-line.

The strange thing is that the Flyers never complained to referee Wally Harris about the play at the time. The tape showed Harris appeared to be out of position.

The Flyers did whine during the game about the fifth goal scored by Bobby Schmautz at 2:36 of the second period, claiming Don Marcotte had deliberately interfered with goaltender Bernie Parent on the play.

Parent argued with Harris for a few seconds, but to no avail.

Rose collects 3,000th hit Ryan fires fifth one-hitter

Calling his shot, Pete Rose joined baseball's exclusive 3,000-hit club Friday night and then set his sights on Stan Musial's National League record of 3,630.

And amid all the ruckus, Nolan Ryan of the American League's California Angels, reached a milestone of his own.

"With a couple of strong seasons in the next two or three years, I can do it," the Cincinnati Reds' star said after collecting two hits off Montreal's Steve Rogers to reach his latest milestone.

It wasn't enough, however, as Rogers scattered six hits and struck out 10 in the Expos' 4-3 victory.

On Thursday, Rose had predicted he would reach the magic total Friday night to prevent a conflict with Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

After narrowly missing a hit in the first inning with a liner to left, he bounced a high chopper to the mound in the third for hit No. 2,999.

When Rose went to the plate in the fifth, to the roar of more than 37,000 fans, Rogers wasn't going to play cat-and-mouse.

"At that point, I said, 'To heck with it—go right at him,'" said Rogers, adding that both hits came on fast balls on the inside of the plate."

The switch-hitting Rose is the 13th player to enter the 3,000-hit shrine.

Ryan tossed the sixth one-hitter of his career for the Angels 5-0 victory over Cleveland Indians. He allowed only a sixth inning single by Duane Kuiper and he also struck out 12 batters to move into No. 12 spot in the all-time list.

Ryan lost his bid for a record fifth no-hitter when Kuiper, batting just .193, singled inside the third-base line in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the National League, Tommy Boggs belted his first major league home run and recorded his first league victory as Atlanta Braves defeated Houston Astros 5-2; Philadelphia Phillies dumped New York Mets 9-4; San Diego Padres nipped St. Louis Cardinals 2-1; and Los Angeles Dodgers clipped Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2.

Boggs had a 1-10 record during two seasons with Texas Rangers in the American League before the Braves acquired him in a trade. He worked seven innings, allowing five hits, before being relieved by Eddy Solomon.

In the American League, Thurman Munson had three hits and drove in two runs to lead New York Yankees to their fifth consecutive victory, a 5-2 triumph over Texas Rangers. The loss broke a seven-game Texas winning streak.

Baltimore Orioles got by Minnesota Twins 2-1; Milwaukee Brewers blitzed Kansas City 9-0; and Oakland A's pinned a 5-1 defeat on Detroit Tigers.

Rookie John Johnson tossed a four-hitter as Oakland collected its fifth consecutive victory.

The A's improved their record to 19-5—tops in the majors—in winning the battle between the American League's division leaders which attracted a paid crowd of 14,612—second largest of the season at the Coliseum.

A's, Elks win

Larry McKinnon beat out an infield hit, advanced on a wild pitch and scored the winning run in the eighth inning Friday night, as Victoria Athletics nipped Capital Builders 6-5 in a Heywood Men's Softball League game.

Successive singles by Ryan and Bernie Talbot brought McKinnon around after the clubs went into extra innings. A four-run Capital outburst in the sixth knotted the score after Victoria built up a 5-1 lead over four innings.

In the only Stuffy McGinnis League game, meanwhile, Ernie Holness stayed in command for the distance, doling out six hits in pitching Elks to an easy 7-1 decision over Juan de Fuca Builders at Central Park.

Holness' only mistake was a home-run pitch thrown to Pat Duncan in the third inning. In seven innings, he struck out three batters and walked two.

Elks brought out the lumber early, scoring three runs in the first inning. Mike Lee hit a homer with a man on in the fifth and Alf Hass led off the sixth inning with a bases-empty shot off losing pitcher Ken Gordon.

At Sanscha Park, Prairie Inn managed to steal a 3-2 decision from Harvey's Sporting Goods in the only Sidney Men's Association contest. A passed ball in the seventh inning allowed the winning run to score.

Winning pitcher was Jim Bowden, while Dick Michaud was handed the loss.

FA Cup final opens TV fare on hectic day

A world-wide television audience estimated at four hundred million will watch Arsenal and Ipswich Town battle today at Wembley Stadium for one of England's top soccer honors, the English Football Association Cup.

And the TV audience for the Kentucky Derby, on a particularly interesting day of telecasting for sports fans, may be as great. Among other events being offered are the Canada-Sweden world hockey championship game, Stanley Cup action, the Byron Nelson Golf Classic, the usual baseball games and other odds and ends of live and taped shows.

Inside Wembley Stadium, where the Cup final has been played since 1923, will be 92,000 who have been able to acquire tickets literally worth their weight in gold.

Many times this number of rabid soccer fans would go to almost any lengths to secure a ticket for English soccer's greates spectacle. It is the great "scalping" day of the year for ticket touts, the opportunists who buy tickets and sell them for 20 times their face value.

Paradoxically, Cup finals are often disappointing from the purely football point of view. With so much at stake, players are affected by extreme nervous tension, and they find the fresh, lush turf of the little-used Wembley pitch a big contrast to the grounds on which they have recently been playing.

The millions of British soccer fans who cannot be at Wembley mostly call a halt to their normal activities to watch on television. The Cup final is given saturation coverage, with both British channels opening up their Wembley broadcasts hours before the kick-off as build-up to live transmission of the match.

On the field it is moment-by-moment combat in which one bad slip can mean the loss of the trophy and a sad end to the run of five wins in the knock-out competition which has brought each team to the Wembley showdowns.

The winners not only take the Cup but also earn the right to play in the money-spinning European Cup-Winners Cup the following season.

Arsenal, which has won the Cup four times, is an even-money favorite to prevail Saturday. Ipswitch Town, in the final for the first time, is on offer at 5 to 2, with 9 to 4 quoted against a draw after 90 minute play.

Arsenal also has the better recent form. It ook fourth place in the league championship while Ipswich finished in the bottom half. And Ipswich has been bludgeoned by injuries and ended a series of poor results in the league with a 6-1 defeat by Aston Villa last Saturday.

But manager Bobby Robson is unshakenly optimistic.

"Being the underdogs helps ease the tension and that suits us fine," he commented. "West Bromwich Albion were favorites to beat us in the semi-finals and Arsenal seem to be most people's choice this time, but that does not worry us in the least."

The FA Cup final kicks off the busy day on channels 2 and 6 at 9 a.m.

Other times and channels:

11:30 a.m.— Byron Nelson Golf Classic (4)
11:30 a.m.— World hockey, Canada vs. Sweden (8)
2 p.m.— Kentucky Derby (4, 8)
5 p.m.— National Hockey League playoff, Montreal Canadiens at Toronto Maple Leafs (2, 6).

Security tight

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Churchill Downs refused to reveal Friday what steps it has taken to prevent the cashing of $50 counterfeit tickets on the Kentucky Derby.

The possibility of that happening arose after the theft of a parimutuel machine from Keeneland race track in Lexington last week.

"We can't stop selling $50 tickets," said Jim Filburn, parimutuel manager at the Downs. "We're putting up barriers," he added but refused to say whether he was talking about added security.

The Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, a national track security agency, also had no comment.

The machine, which prints only $50 tickets, was removed from the clubhouse area at Keeneland either last Thursday night or Friday morning.

William Greely, general manager at Keeneland, said he wouldn't be concerned by the theft because of standard security precautions involving the Derby.

Vic High, Oak Bay reach rugby semi-finals

KELOWNA — Two Victoria-area representatives moved into today's semi-final round of the B.C. high school rugby championships, each winning three games Friday.

Victoria High Titans, Greater Victoria league titlists and defending provincial champs, shut out Centennial of Coquitlam 10-0, blanked North Kamloops 29-0 and followed suit against North Delta, winning 7-0 in Group D.

Greater Victoria finalists Oak Bay Barbarians bounced South Delta 20-6, dumped Penticton 10-0 and handled Cranbrook 25-0 in Group A.

Vic High meets Kelowna, which got by Claremont of Victoria 6-0, Fort St. James 38-0 and topped North Surrey 24-24 Friday, while the Barbarians tackle Mountain High. Mountain triumphed over Kamloops 10-0 and Port Alberni, the fourth Island rep, 26-0. The Fraser Valley school also bombed Elphinstone 28-0.

Claremont bowed to North Surrey 6-0 but thrashed Fort St. James 44-0. Port Alberni salvaged a win, tripping Elphinstone 15-4, but dropped a 19-10 decision to Kamloops.

Following today's 10 a.m. semis, the final goes at 2 p.m.

Other scores:

Group A — Penticton 16, South Delta 7; Penticton 18, Cranbrook 3; South Delta 20, Cranbrook 4. Group B — Kamloops 21, Elphinstone 4. Group C — North Surrey 46, Ft. St. James 0. Group D — N. Kamloops 4, N. Delta 0; Centennial 6, N. Kamloops 3; Centennial 10, N. Delta 0.

Court bars Canadian fishermen from U.S. waters

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A United States District Court Judge has issued a temporary injunction that forbids Canadian boats from fishing within coastal waters off the Western U.S., and Canada might be forced to take reciprocal action, a Canadian fisheries official said Friday.

U.S. fisheries authorities argued that the order would strain relations between the two countries, which have been operating under an interim agreement while negotiating the terms of a more permanent treaty since the establishment of the 200-mile limit last year.

In Vancouver, Rod Hourston, director of governmental affairs for the federal fisheries ministry confirmed those fears Friday night: Canada could be forced to ban U.S. boats from Canadian waters if "we are turfed off their side," he said.

The ruling will affect Canadian trollers who have been fishing for chinook in U.S. waters since the season opened on May 1, Hourston said. Canadian halibut fishermen off the coast of Alaska, and fisheries on the East coast may also be affected, Hourston said.

U.S. Judge Donald Voorhees issued the temporary injunction Friday, ordering the federal government to stop Canadian vessels from fishing off the West Coast.

Voorhees stayed his order for seven days to allow time for an appeal.

Canadian fishing boats have been allowed to fish within U.S. waters since the early 1970s by reciprocal agreement between the executive branches of both governments, Edward Evans, northwest regional counsel for the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, argued.

An agreement has been drafted between the two governments, Evans said, but has not yet been ratified by Congress.

The suit was brought against the state commerce department and the U.S. state department by the Washington Trollers Association and the Quileute Indian Tribe.

The groups argued that Canadians were violating U.S. statutes by fishing within the 200-mile limit. The statutes could only be overturned, the plaintiffs argued, by congressional action.

The federal government argued that although congressional approval of the treaty was required, the government retained its right to use discretion in enforcing the law, Evans said.

"It ill-behooves the federal government to come in here and enforce treaties, which it has done, and not enforce

Queen greets fighting ladies

Queen Elizabeth talks with unusually-lovely members of the Queen's Own Gurkha Rifles, dressed as women, at the regiment's headquarters in Church Crookham, England. Gurkhas, mercenary soldiers from Nepal, said to be among world's fiercest fighting men, had donned the dresses to entertain the queen.

S. Africa troops still in Angola, envoy tells UN

Colonist wire services

PRETORIA — South Africa defended Friday its one-day helicopter raid deep into Angola, saying the town it attacked was a headquarters for guerrilla forces harrassing Namibia. Officials here denied Angolan assertions that civilians were killed in the assault.

Angola denounced the raid — said to be the largest into its territory since 1975 — as "racist South African aggression."

At the United Nations Friday, Angola charged in the Security Council that South African troops are still in Angola and are being reinforced.

Angolan ambassador Elisio De Figueiredo told the council, called into session to consider charges by his government of South African aggression, that the claim the troops were withdrawn after a limited action is a myth.

"Reinforcements are still being brought in, even now, and the troops show no sign of withdrawing," Figueireido said. "The bombardment has been extended."

A draft resolution proposing that the council strongly condemn "this latest armed invasion perpetrated by the South African racist regime" was circulated as the council met. The draft, prepared by non-aligned states, also would warn South Africa that the council would have to consider applying sanctions in case of a repetition of the attack on Angola.

South Africa's military high command confirmed that South African troops, flown by helicopters, penetrated 160 miles into Angola to attack the mining town of Cassinga. Lt.-Gen. Jack Dutton, the army's operations chief, said the town was completely occupied by the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) as the headquarters for terrorist operations against Namibia, which is administered by South Africa.

Six South African troops were killed in the attack on Cassinga and in simultaneous raids on other SWAPO camps close to the Angola-Namibia border, the army said. It did not disclose losses inflicted on the guerrillas by the ground attack and bombing raids. The object of the operation, a military communique said, was to discourage further SWAPO operations against Namibia, not to kill people.

The raids achieved surprise, particularly against the SWAPO headquarters personnel at Cassinga, sources said. The attacks began early Thursday morning and most of the troops were back behind the Namibia fortified border 12 hours later. Remaining invaders returned early Friday morning.

Large quantities of SWAPO weapons and ammunition were seized or destroyed. In Cassinga, South African army medics treated women and children in a hospital, apparently family members of SWAPO, the communique said.

Although there have been occasional "hot pursuit" operations by South African troops across the border into Angola during the past year, this was the first deep penetration since

Jaguars pounce on rebels

PARIS (Reuter) — Mauritanian troops pursued Polisario guerrilla survivors Friday after French Jaguar strike planes killed dozens of the guerrillas in a low-level attack with cannon and rockets deep in Mauritania, officials said here.

The guerrillas, in a column of 50 vehicles, were heading across the Sahara Desert for the world's largest open iron ore mining centre at Zouerate, where the workers include over 200 Frenchmen. Mauritania is a former French colony.

French officials said there was only one sortie by the Jaguars, that no French planes were hit and that Mauritanian ground forces were pursuing the fleeing guerrillas.

At least seven Polisario vehicles were destroyed in the air strike, French officials said.

Between six and 10 Jaguars were sent to the Chad capital of N'Djamena last week. Returning visitors said the fleet was already making a show of strength over the north but had not yet gone into action.

MOMENT THAT REALLY COUNTS

That titan of trivia, Bruce Lowther has struck again.

The genial manager of augmented channel services for Cable 10 observes that today a rare time-date sequence occurs. The numerical order for a minute today is 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8 or 12:34 on May 6, 1978 (12:34, 5-6-78).

The next moment of digital history will occur at 23:45 June 7, 1989.

And if you want to break it down into seconds, mark 12:34:56 July 8, 1990, on your calendar.

15,000 jobless pay for servant's flub

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will ask about 15,000 individuals to pay back nearly $4.3 million in unemployment insurance benefits mistakenly paid to claimants in B.C., Quebec and Nova Scotia, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Friday.

Cullen told John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) in the Commons the overpayment "was not the result of cheating or ripping off."

"It was a mistake, a human error made by an official in my department," he said. The money would be recovered with as little hardship as possible to individuals who were overpaid.

Larry St.-Laurent, head of unemployment insurance operations, said the overpayments totalled about $1.6 million to nearly 6,000 claimants in the Montreal area in December and January; about $1.5 million to about 5,000 claimants in Nova Scotia last April, May, June and September; and about $1.1 million to nearly 4,400 claimants in the Vancouver region last April and May.

St.-Laurent said where individuals showed financial hardship making repayment impossible the government would "write the overpayment off completely."

The error was made by a public servant who granted six extra weeks of benefits to the 15,000 claimants because the regional unemployment rate in their areas was one per cent higher than the national unemployment rate.

Unemployment insurance regulations stipulate that six weeks of extended benefits are not supposed to be granted unless the regional unemployment rate is 1.1 per cent higher than the national rate.

By June 1 all individuals who were overpaid should have received a letter from the government saying so. They will be asked to speak with district unemployment insurance officials who can reduce the repayment if the person had accumulated enough insured earnings before the six-week period to have made them eligible for re-establishing a claim.

St.-Laurent said it would likely be mid-July before all individuals affected made contact with officials and several more weeks before each individual was told exactly how much, if any, was owed back.

Each claimant then has 30

Perrault sees fall election

Senator Ray Perrault steered clear of election forecasting Friday but hinted, with a smile, that federal polling day could come in the fall.

Perrault, government leader in the Senate who was in Victoria for discussions with Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf regarding Victoria's Inner Harbor, said the federal government's first duty to Canada was to try to "turn the economy around."

He said "believe it or not, that is the main preoccupation of Ottawa. And there are indications that improvement is taking place and that things will be fairly good in the fall. If coincidentally an election was called at that time, well . . . the spring of '79 would be pretty good, too."

Bawlf said his discussions with Perrault involved the juggling of federal funds and a clearer defining of priorities. "They didn't involve any big changes," Bawlf said. "It was just one of those meetings where we decide what will come next and when the funds can be released."

Bikes hit, man dies

Gerald Arthur Bezanson, 25, of Port Alberni was killed Friday afternoon on Highway 19 when his motorcycle struck an accompanying motorcycle, throwing him into the path of a car about 12 kilometres north of Qualicum Beach.

Bezanson was taken to Nanaimo Regional General Hospital where he died shortly after arrival. His female passenger, Carey Sorenson, 27, of Port Alberni was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital. There were no other injuries.

LONDON FULL UP

LONDON (AP) — London's hotels are full up and the tourist board has appealed to tourists not to travel to the British capital. A board official said Friday the unusual situation has been caused by a business conference, forthcoming sports events and the Ascension Day holiday in Europe. The board said visitors should try to find hotel rooms on the south coast.

Carter steering clear of Quebec

SPOKANE, Wash. (Reuter) — President Carter refused on Friday to become involved in the controversy over the secessionist movement in Quebec.

Carter maintained his neutrality when asked by a Spokane citizen at a town meeting if the U.S. would consider granting statehood to other Canadian provinces if Quebec broke away.

Amidst laughter and applause, he said he always made it a practice to avoid answering at least one question—and that was the question Friday.

"I'll let the Canadian people decide about the future of their great country," he said.

"When they make a decision, I'll abide by it."

Coup threat triggers power play

VICTORIA, Seychelles (Reuter) — The Seychelles government assumed emergency powers Friday, saying 21 persons suspected of involvement in a plot to seize power were being held under the new laws.

The laws give the president of the Indian Ocean republic the power to detain without trial anyone he considered behaving in a manner "prejudicial to public safety".

They also also give him the right to impose censorship on the media.

Police announced Tuesday the arrest of 21 persons, including several women, who they said planned to launch a coup against the left-wing government of President Albert Rene during his current visit to China and North Korea.

Hydro peace over hurdle with bus pact

The second of three hurdles has been cleared en route to B.C. Hydro industrial peace—but not by much.

"It wasn't really overwhelming," Amalgamated Transit Union spokesman Preston Storey said Friday night after transit bus drivers, mechanics and tradesmen had voted 68 per cent in favor of accepting a new collective agreement with Hydro.

Earlier in the week, gas workers covered by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, accepted a similar agreement by an 88 per cent margin. The third union, the Office and Technical Employees Union, is conducting a ratification vote. Sources say they expect the package will be readily accepted.

The difference in the transit workers' vote and that registered by the gas workers is being attributed to the touchy spareboard issue which affected only the bus drivers.

"I think it would have been higher except for the spareboard thing," said Storey, recording secretary of the ATU's Victoria local.

A portion of the union's members felt it was wrong to give up full control of the spareboard, a system involving the assigning of drivers during peak periods. But ATU officials said it was not a case of turning control over to Hydro. The union, they said, had relinquished only exclusive control and would still have control of policing and other aspects of the system.

The spareboard issue was the springboard to a one-week Hydro strike late in March. The strike came at the height of protracted disputes with the three unions.

The wage settlement for the transit workers involves a 6.18 per cent increase in the first year and four per cent in the final eight months.

The contract is retroactive to last July 30.

Breakfast from Tiffany's—for $125

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tired of the same old snap, crackle and pop at breakfast?

Now there's "Breakfast from Tiffany's," the breakfast delivery service that will bring everything from Dom Perignon and caviar, to beer and fresh bagels to your bedside.

For a mere $125, you can sip either Tattinger Blanc de Blanc or Dom Perignon and nibble on Beluga caviar, toasted bits of French bread, strawberries Parisienne or Black Forest cake.

Wish you were on the Champs Elysee? Voila! Breakfast from Tiffany's delivers a fifth of French champagne, red salmon caviar or Canadian Nova Scotia salmon, toasted bits of French bread and fresh bagels and cream cheese — all for $50.

If you travel by the American Plan, you can substitute American champagne and skip the French bread for a $26 breakfast of Canadian Nova Scotia salmon and fresh bagels.

New Yorker Bonnie Schachter said she was inspired to found Breakfast from Tiffany's by the movie — not the jewelry store so she says there'll be no 14-carat diamonds delivered.

"We're out to prove romance is alive and flourishing," she said. All orders are accompanied by fresh-cut roses, served on French lace.

Then there's the the $21 "Bunker Plan."

It comes with a six-pack of beer, belly lox, fresh bagels and cream cheese.

THIS HOUSE WAS DESIGNED FOR HANDICAPPED

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist Reporter

A dream come true.

That's how four handicapped people describe their new home at 238 Obed in Saanich.

It was 2½ years ago that they first got together to plan a home of their own, an uninstitutional kind of place where they could live in a regular neighborhood and take care of their own needs.

Many hours of work, about $88,000, and much volunteer support later, they opened their new home officially on Friday, welcoming about 40 well-wishers to the single-storey 2,000 square-foot residence they have christened Obed House.

Designed by architect Vic Davis, the building is newer than other homes in the surrounding area but relatively unobtrusive. A central activity area used for dining, watching television, and just about everything else, opens on to a large patio. To one side of this area are three bedrooms and 1½ bathrooms, including the bedroom and half-bath for attendant Larry McDermid. To the other side are two more bedrooms, a kitchen, bathroom and work room.

The whole house has been designed with wheelchair users in mind, and is the first group home in Victoria to be constructed from the ground up for the handicapped (another successful group home has been operating for about two years in a renovated house on Falmouth Road). The kitchen's low counters and front plug-ins, the bathrooms with their wheel-in showers, and the home's alarm system make it both convenient and safe for the handicapped.

The four people living in the home—Linda Langille, Richard Bennett, Judy Milligan and Tom Daykin—selected each other as residents for the home, and have been involved in designing the home itself.

McDermid is a full-time attendant for the home, but stresses that the residents, and not he, run it. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation provided mortgage funds for the home, and the human resources ministry pays operating expenses beyond what the residents can afford.

The home first started taking shape when the G.R. Pearkes Clinic purchased the property on which it sits, and then served as the catalyst in getting the residents together. Clinic director Derek Thompson says "there is no reason for handicapped adults capable of living independently to live in institutional settings."

The G.R. Pearkes board has found that group home residents adjust extremely well to their new settings and will probably continue to initiate such projects where possible, Thompson said. The clinic also maintains contact with the Group Home Independent Living Society, which officially operates the two group homes in Victoria.

The residents themselves, three of whom are in wheelchairs, find their new home a strong, and pleasant contrast to their former surroundings. Linda and Tom formerly stayed in the Gorge Hospital which is fine for sick people but difficult for those for whom independence is an important goal.

"It sure beats living in a hospital," Linda said in an interview. Daykin said it is much quieter than in the Gorge, although the bustle of Larry and Judy preparing a dinner in the kitchen nearby indicated there is plenty going on.

Richard Bennett had been living with his family before coming to the new group home.

"I didn't know there was so much to do. I have more responsibility now."

Is he ready to move back home?

"This is my home now," he said with a laugh.

Judy, who communicates through a portable signing device on which she types out a message, introduces herself as "the noisy one of the bunch."

She formerly lived in an apartment with a live-in homemaker, sponsored by the James Bay Community Association, and stayed in a wheelchair until a few months ago, when new treatments she is receiving for multiple sclerosis enabled her to leave it.

From the window the residents of Obed House can see a small aviary in the yard next door. That touch is one little detail that convinces the Obed House residents that they are in the right place, for the other group home on Falmouth Road also has an aviary next to it.

"Next time they build something like this they're going to have to find one with an aviary," Linda laughed.

Behind the scenes at Obed House ceremony

As they opened the house Rick just went on raking

Rick White of 4375 is unemployed, but on the other hand, you couldn't really say he isn't gainfully employed.

For the last 1½ weeks he's been toiling around Obed House, 238 Obed, a new group home for four handicapped persons, doing the landscaping for the new home free of charge.

Why? "Boredom, I guess. And I like doing this work."

White gained a year's experience in landscaping at Nanaimo before going to the Yukon to do some pipefitting. Victoria-born, he says there is no work to be had in this area, and he may be heading back north again to see what he can get there.

In the meantime, he learned from friends at a boys' club about the project at 238 Obed, which the boys club was helping to landscape, and offered to lend a hand. Plants were ordered and set in an attractive bark-filled border around the house. They attracted the attention of, among others, gardening enthusiast Senator Ray Perrault, who attended the official opening of Obed House on Friday.

While Perrault was giving his speech to a crowd of neatly-dressed dignitaries in the new home's sheltered patio, White was out on the grounds in little more than a pair of jeans, contouring the topsoil.

Perrault offered the usual congratulations to everyone involved, including the people who had chosen the rhododendrons. After the official announcements were over he leaned across the fence to talk gardening with White.

"There's one guy who really deserves an award," he said, after learning that White was unemployed but helping out anyway.

Writs obtained in Saanich bid for back taxes

Saanich municipality Friday obtained supreme court writs against 10 major property owners who still haven't paid about $117,000 in 1977 taxes.

The move is part of a concerted effort by council to limit the burden on the average homeowner, finance chairman Ald. David Paterson said Friday night.

Paterson explained that although the municipality will collect on the taxes eventually, any back taxes not paid by Dec. 31, the end of the fiscal year for municipalities, become liabilities on the subsequent year's taxes.

"And if it comes down to a tax sale, we can't spend the land. We need dollars," he said.

Paterson said that at last Dec. 31, more than $1 million was outstanding in back taxes. This had been reduced to about $290,000 owed by 18 major delinquents a few weeks ago, when council sent out legal notices informing them writs would be issued unless payment was made.

The next legal step against the delinquents was the filing of writs Friday.

Named are:

- Michael C. Williams, owing $15,773.
- Longhorn Enterprises Ltd., $19,809.
- G. Plan Properties Ltd., $11,186.
- Longhorn Steakhouses Ltd., $13,137.
- Aske Construction Ltd., $13,561.
- Vista Homes Ltd., $14,174.
- Garr Management Ltd., $14,473.
- Selkirk Developments Ltd., $5,225.
- Ralph S. Shepherd, $6,925.
- Kreiger, Stricker and Co. Ltd., $5,422.

Paterson said he recognized last year was a bad one for the property development industry, and expected this one would be better, but council felt the smaller property owners shouldn't be penalized in their behalf.

Lawyers protest lack of space

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

The head of the Victoria Bar Association has criticized interview facilities at the Law Courts building, calling them "disgraceful" and accusing provincial court services officials of reneging on promises made nearly three months ago.

Dean Wilson said Friday the problem of proper interview facilities was a serious one and that his association had made known its requirements since the fall of 1977.

He said the association wanted and had been promised three interview rooms, and that when the provincial courts moved from the Fisgard Street location Feb. 16, only one was available—a little janitors' store room measuring 3½- to four-feet wide, six- to eight-feet long and eight-feet high.

Wilson said a plexiglass partition which divides the room roughly in half prevented lawyers and clients from hearing each other unless they shouted. People could "hear better outside than in the same room."

He said the preoccupation with security was misplaced.

Wilson said representatives of the bar met Feb. 13, three days before the provincial courtrooms began full operation in the Burdett Street building, with Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Supreme Court and Chief provincial Court Judge Lawrence Brahan, as well as members of the court services branch to iron out any difficulties. He said the three interview rooms were discussed and the lawyers were assured they would have them. Wilson said one of the court services representatives even went up to him later and asked him to submit a letter requesting the three interview rooms. Although he wrote that day, nothing had happened since, Wilson said.

Wilson also said he was assured Friday that money—which was mentioned as the main stumbling block—had been made available for the renovations but he asked when it would be done.

MP's question put to labor for phrasing

If organized labor doesn't like the way Victoria MP Allan McKinnon puts a question to his constituents, then perhaps labor would like to word the question for him.

That proposition comes from the Conservative member himself.

McKinnon said he made the offer to Victoria Labor Council president John Shields Friday and was told by Shields it would be "taken up with the executive."

"I thought he would have jumped at the chance," said McKinnon, who had been criticized Wednesday night by the labor council for the way he handled the thorny issue of the right to work movement in a recent questionnaire.

Delegates to the labor council meeting were critical of the fact that the McKinnon question simply asked constituents if they favored the right to work movement, without giving any description of the movement. The movement was born in the southern U.S. and labor says the 20 states where right to work legislation exists have substandard working conditions and pay rates. They say it destroys the union shop concept and is actually a weapon for emasculating the labor movement.

Also bothering the labor council was the comment offered by McKinnon on his printed report of the questionnaire results. He said he was surprised that 75 per cent of the respondents favored the movement and suggested it was possibly time his party started taking the matter seriously.

McKinnon
. . . his offer

McKinnon said Friday night it wasn't a matter of advocating right-to-work legislation. He said the Conservative party favors the Rand Formula—a formula which would allow lemployees to remain outside a union, but would make it necessary for them to abide by certain rules. In return for services received, they would have to pay an amount of money equalling the union dues.

McKinnon said he told Shields that if the labor council wanted to re-word the question to suit itself he would include it in his next questionnaire.

He suggested the council might find it difficult to do so in an objective manner.

Book store adopts Blencoe discount

A sign offering a 10 per cent discount to senior citizens appeared Friday in window of Book Mine, a bookstore at 841 Fort.

It was the first since Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe's appeal early this week for a discount on purchases of all goods and services by senior citizens.

Blencoe, meanwhile, hopes to have posters made saying: "Senior Citizen Store." The posters would be distributed to all firms willing to give the discount to the elderly.

Anniversary

Saturday night visiting hours at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain are 9 to 11 p.m. from now until September, when they will revert to 8 to 10 p.m. However, for tonight only, the dome of the 1.85-metre telescope will be open for public viewing from sunset (8:35 p.m.) to midnight on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the commissioning of the telescope.

Study costs almost as much as the outfall

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

It's going to cost the Capital Region District $560,000 to make an environmental study of the proposed $600,000 McMicking Point outfall.

And after the outfall is built, the studies may show that it should be abandoned.

Consultants for the outfall will be Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co., the committee was told.

The figures were presented Thursday to a special committee concerned with monitoring the proposed 600-foot outfall into Enterprise Channel, and caused at least one committee member some concern.

"When I went to engineering school a 10 per cent charge to guess costs and impact could lose you your job," noted provincial health ministry representative Gerry Duffield. "Here you are talking about 100 per cent."

"And," put in Sooke director Charles Perkins, "at the end of three years the study may result in the Pollution Control Branch saying 'shut her down.'"

"This is the highest possible cost I am presenting, and it's not cost estimates, it's a little different," commented Dr. Derek Ellis of the University of Victoria's biology department who will be co-ordinating the studies.

Ellis agreed with fisheries department representative Vaughan Thomas that much of the material which would come out of the study would provide answers to questions being asked at other outfall sites. He felt that about 50 per cent of the cost would be exclusively of benefit to McMicking. He promised to present figures to the public works committee showing how much of the study costs would be inevitable for construction purposes, and which parts of the study would have a value which could be offset against general information on Victoria area sewers. The balance, he said would be directly chargable to the McMicking project.

Cost of the first year of studies he estimated at $245,000, and that monitoring program would provide a basis for the next two years of studies which would follow installation of the sewer.

It was decided to get the breakdown of apportionment of costs, and meanwhile to pass Ellis' proposal to the Pollution Control Branch for comment.

Ellis said he needs to know what contaminants are present in the sewage being put into the ocean off Oak Bay. Most of the flow from Oak Bay sewers, he said, was storm water, which could be loaded with insecticides, pesticides and lead from highway runoff. Until the present time the pollution control branch has not shown much interest in storm water runoff, but Ellis felt the attitude was changing and information would be needed.

On previous occasions, Ellis said, he had not been in on the start of a program. This time he had the opportunity to put together information with which to answer criticisms if the decision was to proceed with the project after that information was in.

Perkins suggested that priority be given to tidal and current studies to see if sewage put out into the channel would stay off local beaches, but Ellis said such a concept would put the project back some 12 months since the scientific information would also be needed before construction could start.

Ellis agreed that his studies would be more comprehensive than any done previously but said that demands had increased along with the ability to do more sophisticated work.

"The public concerns have been very vociferously expressed, and I am sure there are going to be more concerns expressed over the next few years," Ellis said. "I have made my recommendations in the light of the concerns at Esquimalt Lagoon because I feel the board should have a comprehensive assessment to meet criticisms which have been levelled at outfalls in the area."

Duffield said it was impossible to prove that something would not do any harm. "There has not been enough money printed to allay the fears although the concerns are really more social than scientific."

Duffield contended that much of the material that washes back on to beaches is not contaminated sewage, but plastic material readily identified by the public as sewage, and it will not break down.

There was difficulty decided how much information would be needed in order to get a PCB permit to build the outfall, he said.

"The branch may issue a permit, and then this little noisy minority that is opposed but which is very well organized will go for an appeal which will be granted and then the board will look at it and will uphold the appeal and you are back to square one," he said.

"I don't know how you score in this game because somebody keeps moving the goal posts."

"The number of objectors isn't great. It's just the decibels that seem to get measured."

Television Busy Turning Women into Girls

By WAYNE ROBINS
Washington Post

NEW YORK — The Boob Tube is finally beginning to live up to its name.

While Hollywood has made the remarkable discovery that it's possible to make profitable movies that portray women in more or less realistic, mature roles, television is consumed with turning women into girls.

It started with Farrah Fawcett-Majors on Charlie's Angels and Suzanne Somers on Three's Company. Now, what many in the industry call "the jiggly effect" is reaching epidemic proportions.

It's not the picture itself that jiggles; it's any number of attractive, buxom young women who run through scene after scene wearing as little clothing and revealing as much flesh as possible.

If movies like Julia, The Turning Point and An Unmarried Woman have shown that there is an audience interested in stories about intelligent, self-realized women, TV hasn't received the message.

"Everyone at the networks says 'three girls, that's six tits, let's go,'" said James Komack, producer and creator of Sugar Time, which features three sexy girls trying to make it in show business.

The Ted Knight Show stars the former co-star of the Mary Tyler Moore Show as proprietor of an escort service featuring six gorgeous girls. After seeing the first episode, one critic tried to figure out how the Knight character, Roger Dennis, differed from a pimp. The critic concluded there was no difference.

In a recent episode, the most amply endowed of Knight's charges was in fact arrested for soliciting. She had asked the police officer who entrapped her for $5 for bubble gum. Knight was outraged. "Sergeant! Take a good look at that girl. Do you think she's worth more than $5?"

"Case dismissed!: the sergeant said, tearing up the complaint.

For quanity of girls and leers per minute, the Knight show leads the present pack. But some programs and pilots in production should give Knight's girls stiff competition. Titles that may end up on the home screen next season either as series or TV movies tell you all you need to know about the thrust of television programing.

They include Legs, Scandal Hall, The Cheerleaders, California Coed, The Beach Girls, Wayward Girls, Girls On the Road, Go West, Young Girl, Down On the Beach, Hee Haw Honeys, Coed Fever, Flying High and Centerfold.

There are a number of reasons for the outburst of titillating material on televison, most of it having to do with greed and lack of imagination.

"Networks are notorious copycats," said Barbara Brogliatti, vice president, media, for Tandem and T.A.T. Productions. Tandem and T.A.T. are the companies headed by Norman Lear, who expanded the boundaries of television humor with All in the Family.

"The main ingredient in programing decisons is ratings," Brogliatti said. "If it worked last year, the networks say, 'let's try it again this year.' Whatever the public has chosen vis a vis the ratings, they'll say, 'let's do more like that.'"

Producer Komack agrees. Besides Sugar Time and Roller Girls, Komack is also responsible for Welcome Back, Kotter and Another Day, the latter of which is a pleasant exception to the Barbi doll trend. It features David Groh and Joan Hackett as a somewhat liberated modern couple.

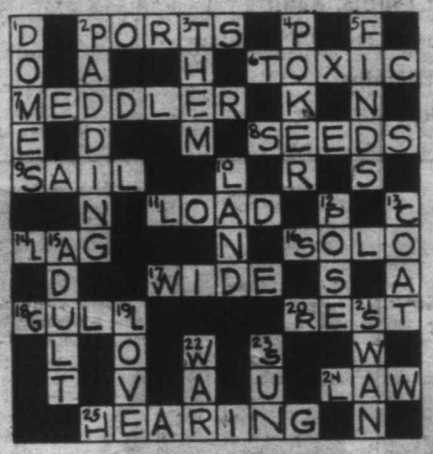

"There's not a conscience or sense of social development in network programing," Komack said. "Nor does there have to be. They're not panderers or purveyors of filth or sex. They sell what the audience will buy. If the audience won't buy three girls on a beach there's no reason to do it."

The obvious success of shows such as Three's Company and Love Boat — in addition to Charlie's Angels — is not the only explanation for the boom in "jiggly" programing. One reason for the glut, ironically, is the aftereffect of "the family hour," a programing concept that sought to promote wholesome fare from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. (The family hour was ruled unconstitutional in a 1976 federal court decision.)

"The family hour took the heat off the later hours," said Erik Barnouw, professor emeritus of dramatic art at Columbia University and author of the three-volume A History of Broadcasting in the United States. "The family hour looked like a reform movement in the direction of purity; it allowed words and topics to become more permissive later in the evening."

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

2. PORTS not poets. "The world" is a comprehensive geographical term embracing countries of whose poets a schoolboy has no reason to have heard.
7. MEDDLER not muddler. Aptly, a MEDDLER is just the type of person to push his advice forward. A muddler is hardly a source of would-be advice.
8. SEEDS not needs or weeds. Since needs are essentially requirements, it is inapt to distinguish needs "that require attention." SEEDS is more apt than weeds, since simply to "neglect" (as distinct from to neglect to deal with, say) implies failure to nurture properly. Reeds not favored.
9. SAIL not soil. To "put on more SAIL" is an aptly self-explanatory idea; but, with soil, the clue is unsatisfyingly vague.
11. LOAD not road. Any thought given to the condition of the road is bound up with driving, thus is not a distraction from the job in hand.
14. LAG not nag. LAG is the more reasonable answer, since (in footwear alone) a woman is apt to be less well equipped for an unexpected hike. There is no reason to suppose her to be the type to nag.
18. GULL not bull. A bull on a farm is in no sense surprising; a (supposedly sea-) GULL "should not be found too surprising." Also, the phrase "on farm land" (considering terrain in broad terms) suits GULL better.
20. REST not best. It would contrast with the REST without being compared specifically with the best.
24. LAW not saw. The clue's specifying "quite inadvertently," while lending aptness to "LAW," is hardly required for saw. In any case, the breaking of a saw may not be important. Jaw is not apt.
25. HEARING not bearing. Poor bearing is not in itself an invalidating condition.

CLUES DOWN

1. DOMES not homes. The clue assumes that "these" are characteristically stately (some more than others); however, not all homes have any pretensions to architectural dignity.
2. PADDING not pudding. PADDING can be light, spongy, etc., or a more solid substance might sometimes be more appropriate. In a pudding, a light texture is positively important, rather than "usually suitable."
3. THEM not they. In certain contexts, "THEM and us" is a distinction that is made. "They" is less aptly opposed to "us" (if anything, it's the opposite of "we").
4. POKER not power. Aptly, one only "wrests" a POKER away from a man who would use it as a harmful weapon. In a political coup, the man from who power is wrested is not necessarily harmful, so as to be rendered harmless.
5. FINDS not minds. FINDS are relevant to "certain sciences" (e.g., Egyptology, archaeology, etc.) whereas great minds are of much more universal influence.
10. LAND not sand. The point is that the causeway is LAND (as opposed to what had apparently been sea) whether of sand or not.
12. POSE not nose. The sitter can feel the POSE, but may not be able to see the nose in the unfinished painting.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Linda Fools Cynics

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Linda Phillips-Bob Anderson wedding recently on "Days of Our Lives" fooled cynical fans. The skeptics would have given even money that loose Linda (played by Margaret Mason), a beauty who tends to sleep around with Mickey, Tommy, and others, would never get to the altar.

It was close, but not because of Linda's proclivities. The bridegroom suffers from occasional dizzy spells, meaning trouble ahead. However, Anderson recovered in time for the nuptials.

The new Mrs. Anderson has grand plans — a French provincial house on a hill and a formal garden, with soft warm colors for the decor. Her daughter Melissa could use a man around, and Mom can bask in status and security. She has pulled it off after years of near-misses.

It won't be all sugar and caviar since daughter-in-law Mary Anderson finds it difficult to accept Dad's choice, and worries about losing her place.

Then there's husband's physical problems . . . those dizzy spells are not going to disappear, so Linda had better enjoy the good times.

Rivaling Dr. Laura Horton (Rosemary Forsyth) in looks, blonde, handsome Margaret Mason, with Slovak blood in her veins, is not used to Linda winning rounds. As she says, "It's always been a love-hate relationship between Linda and viewers. I'm the misunderstood bad lady."

Margaret sees Linda as a well-meaning troublemaker who wants to help others, only to see her efforts boomerang. In a bind, Linda thinks of herself first, which is normal, and she usually pays the price.

Married to writer Nick Alexander, Margaret revels in the security of a steady job. She remembers the late '60s in L.A., working on the side while making the rounds for TV parts, earining roles on "Chrysler Theatre," "Burke's Law," and "Return to Peyton Place." During one highly stressful 12-month period, Margaret battled pneumonia, suffered a heart attack and faced a cancer scare. But you'd never guess it watching Linda as "Days" latest bride, a loser on a winning streak.

PLOT PORTENS: Newcomer Casey Reed, the lady doctor, wastes no time making her presence felt on "The Young and the Restless," Dr. Reed put the old fire back into the severely depressed Kay Chancellor, making her more determined than ever to hold on to Derek Thurston, and she could develop into a playmate for Snapper. Liz can't forget that kiss by the widowed Stuart Brooks, and housewife Linda Larkin watches her marriage go downhill.

Who killed Larry Atwood? That continues to be the loaded question on "Days of Our Lives." Jeri is the main suspect so far, but she's too obvious. Doug's impotence will continue until he stops punishing himself, according to Laura. Leukemia victim Margo gets about, thanks to a temporary remission.

Watch for startling, unexpected events in the Cal-Rick-Michael love triangle on "Love of Life" as things come to a boil.

Rae is still managing to disrupt Jill and Frank's private life in "Ryan's Hope." After sleeping in the park, Delia encounters a pimp who seems to have plans for the runaway.

Brad confronts Cathy, telling his side of the Lana story and Cathy decides not to go to the police in "One Life to Live." Luke finally catches up with his wife Becky and trouble can't be far behind.

On "Edge of Night," Denise frames Carol. Kevin finds out about Raven's pregnancy and leaves. Raven then proceeds to make matters worse by lying to anyone who will listen.

Christina is arrested as the prime suspect for the murder of David Thornton on "All My Children." Phoebe and Brooke reach a standoff in their mutual blackmail charges.

On "High Hopes," Jessie's unexpected visit to her Aunt Paula's home has many repercussions, and Michael is worried about being the brunt of gossip. Evelyn and Walter aren't hitting it off either.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Don Stewart (he's lawyer Mike Bauer in "Guiding Light") is continuing his nightclub work in and around the New York area — mostly in New Jersey and Pennsylvania — while appearing in the popular soap. When he has more time, he means to travel to other parts of the country with his entertaining act. . . Roxanne Gregory (Cal Latimer in "Love of Life") is also breaking into the singing field. She recently tried out her act at a small club in New York City called The Ballroom. . . Remember Peggy Cass, the raspy voiced panelist of many a game show? Well, she's joining "The Doctors" in the role of Sweeney, a tart-tongued clinic receptionist at Madison's Hope Memorial Hospital.

For the record, this isn't Peggy's first foray into the world of soaps. Early in her career, she appeared briefly in "Search for Tomorrow". . . Speaking of "Search," the show is going to take actors John James (Tom Bergman) and Lisa Buck (Kylie Halliday) to Washington, D.C., for some outdoor location shooting. The couple's scenes will be played in a Washington park where the cherry blossoms are in bloom. . . On a recent segment of "The Young and the Restless," Linda Lakin (played by the lovely Susan Walker) was talking to Greg Foster (played by Wings Hauser) and the writers gave her a very good speech about the role of women in today's business world.

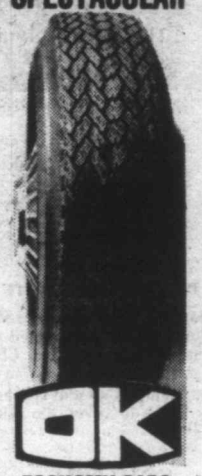

FEUDIN' AND FUNNIN'. On May 16, Richard Dawson's "Family Feud" welcomes two teams from current soap operas as the contestants on the popular daytime show. The "All My Children" team consists of Hugh Franklin, Ruth Warrick, Francesca James, Kathleen Noone, and Richard Van Vleet. They will face a team from "One Life to Live," consisting of Kathy Glass, Lee Patterson, Erica Slezak, Michael Storm, and Jennifer Harmon. The winners of this meet will then play the "Ryan's Hope" team.

LINDA PHILLIPS, played by Margaret Mason, surprised everyone on — Days of Our Lives — by actually getting married. As lawyer Mike Bauer on — The Guiding Light, — Don Stewart supplements his brief cases with nightclub work.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Mrs. S. C. Balinhard of Vancouver asks how she could find a book called "I went to Arnhem" by Mathew Hamilton.

Some reader might possibly oblige but the procedure is to have any good used bookstore search it for you. Either he will be able to advise you of the probable price in advance or you can tell him how much you are prepared to pay. Either way you are not giving him a blank cheque. He would then advertise in one of the book search journals through which you can find virtually everything. Searching for specific books is a very important part of the used bookseller's trade, accounting in some operations for possibly half his total volume.

Miss Sue MacKenzie of 1537 Main Street E., Hamilton, Ont., is president of the first Canadian Chapter of Miniature Enthusiasts who are avid doll collectors and meet once a month to make miniature doll house items. Members range in age from 22 to 75 and they also have a kids' club. This sounds like a very good idea and doll collector clubs in other parts of the country might like to contact Miss MacKenzie for more information with a view to starting other chapters.

A baffling enquiry from Mrs. Wallis of Sechelt who owns cups and saucers bearing the standard R.S. Prussia trademark but surrounded by the words "Poland China"—"Made in German Poland." I would love an explanation if anyone has it. Since the words are in English the pieces must have been made for export to the English-speaking market — but when Germany occupied Poland they were at war with the West and hardly likely to be exporting chinaware. It does not make sense, but there must be a simple answer somewhere.

Mrs. Chester of Burnaby has a vase marked Royal Worcester, England.

That would place it between 1891 and 1915, but if you look closely you can date it more accurately than that. Above the "R" in Royal you will see one or more dots. Count them and add on to 1891 and you will get the exact year the piece was made. Royal Worcester is highly valued and vases usually go for anything from about $100 to $500.

R. Noland of London says "I know what a pontil mark is, but what is a pontil?"

The pontil mark is the scar left on the bottom of a piece of hand-made glassware by the pontil rod — an iron rod used by the glassmaker to handle the piece with when it is hot. Don't ever miss the opportunity to watch a glassmaker in action — if only as a study in sheer concentration. He is usually oblivious to everything except the demands of that sensitive blob of material whose malleability changes subtly with every degree in temperature.

When it is hot, glass has the consistency of taffy and can be shaped or blown as desired — but it is much too hot to handle. Hence the pontil, which simply sticks to the taffy/glass and is broken off when cool.

Len Smith of Willowdale has an ancient violin marked Joseph Guarnerius, 1755 — could it be an original?

Not likely. The original Guarnerius was named Giuseppi rather than Joseph and he died in 1744. Violins bearing that label (plus thousands of "genuine" Stradivariuses) were sold through Sears catalogues for $10 each from 1902 onwards.

Mrs. Taft of St.Catherines has a dish with the word "depose" on the bottom — what does this mean?

It suggests that the dish is of French origin or possibly the design was registered in France. Translated it means "copyrighted."

Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, RR #1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K0.

Mercer's New Play

Edward Fox and Denholm Elliott star in David Mercer's Shooting the Chandelier, a provocative new drama set toward the end of the Second World War, just as the Czech people paused in limbo between the excesses of Nazism and the prospect of socialism. The play airs on Great Performances Wednesday, May 10, at 9 p.m. (encored Sunday, May 14, at 3 p.m.) on Channel 9.

Somewhere in the Czech countryside, a young girl (Felicity Dean), the last survivor of her wealthy family, emerges from a bomb shelter to find that the war finally has passed her home. At the same time, further down the road, Lt. Semyon Rusakov (Elliott) struggles out of a ditch when Col. Nikolai Schotkin (Fox) pulls up in his jeep. Before the war, Rusakov was Shotkin's history professor.

The old teacher is a pitiful coward and idealist seemingly incapable of any affirmative action based on his own convict'ons. His former pupil, a brutal officer in the secret police.

Four-Bedroom Brick Traditional

Here's an interesting traditional design in brick veneer which is ideally suited to the wide lot with a rear view. The four bedrooms and a full basement make it a perfect choice for the larger or growing family which requires abundant space, combined with good formal design.

The main entry, through a brick and wrought-iron courtyard, is weather-sheltered and double-doored. The compact but open entrance foyer leads naturally forward and down two risers to the sunken living room, which features a large free-standing double fireplace and sliding glass doors to the rear patio. The double fireplace is in a back-to-back configuration, the other side facing the large and open family room.

The well-planned U-shaped kitchen is centrally positioned between the family room, for casual meals, and the dining room for more formal entertaining.

All four bedrooms are positioned around the master bath and all have good exposure for natural lighting and ample closet storage. The master bedroom has a full walk-in closet and a three-piece ensuite with tub, which is accessible via pocket door.

The full basement contains abundant space for the future development of additional bedrooms, family room and/or recreation room. It has roughed-in plumbing for a convenience bathroom, and a third fireplace, also in roughed-in form. A large utility room contains the side-by-side washer, dryer and laundry tub.

A double fully-enclosed garage, with adequate space for the development of a workbench and sculptured overhead doors, completes the convenience features of this well-planned traditional design.

Plans for design No. 76-1774 may be purchased either by single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan packag, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method that you choose, please include $4 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 5% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs, Series No. 36, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1R2.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Will ABC Television ever reshow the entire series of "Roots?" I missed several episodes when it originally ran and would like to see them as well as the whole series. — B.D.S., Victoria, B.C.

A. ABC indicated it has not set "Roots" for a repeat this season. However, the network people said there is an excellent chance the series will be aired again, probably just before the start of the next season. I would suggest you check your local listings somewhere around late August or early September.

Q. Could you please tell me why they took "Logan's Run" off the air? — K.N., Niles, Ohio.

A. Whenever a show suddenly disappears from the tube, you can be sure the reason is ratings. "Logan's Run" was cancelled because of a dismal showing in the rating game.

Q. Please settle a bet I have with a friend. How much does Rerun on "What's Happening" weigh? I say well over 300 pounds, but my friend says he probably weighs 250 pounds. — N.W., Warren, Ohio.

A. You're both wrong. Fred Berry, who plays Rerun and admits to being a junk food addict, says he's only 200 pounds.

Q. I have an unusual request. I am interested in buying a Fonzie poster. I have looked high and low and I haven't had any luck. Could you help me? — R.Z., Canonsburg, Pa.

A. I suggest you write to the distributors of the poster, Dargis Associates, Inc., 9520 Gerwig Lane, Columbia, Md. 21045.

Q. I recently saw reruns of the old "Burns and Allen Show" and wondered whatever happened to Gracie Allen. — T.H., Scottsdale, Ariz.

A. Gracie Allen died of a heart attack in 1964.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

"Here's what you get for doing the Trudeau review," said my editor innocently: "Joe." And sure enough, the brown paper bundle on my doorstep turned out to be Joe Clark: A Portrait, by David L. Humphreys.

Joe Clark is published by the Ottawa firm of Deneau and Greenberg. This being a new one on me, I called Mr. Deneau to make delicate enquiries into his politics. He turned out to be a serious publisher, with half a dozen titles to his credit since getting off the ground with Six Days in the Life of the Queen (70,000 copies sold).

"I'm certainly not a Conservative," he assured me, "and Joe never read the book until after it was printed. It is not an official biography in any way. Rather," said Deneau, "it's a grass roots story of his life. The paparazzi won't like it."

This last remark proved disconcerting, as I'd found I didn't much like it myself. Partly because Joe Clark: A Portrait is dull, and partly because it's badly written and edited, if indeed it was edited at all.

Lest anyone accuse your conscientious reviewer of politically-motivated hyperbole, I hasten to supply a stunning example of what can happen when a writer puts his foot in it and his editor fails to notice. Scene: Joe Clark and 16 supporters are conferring on Otober 19, 1975. Their purpose is to determine Clark's "credibility" as a candidate for leadership of the Conservative Party, and to assess their fund-raising prospects by region. The Quebec contingent is disturbed when Clark declines to declare himself a definite candidate until Peter Lougheed's federal intentions, if any, are known. Humphreys quotes Clark: "I didn't want to say I was in until I was sure we had a chance of being in. I recognized the Quebec position. They could neither organize nor raise funds for a candidate who was only a possibility."

Humphreys then adds, in what surely qualifies as the Gaffe of the Year: "Outside in the washroom, he felt a twinge of self-doubt. Turning to Cooper as they stood at the urinals, Clark said, 'You know, George, it's a long shot.'"

There's always the possibility, of course, that Humphreys' ingenuousness is only feigned. Another example occurs when Clark attends a British Conservative conference in Blackpool and is strongly impressed by the views of Lord Eccles, the minister for the arts. "If I ask myself why the British people are not now doing their best," Humphreys quotes Eccles as saying, "the answer must be that it is because their imagination and spirit have been starved." Two pages later Humphreys launches into a description of Joe Clark on the town, in London's West End: "(He) appeared to be making a conscious effort to catch up on what was new in the arts."

CLARK . . . some inadvertent hilarity

If Humphreys were striving to make the point that Clark is a man of scant imagination, he could hardly have done a better job. It is much the same with his comments on the Clarkian struggle to become bilingual. "Mr. Clark is bilingual — mostly in English," Humphreys quotes a Montreal paper as saying, and "the improvement (in Clark's French, after his umpteenth immersion course) . . . was not enough to avoid confusion at the barbershop just before he returned to Canada. He asked for a trim but got a crew cut."

How, you may well ask, with all this inadvertent hilarity going for it, is Humphreys' book dull? The answer is that too many of its pages are devoted to painfully detailed campaign history; in fact, here Joe Clark may conceivably be useful as a handbook on what not to do. And ultimately, there is the problem of Joe Clark himself.

Clark does have his moments in this book, and it is clear that he has a gift for friendship and a sincere desire to rescue Canada from "Big Government" and the evils of one-party rule. But it is also clear that he lacks much intellectual vigor of his own. "His contribution to strategy was much more important than his policy work," Humphreys quotes Lougheed as saying, after Clark's involvement in the Alberta election of 1967. And, "I never considered Clark a serious or committed student — attending university appeared merely as one of several devices to advance his political ambitions," states a former professor in what seems a fair assessment.

Then there were his supporters' well-meaning efforts to "strengthen (Clark's) public image." After compiling a list of his hobbies and interests ("He likes violent movies; He's a Coke addict," etc.), they decided to forget the whole thing.

Oscar Wilde: The Fool Becomes Wise

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

Many of Oscar Wilde's famous aphorisms are meant to be taken in two ways: as jest and as serious statement. Playing on the ambiguous margins between truth and falsehood, between the natural and the artificial, he turned the light and witty saying into a statement filled with meaning for those who knew how to listen. For the book I am reviewing, Ripe was the Drowsy Hour, the appropriate Wilde phrase would be: "The Importance of Being Earnest". For, as J.E. Chamberlin sets out to demonstrate, Wilde mostly meant what he said, and what he said added up to a serious and plausible view of life and how to deal with it.

In this effort Chamberlin (who has already written a good book on white attitudes to North American Indians — The Harrowing of Eden) is not exactly a pioneer. Near the beginning of his book he somewhat oddly talks of Wilde as — in his period — "a celebrated, then reviled, and finally neglected figure." At most, that is a third-truth.

Wilde was certainly reviled; as a term of insult the word "Oscar" survived among the drinking classes of England — who needless to say had no idea of what he wrote — until at least the Second World War. But Wilde never ceased to be celebrated, in one way or another, and his influence, though it waned and waxed, has never been absent from English literature. His purpler prose has been a passing temptation to many young writers, and on a more serious level the importance of his critical insights has been acknowledged by critics ranging from the social bias, in George Orwell, to the aesthetic bias, in Northrop Frye and Herbert Read.

As for neglect, the flow of books about Wilde began very shortly after his death, and apart from a shelf of biographies, not a decade has passed without some young writer cutting his critical teeth on yet another book to show how seriously Wilde must be taken. I did it myself 30 years ago in The Paradox of Oscar Wilde, which attempted to make sense out of the apparent contradictions in Wilde's life and ideas, and Chamberlin is the latest in the succession.

What he sets out to do is place Wilde in the context of his era; to relate his ideas and actions to the general flow of thought in the later 19th and early 20th centuries. "There is something mutual about Oscar and his age," says Chamberlin, "and if we would understand one we must to some extent understand both." Again, there is nothing new about this, for Wilde himself remarked in De Profundis that he stood in a symbolic relationship to his age, and his position within the literary world of his time has been delineated by earlier writers — for example by Rdouard Roditi in his brilliant Oscar Wilde (1947) — while more than 60 years ago in The Eighteen Nineties (1913), Holbrook Jackson showed how closely the artistic, intellectual and political currents of Wilde's period intermeshed.

What Chamberlin has really done is to remove Wilde at least partially from his customary setting of the decadent Nineties, and to show how as one of the most informed and cosmopolitan minds of his time, he related to the wider Victorian currents of thought, both English and continental European. It is a more earnest Wilde than we are accustomed to who emerges. "Dogged" and "serious" are words that Chamberlin likes to apply to him, and though at first sight they appear strange in this context, we realize quickly their appropriateness to much that Wilde wrote and their relevance to the genuine and self-imposed tragedy in which his career foundered. Wilde made an extreme application of Blake's dictum, "if the fool would persist in his folly, he would become wise." For in the end, whether we look at him as a critic of the arts or of life, it is more often the wisdom of Wilde rather than his silliness that seems to survive.

RIPE WAS THE DROWSY HOUR: The Age of Oscar Wilde, by J. E. Chamberlin. McGraw-Hill Ryerson, $11.50.

What Wilde in fact did — and it is the virtue of Chamberlin's book that he brings this out more clearly than his predecessors — was to focus and then give symbolic expression to currents of thought that developed quite early in the century and had given the arts a crucial importance — almost a philosophic importance — because only through them could the difficulties about the nature of truth, the nature of beauty, the nature of goodness which plagued the Victorians appear to be resolved. For in art alone could there be any going beyond good and evil that would not result in moral nihilism, of which Wilde gave an example when he confused the categories and attempted to live his life as a work of art.

Chamberlin shows how in Wilde's work the currents of criticism that were developing in England, France and Germany during the 19th century were synthesized in a coherent aesthetic doctrine; how in his theories about the nature of artifice and the autonomy of artistic expression much that we have not previously understood about movements like impressionism were illumined. A whole doctrine of the relationship between art and actuality is summed up in Wild's phrase: "It is only shallow people who do not judge by appearances."

The point that Wilde reached (as did so many of his contemporaries without expressing it so well) is exemplified in the title of his famous essay, "The Truth of Masks" and in his discovery of an ideal form of expression in the theatre, where life is absorbed into art. But by the very act of bringing such tendencies into focus he prepared the master insights for what we now regard as the modern movement. It would indeed be instructive if the next young man who writes on Wilde were to concentrate not on the past he brought into focus, but on the future that was dominated by figures like Pound and Proust, Picasso and Bracque, Satie and Diaghilev, who thoroughly understood the importance of Oscar's most earnest maxim: "Art never expresses anything but itself."

Untangling the Web of Kennedy Murder

By JULIAN REID

In the shadowy world of espionage and covert intelligence operations, the word "legend" signifies an obfuscatory cover-story deliberately perpetrated to conceal the facts regarding a clandestine agent and his mission.

Viewed in this light, Edward Jay Epstein's Legend: The Secret World of Lee Harvey Oswald can be regarded as an exercise in counter-intelligence — a systematic attempt to break through the shell of half-truths and outright falsehoods beneath which the real facts about the assassination of John F. Kennedy have hitherto been concealed. The result is an important and deeply disturbing study, which appears to bring us about as close to the elusive truth of this disputed subject as we are likely to get in the forseeable future.

For make no mistake about it — Legend is not yet another of those unsavoury exercises in paranoia which seek to rationalize the Kennedy assassination in terms of assorted fear-engendered prejudices and preconceptions. Such volumes, like the official Warren Commission report itself, serve only to further obscure the truth, rather than illuminate it.

In welcome contrast to their perpetrators, Epstein is a meticulously objective investigator — one who rigorously refrains from sensationalism, let alone from drawing any unsubstantiated conclusions from the quantities of fresh evidence he has amassed.

New Interviews

This new evidence is derived from various sources. To begin with, there are some 400 interviews which Epstein conducted, more than 80 of them with acquaintances and former colleagues of Oswald who for one reason or another were passed over by the original Warren Commission investigators.

But, more significantly, there are also some 10,000 pages of previously classified documents from the files of the CIA, the FBI, and other official sources, all released to Epstein under the provisions of the post-Watergate Freedom of Information Act. Many of these documents, as it happens, were deliberately withheld from the Warren Commission by the agencies involved, which were then engaged in a systematic cover-up of their own — a deliberate attempt to conceal their own mishandling of Oswald prior to the assassination, not to mention various questionable aspects of their subsequent investigations of his case.

On its own terms, then, this book is dynamite — the kind of meticulously documented expose that sends tremors through governmental offices and causes bureaucratic heads to topple. But for the ordinary reader, Epstein's conscientious refusal to speculate may prove somewhat frustrating. Not only does it make for rather unexciting reading, but it also demands a well-honed faculty for reading between the lines while conscientiously refraining from jumping to unwarranted conclusions.

To be sure, there is genuine excitement — very much akin to that found in a John Le Carre novel — in the Prologue and Epilogue, which deal with the defection of a Soviet KGB officer, Yuri Ivanovich Nosenko, to the U.S. just two months after the Kennedy assassination. By a remarkably convenient coincidence, Nosenko claimed, he just happened to be the official in charge of Oswald's KGB file, and thus in the perfect position to clear his former country of any suspicion that Oswald might have been a Soviet agent.

Epstein's account, however, leaves little room for doubt that Nosenko was (and presumably still is) a double-agent, dispatched post-haste by the KGB to achieve precisely this end. Nevertheless, despite almost overwhelming evidence to this effect, the CIA opted to accept Nosenko's dubious testimony — and then joined forces with the FBI in a systematic cover-up of their own handling of his case.

As a result, both agencies committed themselves to a more or less unqualified acceptance of everything that Nosenko cared to tell them; and, indeed, he is now one of the CIA's leading consultants on Soviet affairs. Thus a characteristically bureaucratic series of self-protective maneuvres have set of a continuing chain-reaction of misinformation, which tends to discolor and discredit all subsequent CIA and FBI activities in this area.

But however much of a threat to American security the Nosenko episode may represent, it is of only peripheral significance to Epstein's central concern — that of determining just what it was about Oswald that Nosenko's dissimulations were intended to cover up. So the bulk of his book is devoted to a rather tedious reconstruction of all Oswald's movements and activities between 1957, when he was in Japan with the U.S. Marines, serving as a radar-controller at the Atsugi air-base, and November 22, 1963, when he fired three fateful bullets from a window of the Dallas school-textbook depository.

Epstein himself, presumably, has drawn various conclusions from the host of mostly circumstantial evidence that he has marshalled; but he resolutely refrains from stating any of them explicitly. Still, after a careful reading, the following implications seem hard to escape:

■ When Oswald defected to the U.S.S.R. in 1959, he passed on to the Soviets a great deal of secret information relating to the U-2 spy-plane overflights, which he had picked up during his service at Atsugi. This information may have been instrumental in enabling them to shoot down Francis Gary Powers' U-2 on May Day, 1960.

■ Before Oswald redefected back to the U.S. in 1962, he was almost certainly recruited by the KGB as an undercover agent. It was this embarrassing fact, presumably, that Nosenko was subsequently dispatched to the U.S. to conceal.

■ After his return to the U.S., however, the increasingly unstable Oswald became disillusioned with the Soviet Union, which he had come to regard as insufficiently "revolutionary," and transferred his loyalties to Fidel Castro's Cuba. By late 1963, he was presumably more or less estranged from the KGB. There is no reason whatsoever to suppose that the Soviets had anything to do with his decision to assassinate Kennedy.

■ Instead, Oswald himself conceived the idea of shooting the president, and was the only person directly involved in the assassination. Despite the proliferation of theories to the contrary, he had no active confederates.

While none of these statements can be regarded as conclusively proven, all of them are more or less solidly substantiated by Epstein's evidence — to the point where practically any jury would accept them as established beyond all reasonable doubt.

There remains, however, one additional and much more shocking implication of Epstein's reconstruction, which is consistent with all the available evidence but by no means demonstrably proven by it. It is this:

■ In assassinating Kennedy, Oswald may have had the tacit or active backing of the Cuban intelligence agency, the DGI.

Briefly, the relevant considerations are as follows: To begin with, Epstein cites documents to establish that, at the time of the Kennedy assassination, the CIA was negotiating with Dr. Rolando Cubella, a minister without portfolio in Castro's cabinet, to actively back him — even to the point of providing the requisite weapons — in a proposed plot to assassinate Castro. Since Cubella was very likely a double-agent, an agent provocateur who was in fact loyal to Castro, it seems reasonable to suppose that the DGI was aware of these negotiations — and, indeed, may well have been a surreptitious partner in them.

The medium the CIA utilized to signal official U.S. complicity in Cubella's alleged plot was a paragraph inserted into one of Kennedy's speeches. This speech was broadcast just four days before the assassination — thereby quite possibly indicating to the DGI that the president was personally inplicated in the CIA's scheme (although in fact there is no reason to believe that he was).

And in this connection, it should be recalled that, just two months previously, Castro himself had spoken out in a widely-reported newspaper interview against the dangers of the U.S. involving itself in "aiding terrorist plans to eliminate Cuban leaders." If they make the mistake of doing so, he threatened, Cuba in its turn was "prepared to answer in kind."

So did the DGI take a leaf from the CIA's book, and opt for a pre-emptive strike against the U.S. president? Did they select as their agent Lee Harvey Oswald, that conveniently paranoid fanatic who had perhaps been schooled in espionage by the KGB, who had recently taken to styling himself "a professional revolutionary" — and who just a month earlier had providentially presented himself at the Cuban embassy in Mexico City, insisting on volunteering his services to the Cuban cause?

Castro Testimony

"Someone ought to shoot that President Kennedy!" Oswald exclaimed then, according to the subsequent testimony of Fidel Castro himself. "Maybe I'll try to do it!"

And do it he did, as all the world knows.

But was he acting at the Cubans' behest, or purely out of his own "revolutionary" initiative? In retrospect, both possibilities seem more or less equally plausible. And both are left equally open by Epstein's provocative reconstruction.

Perhaps we shall never know the final truth.

But in any case, Epstein's book leaves little doubt that, whether directly or indirectly, the ultimate responsibility for Kennedy's assassination may be laid at the feet of world's so-called "intelligence agencies," and the solidly paranoiac atmosphere in which they thrive. Whether or not Oswald was actually recruited by Cuba's DGI, or whether he was a free-lance fanatic acting of his own bat, it was in any case the combined efforts of the CIA, the FBI, and the KGB which created and maintained the psychic climate that made his act possible — perhaps even inevitable.

One way or another, it was they who created the fateful "legend" of Oswald and they who, in the wake of the assassination, promptly moved to cover up all traces of their involvement in the affair. But dissimulate as they may, they cannot wash their hands of the blood of John Fitzgerald Kennedy — nor that of his fellow martyr to their machinations, Lee Harvey Oswald.

Mathematical Hors d'Oeuvres

Advocates of recycling might well take a leaf or two from the collected works of Isaac Asimov. For the "Good Doctor," as his innumerable admirers are wont to call him, is by any standards a recyclist par excellence.

Take, for instance, his monthly science column in The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction. Doubleday regularly recycles these essays, 17 at a shot, into hardcover collections, which are subsequently re-recycled into mass-market paperbacks.

But meanwhile, by some inexplicable lapse, the hardcover editions of the first five have been permitted to slip out of print. So Asimov has cannily decided to re-re-recycle them, again 17 at a shot, in a series of spanking new volumes, updated and regrouped by topic.

The first three such re-collections were Asimov on Astronomy, Asimov on Chemistry and Asimov on Physics — and now comes Asimov on Numbers, a worthy companion. For, as usual, these lucid yet delightfully unassuming pieces are well worth not just reading, but re-reading and re-re-reading — and not only by those who, like the Good Doctor himself, are "unrequitedly in love" with mathematics and large numbers, but also by those numerical dunderheads who could never tell a Mersenne Number from a Fibonacci Series if we didn't have the Admirable Asimov around to explain the difference!

Here, then, is a tantalizing hors d'oeuvre of mathematical delectations and tantalizing tidbits of numerical information, ranging from the diameter of the observable universe (13 billion light-years), through the total number of different bridge games possible (54 octillion) to the name of the world's largest fresh-water island (Marajo, in the Amazon). Left-overs, perhaps; but served up with real zest and an infectious appetite.

Recycled or not, Isaac Asimov is a literary phenomenon — one of the ablest and most consistently entertaining educators of our time. — J.R.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Britain's revisionist historian Produces stunning biography of Rommel

David Irving enrolled in the University of London (England) with the intention of becoming an academic historian. He failed, and became so paranoiac about it that he developed a burning hatred against his professors. In revenge, he decided to become a writer because, he recently confided to a newspaper interviewer, "I want to see those academics with the degree that I never got with egg on their faces."

Irving's hatred of academe soon extended to cover the entire British Establishment, and he set himself the seemingly ridiculous task of singlehandedly rewriting the history of the Second World War.

In his first book, The Destruction of Dresden, published in 1963 when he was 23, he claimed to have revealed for the first time the full horror of the allied bombings of that city. A book on the wartime death of Polish leader General Sikorski came next. This was linked with a play by Germany's Rolf Hochhuth on the same theme which implicated Churchill in the fatal air crash. Irving barely escaped legal consequences.

Undeterred, he wrote The Destruction of Convoy PQ 17, an unorthodox account of one of the Russian convoys. This resulted in a libel case which cost Irving $76,000 in damages alone — and fed his hatred of the Establishment.

Churchill Next

Other books followed: The German Atomic Bomb, The Rise and Fall of the Luftwaffe, and Hitler's War, in which he claimed that Hitler did not know about the Nazi pogrom to exterminate the Jews. In his spare time, he translated the memoirs of Field Marshal Keitel and of General Reinhard Gehlen. In the works is a book on Churchill which, I'm told, will claim, among other things, that he avoided paying taxes on the more than $1 million he received from Time-Life for his memoirs after the war.

Meanwhile, we have Irving's biography of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel — The Trail of the Fox, which I will return to in a moment.

It is unusual to discuss an author at the expense of his work; my excuse is that David Irving is a most unusual person. This son of a Royal Navy commander speaks and writes fluently in German, concentrates on German subjects, and is motivated by fanatical hatred of the British Establishment. For a serious British writer this would seem to be a recipe for certain failure.

In fact, this has proved in Irving's case to be the recipe for astonishing success. His books have made him exceedingly wealthy and he lives in ducal style. Even more satisfying is the accolade bestowed on him by The Times of London: "One of Britain's foremost historians."

Irving doesn't sound like thes ICBC policy that employees must use private adjusterrevisionist views have earned him the reputation of being a fascist and his arrogance unremittingly hostile coverage in the British media. And, not surprisingly, the academic community hates his guts and will have nothing to do with him.

His formula for success, for which he has won the grudging respect of even his bitterest enemies, is the sheer volume of his research. The number of original documents, personal diaries and the like that he has unearthed is astounding. For his book on Hitler, for instance, he amassed no less thn 70 feet of original archives material.

This master-researcher's digging for material for his biography of Rommel is, if anything, even more spectacular. This book is based entirely on original documents, most of which no other historian has ever seen. These include, in addition to the unpublished papers and diaries of many senior German officers, the lost Rommel diaries and the Rommel family papers. These last are officially locked away until the twenty-first century but Irving persuaded Rommel's widow to allow him to see them.

Irving has made of this treasure trove one of the most thrilling war books I have ever read. The Trail of the Fox is tremendously impressive, a remarkable tour de force. He has managed to remove Rommel from the hazy world of legend and to present him to us as a fallible human being as capable of making mistakes as the rest of us and, in the process, he somehow manages to add to the man's stature.

Here's the Rommel we have never seen — the frail cadet sporting a monocle; the young lover; the recklessly brave officer of the First World War; the soldier who throughout his career hungered for medals; the publicity-mad general who kept photographers on his staff to photograph him and who enthusiastically restaged whole battles for the cameras of Goebbels' propagandists; the man who cultivated Hitler and rose to military stardom; the man who became the hero of Nazi Germany, the rough, tough, courageous field marshal — who was completely dominated by his wife!

Letters to Wife

Almost half the book is set in North Africa, the scene of the brilliant campaigns that made him world-famous. These have been covered in book after book, notably by Ronald Lewin in The Life and Death of the Afrika Corps, but enormous depth is added to the narrative here by extracts from Rommel's letters to his wife — he wrote to her daily — and his personal diaries.

Rommel had his share of warts: He was vain, constantly seeking glory, and he could be vacillating and blind. And he never did master the art of strategy. But as a tactician and front-line general he had no peer. He was a born desert warrior with the desert dweller's sixth sense of approaching trouble. And, vitally important in a desert terrain devoid of landmarks, he deveoped an uncanny sense of location.

This biography, which is by no means a worshipful portrait, confirms what most of us in the British Eighth Army suspected, that if his army had been wholly German, and if he had had some planes and half as many tanks and guns as we had, and not been bedevilled by an almost complete drying-up of vital gasoline supplies, he would have run rings round Montgomery, who could plan and prepare but who had difficulty in improvising — even though all German messages sent by Enigma code (The Ultra Secret) were made known to him within an hour of their despatch.

From African battlefield holocausts we follow Rommel to Europe as he prepares for the Allied invasion, and to Germany as he daringly clashes with Hitler.

Finally, we attend secret meetings of the anti-Hitler conspirators and then we are present in Rommel's own home as he is told by Hitler's emissary that he must kill himself. His Socratic death ends a gripping story that is a superb character study and a brilliant biographical achievement.

Irving writes well, there's no doubt about that, but his books would not enjoy the success they do had he not received such immense co-operation in Germany. Why are Germans so willing to hand over to him so much unpublished material? The reason, it strikes me, is that he is doing a fine service — for Germany. No German can possibly object to the sympathetic way he is presenting German history to a wide Western audience, so all doors are open to him.

What's Irving's aim? "I'm interested in my long-term image," he told the same newspaper interviewer. "Soon I'm going to stop writing and go into politics, but you need money to do that; hence all this work." As Irving is known to be politically to the right of Enoch Powell (and probably of Genghis Khan) this threat is viewed with alarm in Britain.

My alarm stems from his threat to stop writing. I could no more stop reading The Trail of the Fox than the French could stop Rommel's panzers. For such an outstanding historian to cease writing would be a major tragedy.

Laughing Comes Naturally to Her

By JOHN BARKHAM

Humorists are in short supply these days, and small wonder. There isn't much to laugh about. The comics who stand up on the stage and hurl one-liners at you are not so much humorists as exhumcrists. Nobody can make that charge against Erma Bombeck, whose book, The Grass is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank, sold half-a-million copies in hard covers and had half the women in North America holding their sides. Erma Bombeck is one of their kind — an attractive 50-year-old who has confronted with cracks, wise and otherwise, the domestic crises that periodically beset the best families.

Hers is the humor of situation, mostly Midwest style, for she originally hailed from Dayton, Ohio. Today she writes her books, her thrice-weekly columns for 700 newspapers, and her regular appearances on ABC's Good Morning, America in a spacious adobe house outside Phoenix, Arizona, where the snows of Ohio's yesteryear are but a memory.

Erma Bombeck realizes that she is bucking the stream with her funny writings. "I know humor books are not supposed to sell except to cheer up patients in hospitals, but mine seem to have been an exception," she says cheerfully. Laughing comes naturally to her. She is the kind of woman — pert, petite, pretty — on whose face the only lines are laughlines. "You either laugh at life or cry," is her philosophy. "I just find it impossible to remain in a state of depression."

Her new book, If Life Is a Bowl of Cherries — What Am I Doing in the Pits? (McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $8.95.) — is based on her columns. Domestic problems as subjects are gradually yielding to themes of broader scope, partly because her children are grown and away from home, partly because she herself has changed. To date she has not yet grappled with the feminist movement because she believes it is not yet secure enough to laugh at itself.

"Humor isn't all that easy to write," she confesses. "If you think you can sit in front of your typewriter day in and day out and grind out the stuff, you're wrong. I'm always looking for funny situations, though there are days when I stare at the paper with my mind absolutely blank. But sooner or later it comes, usually off the top of my head." Whatever the source, the results are gratifying. Her readers send her bushels of mail commenting on the contretemps from which she constantly extricates herself.

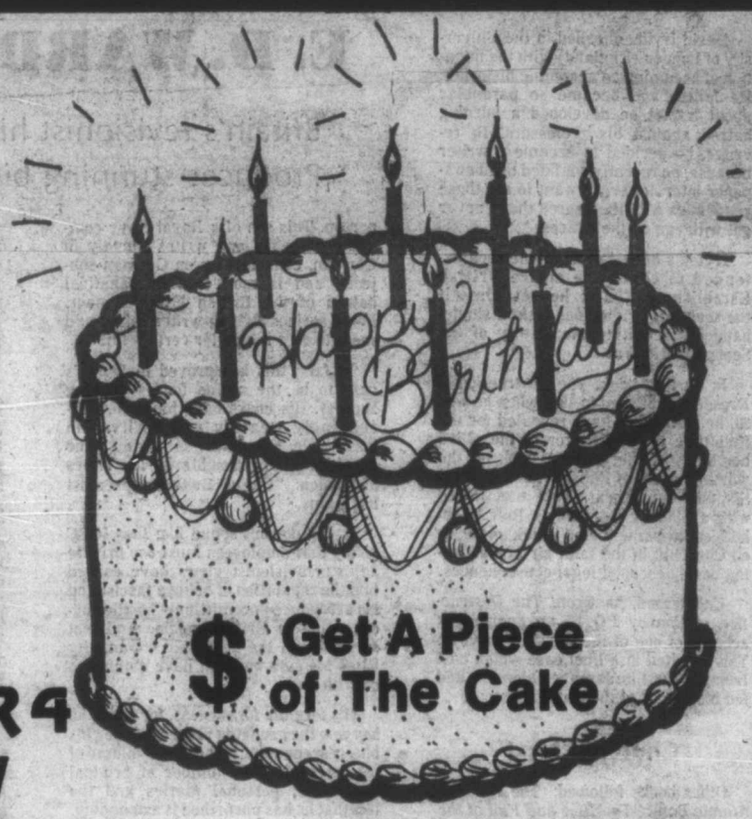

It was Max Beerbohm who remarked that in the long history of mankind no case had ever been recorded of anyone dying of laughing. Erma Bombeck subscribes enthusiastically to that sentiment. "People as a rule are not willing to laugh at themselves, but they enjoy laughing at someone else — and I'm usually the someone else." She dreams of someday writing a play and, when reminded of the high mortality rate on Broadway, points to Neil Simon. Come to think of it, wouldn't it be a matter of national pride if America could produce a female Neil Simon, or, better still, if Neil Simon could someday be likened to a male Erma Bombeck?
